Washington, D. C., March 24.—Speaker Clark, at the direction of the House today named a committee of five to investigate and report on expunging from the congressional record a speech on Texas politics inserted under the leave to print privilege by Representative Davis. Several members complained that the speech was indecent, vituperative and libelous in any publication, but the record.

American Consul at Chihuahua Denies Herrera Army Revolted

Washington, D. C., March 25.—American Consul Letcher at Chihuahua today reported there was no truth in the reported revolt of General Herrera and the Carranza garrison at Chihuahua.

Although General Funston and General Bell on the border have received reports confirming the story of the revolt, which they believe to be true, the dispatch from Consul Letcher, who is on the ground and has headquarters at the place where the revolt was said to have occurred, is taken by officials here as confirming the statements of Carranza officials that no such revolt has occurred.

"Loyal to Carranza."

Consul Letcher's dispatch reported that General Herrera was in command of the de facto troops there and was "loyal to General Carranza."

His report is regarded as removing one of the most menacing features of the Mexican situation.

Reports from the border saying that General Bell had notified General Funston that the report of the Herrera revolt was confirmed, was met by a statement of Secretary Baker that he had not been advised of the confirmation, and that all information reaching him had indicated that Herrera was loyal to Carranza.

Denials of the Herrera revolt and the satisfactory progress of diplomatic negotiations with the defacto government over the proposed protocol to govern the chase of Villa lessened anxiety in official circles regarding the safety of the American expedition

Would Call Guards First.

The problem of meeting any request General Funston might make for reinforcements in event of a rebellion of Carranza's army was under consideration, however. If the American forces were seriously attacked, it was regarded as likely that all available troops from the border would be rushed to the support of the advancing columns and that these troops would be replaced as quickly as possible in order not to leave the border towns unguarded. Only the national guard, it is said, could be relied on to do the work.

Reply from General Carranza to the request that American troops be permitted to use the Mexican northwestern railroad was expected momentarily. Border reports said General Pershing already was using a portion of the line and department officials pointed out as possible that a limited agreement with local Mexican officials had been made. Direct word from the Mexican district where anti-American demonstrations have been unofficially reported are anxiously awaited at the navy department today from the battleship Kentucky on her way to Mexican waters and the gunboat Machias off Tampico

Carranza Massing Men on Border; Forbid Army to Act; Fear Raids

Washington, March 25.—A telegram from D. A. Richardson, Douglas, Ariz., saying Mexican troops were massing across the line from Douglas pointing out that the Columbus massacre could easily be repeated in the Arizona town, and asking for "help before it was too late," was made public today by Senator Ashurst, of Arizona.

Senator Ashurst said he knew Richardson and regarded his authority as authoritative.

"I am giving this telegram for publication," said Senator Ashurst. "I will not even submit it to the Senate, because it would be useless. I am tired of trying to get anything done."

Richardson's telegram follows:

"Mexicon general has 40 pieces or artillery and 3,000 cavalry stationed 10 blocks from center of Douglas. Seven thousand cavalry six miles south of Douglas. We have only 1,800 infantry, 300 cavalry and four pieces of artillery. Our troops stationed two miles east of Douglas. Am reliably informed that it would take one hour for our troops to reach Douglas in case of night attack. Our army forbidden by administration from making active defenses preparations for fear Mexicans might miscontrue such preparations. Mexicans have entrenched against United States side and have barbed wire entaglements. We have no entrenchments. Mexican troops could easily repeat Columbus massacre in Douglas on much larger scale and return to Mexico with small losses. All of these statements can be vertified by our army officers here. Help us if you can before it is too late."

Conflicting reports of the massing of Carranza troops on the border reached here today. American consuls in northern Mexico, under orders of the state department to investigate the troops' movements reported that they found no masing of troops in the northern sections.

Douglas, Ariz., March 4.—Gen. P. Elias Calles, military governor of Sonora, today again denied reports that a large number of Mexican troops have reached Agua Prieta, opposite here from the south. Investigations did not reveal an increased number of troops in Agua Prieta.

FOREIGN POWERS AID VILLA, HE DECLARES

Washington, D. C., March 24.—Senator Lewis democrat, declared in a resolution introduced today that American authorities had knowledge of supplies and money being furnished to Villa from foreign countries and from the United States. His resolution proposed to brand Americans who give such aid, "as guilty of actual treason"

At the request of Senator Borah, republican, the resolution was read twice and then Senator Lewis asked that it lie over and gave notice that he would speak on it at an early opportunity.

Some of the border senators read telegrams from citizens, expressing apprehension for the safety of American interests along the Mexican line and Senator Stone renewed his appeal to senators not to agitate the situation.

The discussion died without action.

COLONEL TO RETURN TO NEW YORK TODAY

Roosevelt, Through Secretary, Stops Demonstration In His Honor.

New York, March 25.—Col and Mrs Theodore Roosevelt are due to arrive here today on the steamship, Matura, returning from a six weeks' journey through the West Indies. Some of the colonel's admirers wanted to send a committee down the bay to welcome him as they did when he returned from the African hunting expedition in 1910, but they learned from his secretary, John W McGrath, that Mr Roosevelt desired no demonstration in his honor. The half formed plans were abandoned.

Washington, D. C., March 24.—With Roosevelt returning from the West Indies, progressive party leaders are putting forward claims as to the number of delegates he will have in the republican convention at Chicago. They assert today he will have not less than 300 delegates from the outset. That there are well defined plans to push his candidacy is clear.

HAY BILL PASSES THE LOWER HOUSE

Measure Adopted Virtually as Drawn Provides For Army of Only 140,000 — Increases Voted Down.

Washington March 25.—The Hay army increase bill, providing for a regular army peace strength of 140,000 fighting men, instead of the present 100,000, passed the House by a vote of 402 to 2 It goes to the Senate for immediate consideration virtually as drafted by the House committee

The negative votes were cast by Representative Britten, republican, of Illinois, and Representative London, socialist, of New York.

An amendment, by Representative Gardner, under which enlisted men might be furloughed to the reserves at the end of two years, with the approval of their commanding officers, was adopted, 204 to 198.

The Kahn amendment, proposing increase of the standing army to 220,000 men, was rejected, 191 to 213. The Anthony amendment, designed to equalize differences in promotions in the various branches of the army, was rejected, 169 to 198.

On the first vote to strike out the provision for a government plant to take nitrogen from the air for manufacture of explosives, the motion to eliminate the project carried, 122 to 100. A record vote was demanded.

A rush appropriation of $8,807,095, to cover the extraordinary expenditures of the expedition into Mexico, including the increase of the army to its full strength, was asked of congress by the war department.

FOURTH GERMAN LOAN PRONOUNCED SUCCESS

More Than 10,600,000,000 Marks Subscribed, Imperial Treasurer Reports.

Berlin, (by wireless to Sayville,) March 24.—Dr Karl Hefferich, secretary of the imperial treasury, told the reichstag today that the fourth German war loan had been a brilliant success, the subscriptions having reached more than 10,600,000,000 marks.

NEWLYWEDS SOUGHT ON MURDER CHARGE

Muskogee, Okla., March 24.—Three posses are pursuing Paul V. Hadley and his white bride, wanted in connection with the killing of Sheriff Jacob Giles, of Beaumont, Tex., on a train near Checotah, Okla., early today.

Hadley was being taken to Beaumont from Nebraska to answer a murder charge. After he killed Giles, it is alleged Hadley compelled the conductor to stop the train and with his wife, fled to the hills. They are said to be armed.

WON'T CALL GUARDS.

Washington, D. C., March 24.—In cabinet today Postmaster Burleson urged that the national guard be called out for border service. He was overruled by the president and a majority of the cabinet, who took the position that the difficulties of the border situation and the Mexican situation generally were exaggerated.

FAIR SEX IN THE MAJORITY

Preacher's Offer to Marry Persons Brought an Altogether Unlooked-For Response.

Some of the visiting ministers have told some good stories about one another during the Laymen's Missionary Movement convention here, says the San Diego Union. This is one that was "handed" to Rev Hugh L Burleson:

A young couple came into his rooms just as he was going to begin service in the church and asked him to marry them. He said if they would wait until after the service he would give them a public wedding

After the benediction he announced "Now, will those persons wishing to be married please come forward" It is recorded in the story that eleven women and one man answered to the call.

An offset to that story is one told by Dr. Alonzo R. Petty of a woman who was before a judge asking for a divorce. The judge leaned over the desk and said to the woman

"Madam, how long did you know this man before you were married?"

"Your honor," she said, "I was acquainted with him for eighteen months, but I never really knew him until I asked him for a dollar."

Has Made Study of Buddha.

Dr David Brainard Spooner, who propounds the theory that Buddha was not a Hindu, as is the prevailing belief, is an American, a native of New England, and for some time has been in the employ of the archeology department of the government of India. It is his belief that Buddha was a Persian and a renegade from Zoroastrianism, rather than a renegade from Hindu teaching, which also explains a reference to Buddha in the ancient Parsee scriptures as a heretic, a term which could not have been used had he not been connected originally with Zoroastrianism, believes Doctor Spooner. Among this explorer's achievements is the unearthing of Buddha's bones from a mound near Peshawur in northwestern India.

Three Brothers Lost Eye Each.

The right eye of Hugo Bremer, a young farmer, was torn from its socket when a splinter of wood flew from his ax while he was cutting down a tree. This is the third accident of its kind in the Bremer family. While his brother William was playing mumble-the-peg recently, his companion flipped the knife too high, and the sharp blade penetrated his left eye. Another brother was kicked in the right eye by a colt.—Albert Lea (Minn.) Dispatch, St. Paul Dispatch.

Another—it is easily and quickly digested—generally in about one hour.

But the big reason is—Grape-Nuts, besides having delicious taste, supplies all the rich nutriment of whole wheat and malted barley, including the "vital" mineral salts necessary for building brain, nerve and muscle.

Always ready to eat direct from the package, Grape-Nuts with cream or good milk is a well balanced ration—the utmost in sound nourishment.

HONESTY.

The personage toyed with her lorgnette "Have you any children?" she asked by way of introduction.

The Housewife trembled Dared she confess the truth, with all there was at stake? And still she could not lie. "Yes!" she faltered faintly

The Personage started, stared, and at length burst out laughing. "Your honesty," she protested, "is in such refreshing contrast with much that I encounter that, by way of showing my appreciation, I will accept employment with you, provided, of course, that I shall have Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays free, with the use of the entire lower part of the house at any time to entertain company."

That evening the Housewife, in a hushed voice, told her Husband of her great good fortune. He was deeply affected. "Honesty is the best policy!" he exclaimed, with glistening eyes.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She mixed Sulphur with it to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts before breakfast if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

A List of Names that May Serve to Help You in Finding a Title For Your Place

It is becoming a fad and a very seasible one, in all parts of the state for every farmer to have a name for his place and to have it registered, which protects him from anyone else in the same county to have the same name. The body is the latest full streamline design with a one-piece cowl.

It is handsomely finished in solid black with bright nickel and polished aluminum fittings.

The tires are four inch all around because we believe in the advantage of large tires. They insure greater mileage and comfort than can be obtained from the smaller size used on other cars of similar specifications.

The motor is four-cylinder, long stroke bloc type, having a 3⅛-inch bore and 5-inch stroke. Horsepower is 20-25. It is of the most modern design.

It has high-tension magneto ignition. This is the kind used on the most expensive cars.

The electric starting and lighting system is one of the most efficient on the market. It is of the two-unit type.

The electric switches are conveniently located on the steering column. This is the same arrangement used on the highest priced cars.

It has the easy working Overland clutch which any woman can operate. The pedals are adjustable for reach. The steering wheel is large and turns easily The brakes are large and powerful.

The rear springs are the famous cantilever type. These are probably the easiest riding and most shock absorbing springs ever designed. With these springs riding comfort is insured.

In short, there is everything that makes this car up-to-date and comparable with many cars costing considerably more money.

You will be delighted when you see it. And when you ride in it you'll know instantly that this is your ideal of a modern automobile at your idea of a moderate price.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particulary those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

THE GLOVED HAND

A Detective Story

By BURTON E. STEVENSON

Author of "The Holladay Case," "The Marathon Mystery," "The Mystery of the Boule Cabinet," etc.

I reached the lawn, crossed it, and traversed the short avenue which ended at the library dor. Three men were there, and Simmonds came panting up an instant later. The detectives had their torches in their hands, and I saw that they had broken one of the glass panels of the doors, and that one of them had passed a hand through the opening and was fumbling about inside. There was a sharp click, and the hand came back.

"There you are, he said, threw the door open, and stood aside for his superior officer to lead the way

"What's wrong?" Simmonds asked

"I don't know—but the girl showed a light at her window"

"You heard nothing'"

"Not a sound."

Simmonds hestitated. No doubt the same thought occurred to him as to me; for the lawyer-Tartarin in me suggested that we scarcely had warrant to break our way into a sleeping house in the middle of the night

But no such doubts seemed to disturb Godfrey. Without a word, he caught the torch from Simmonds' hand, and passed through the doorway. Simmonds followed, I went next, and the two other men came last, their eorches also flarng. Three beams of light flashed about the library and showed it to be empty. One of them—Godfrey's—lingered on the high-backed chair, but this time it had no occupant.

Then Godfrey switched on the light, passed into the hall and switched on the light there. The hall, too, was empty, and only the ticking of a tall clock disturbed the silence. I was fatlering and ready to turn back, but, to my amazement, Godfrey crossed the hall at a bound and sprang up the stairs, three steps at a time.

"Make all the noise you can'" he shouted over his shoulder and the clatter of our feet seemed enough to wake the dead.

The upper hall was also empty, and then my heart gave a sudden leap, for the circle of light from Godfrey's torch had come to rest upon a white robed figure, which had stolen half way down the stirs from the supper story It was the maid, holding her nightdress about her and her face was as white as her gown

Godfrey sprang to her side

"What is it' he asked "What is wrong?"

"I heard a cry gasped the girl "Down here somewhere And a scuffle in the dark A woman's cry It was choked off short

Godfrey leaped down stairs as fast as the light of a torch passed a loss it, I saw that his face was livid

"Who's got an extra gun" he demanded, and one of the detectives pressed one into his hand now, men" he added "follow me" threw open the outer door and room, and flung back the drapes beyond.

My heart was in my throat as I peered over Godfrei's shoulder at what lay within, and then a gasp of amazement from my companions mingled with my own

For the crystal sphere was turning softly, and seated cross legged on the divan, his hands folded his eyes fixed in meditation, was Silva

We all stood for a moment staring at him, then Godfrey passed his hand dazedly before his eyes.

"You two men stay on guard here' he said. "One of you keep your torch on this fellow, and the other keep his torch on the floor There's a cobra around somewhere."

An arc of light swept shakingly across the floor, as one of the men turned his torch toward it. But I saw no sign of Toto.

"Lester, you and Simmonds come with me," Godfrey added stepped back into the hall, and tapped at the door of Miss Vaughan's bed room

There was no response and he tapped again. Then he tried the door, found it unlocked, and opened it He sent a ray of light skimming about the room; then he found the switch turned on the lights and entered.

The room was empty, as were the dressing room and bath room adjoining. The covers of the bed had been turned back, ready for its occupant, but the bed was undisturbed.

Godfrey glanced about the room again, a sort of frenzied concentration in his gaze, and then went, out, leaving the lights burning. It took but a moment or two to look through the other suites. They were all empty.

"If Miss Vaughan was anywhere about, and unharmed," said Godfrey, "the noise we made would have brought her out to investigate. There's only one place she can be," and he led the way resolutely back to the door of Silva's room.

The yogi had not moved.

Godfrey contemplated him for a moment, with his torch full on the bearded face. Then he crossed the threshold, his torch sweeping the floor in front of him.

"Let's see what the Thug is up to," he said, crossed the room, drew back the drapery, and opened the door into the little closet where we had seen Mahbub once before.

There was a burst of acrid smoke into the room, and Godfrey stepped back with a stifled exclamation.

"Come here, you fellows!" he cried, and Simmonds and I sprang to his side.

For a moment I could see nothing; the rolling clouds of smoke blinded and choked me; I could feel the tears running down my cheeks and my throat burned as though it had been scalded.

Then the smoke lifted a little, and I caught a glimpse of what lay within the room.

In the middle of the floor stood an open brazier, with a thin yellow flame hovering above it, now bright, now dim, as the smoke whirled about it. Before the brazier, sat Mahbub, his legs crossed with feet uppermost, his hands pressed palm to palm before his face.

"But he'll suffocate!" I gasped, and, indeed, I did not see how any human being could breathe in such an atmosphere.

And then, as the smoke whirled aside again, I saw the snake. Its head was waving slowly to and fro, its horrible hood distended, its yellow, lidless eyes fixed upon us.

Simmonds saw it, too, and retreated a step.

"We'd better keept out of there," he gasped, "till that little pet's put away in his basket."

But Godfrey seized his arm and dragged him back to the threshold of the door.

"Look, Simmonds," he cried, rubbing his dripping eyes fiercely, "there against the wall—is there something there—or is it just the smoke?"

I looked, too, but at first saw nothing, for a cloud of smoke rolled down and blotted out the light from Godfrey's torch. Then it swirled aside, and against the farther wall I fancied I saw something—a shape, a huddled shape—gortesque—horrible, somehow

I heard Godfred's startled cry, saw his hand swing up, saw a tongue of yellow flame leap from his revolver

And with the echo of the shot, came a scream—a scream piercing, unearthy of terror unspeakable.

I saw the Thug spring into the air, his face distorted, his mouth open—I saw him tearing at something that swung from his neck—something horrible that clung and twisted.

He tore the thing loose—it was only an instant, really, but it seemed an age—and, still shrieking, flung it full at us.

I was paralyzed with terror, incapable of movement, staring dumbly—but Godfrey swept me aside so sharply that I almost fell.

And that foul shape swished past us, fell with a thud, and was lost in the darkness.

CHAPTER XXIV.

KISMET!

Words cannot paint the nauseating horror of that moment. Fear—cold, abject, awful fear—ran through my veins like a drug, my face was clammy with the sweat of utter terror, my hands clutched wildly at some drapery, which tore from its fastenings and came down in my grasp.

Three shafts of lights swept across the floor, and almost at once picked up that horrid shape. It was coiled, with head raised, ready to strike, and I saw that one side of its hood had been shot away

I have, more than once, referred to Simmonds as hard headed and wanting in imagination—not always, I fear, in terms the most respectful. For that I ask his pardon. I shall not make that mistake again. For, in that nerve-racking moment, he never lost his coolness. Revolver in hand, he crept cautiously forward, while we others held our breath, then the pistol spoke, once, twice, thrice, and the ugly head fell forward to the floor.

At the same moment, Godfrey sprang to the door from which volumes of heavy scented smoke still eddied, and disappeared inside

I scarcely noticed him I was staring at that foul object on the floor, and then I stared at Francisco Silva, motionless on the divan, his eyes fixed on the crystal sphere, undisturbed amid all this terror and tumult It is impossible for me to remember him, as I saw him at that moment, without admiration and a little awe

Godfrey's voice, shrill with excitement brought me around with a start.

"Lester' he shouted. "Lend a hand here'

Something of the terror lay in the air, I forgot my way into the other room and stumbled over the body of the Thug Only saved myself my scalp prickled with error, from falling upon it, then groped forward to where Godfrey was kneeling above that huddled shape I had glimpsed through the smoke

"Catch hold" he panted and, choking, strangling, suffocating we dragged it into the outer room Get a window open'' he gasped "Get a window open''

And Simmonds, whom nothing seemed to shake groped along the wall until he found a window, pulled the hangings back, threw up the sash and flung back the shutters.

"Quick'" said Godfrey 'Over there. Now hold the torch"

And as I took it and pressed the button with a trembling finger, the halo of light fell upon a bloodless face—the face of Marjorie Vaughan

Simmonds was supporting her, and Godfrey, with frantic fingers, was loosening her robe at the throat. My terrified eyes, staring at that throat, half expected to find a cruel mark there, but its smoothness was unsullied The robe loosened, Godfrey snatched his cap from his head and began to fan the fresh air in upon her

"Pray heaven it is not too late'" he murmured, and kept on fanning, watching the white lips and delicate nostrils, so drawn and livid. "We must try artificial respiration," he said after a moment. "But not here—this atmosphere is stifling Take her feet, Lester."

We staggered out with her, somehow, across the hall, into her room, and laid her on her bed. Godfrey, kneeling above her, began to raise and lower her arms, with a steady, regular rhythm.

"Open the windows wide," he commanded, without looking up. "Wet a towel, or something, in cold water, and bring it here."

Simmonds threw open the windows, while I went mechanically to the bathroom, wet a towel, and slapped it against her face and neck as Godfrey directed. The moments passed, and at last the lips opened in a flutering sigh, the bosom rose with a full inhalation, and a spot of color crept into, either cheek.

"Thank God!" said Godfrey, in a voice that was almost a sob. "Now, Simmonds, go out and bring that Irish girl, and send one of your men to 'phone for Hinman.

Simmonds sent one of his men scurrying with a word, and himself dashed up the stairs to the other floor. He was back in a moment, almost dragging the frightened girl with him. Her teeth were chattering and she started to scream when she saw that still form on the bed, but Simmonds shook her savagely.

"There's nothing to be afraid of," Godfrey assured her. "Your mistress isn't dead—she'll soon come around. But you must get her undressed and to bed. And then keep bathing her face with cold water until the doctor comes. Understand?"

"Yo—yes, sir," faltered the girl. "But—oh!" and a burst of hysterical sobbing choked her.

Simmonds shook her again.

"Don't be a fool, Annie Crogan!" he said. "Get hold of yourself!"

Godfrey stepped off the bed and picked up one of the limp wrists.

"Her pulse is getting stronger," he said, after a moment. "It will soon—hello! What's this?"

Clasped tight in the slender fingers was something that looked like a torn and crumpled rubber glove. He tried to unclasp the fingers, but when he touched them, they contracted rigidly, and a low moan burst from the unconscious girl. So, after a moment, he desisted and laid the hand down again.

"You understand what you're to do'" he asked the maid, and she nodded mutely "Then come along, boys," he added, and led the way back to the hall. His face was dripping with perspiration and his hands were shaking, but he managed to control them. "And now for Senor Silva," he said, in another tone, taking the torch from my hand. "I fear he will have a rude awakening."

"He sat there like a statue, even when I shot the snake," remarked Simmonds. "He's a wonder, he is."

"Yes," agreed Godfrey, as he stepped into the entry, "he's a wonder" Then he stopped glanced around and turned a stern face on Simmonds. "Where's the man I left on guard here?" he asked

"Why" faltered Simmonds, "I remember now—he helped us carry the young lady But we were all right there in the hall—you don't mean"

Godfrey stepped to the inner door and flashed his torch about the room. The divan was empty

Simmonds paused only for a single glance

"He can't be far away'" he said "He can't get away in that white robe of his. Come along Tom'' and followed by his assistant, he plunged down the stairs

I saw Godfrey half turn to follow, then he stopped ran his hand along the wall inside the door, found the button, and turned on the lights. His face was pale and angry.

"It's my fault as much as anyone's," he said savagely "I might have known Silva would see the game was up, and try to slip away in the excitement. I ought to have kept an eye on him."

"Your eyes were fairly busy as it was," I remarked. "Besides, maybe he hasn't got away."

Godfrey's face as he glanced about the room, showed that he cherished no such hope.

"Let's see what happened to Mahbub," he said. "Maybe he got away, too," and he crossed to the inner door.

The flame in the brazier had died away, and the smoke came only in fitfuls puffs, heavy with deadening perfume The thug had not got away. He lay on the floor—a dreadful sight. He was lying on his back, his hands clenched, his body arched in a conculsion, his head drawn far back. The black lips were parted over the ugly teeth, and the eyes had rolled upward till they gleamed, two vacant balls of white. At the side of his neck, just under the jaw, was a hideous swelling.

Godfrey's torch ran over the body from head to foot, and I sickened as I looked at it.

"I'm going out," I said. "I can't stand this'" and I hurried to the open window.

Godfrey joined me there in a moment.

"I'm feeling pretty bad myself," he said, putting the torch in his pocket and mopping his shining forehead. "It's plain enough what happened. I caught a glimpse of Miss Vaughan on the floor there realized that we couldn't do anything with the snake in the way, and shot at it, but I only ripped away a portion of the hood, and the thing mad with rage, sprang upon the Hindu. Nothing on earth could have saved him after it got its fangs in his neck. Ugh'"

He shivered slightly, and stood gazing for a moment down into the garden. Then he turned back to me with a smile.

It's a good night's work, Lester," he said "even if we don't catch Silva. I fancy Miss Vaughan will change her mind now about becoming a priestess of Siva'"

"But Godfrey' I asked "what happened" What was she doing in there? What"

He stopped me with a hand upon my arm.

"I don't know But she'll tell us when she comes around I only hope they'll get Silva. That would make the victory complete

He paused for the hum of a motor car came up the drive, and an instant later we caught the glare of the acetylenes Then a voice hailed us.

"Hello there," it called. "Shall I come up?"

"Is it you, doctor?" asked Godfrey, leaning out

"Yes."

"Come right up, then, to Miss Vaughan's room."

We met him at the stair head.

"Oh it's you'" he said, recognizing us. "What has happened now?"

"It's Miss Vaughan- she's been half-suffocated But how did you get in?"

The gates were open," Hinman answered "so I drove right through. Is Miss Vaughan in here?" and when Godfrey nodded he opened the door and closed it softly behind him.

"Open'" repeated Godfrey, staring at me "Open' Then that is the way Silva went'"

"Yes, yes," I agreed "He had the key It was he who let me out"

"And locked the gate after you?"

"Yes—I heard the key turn."

Without a word, Godfrey hurried down the stairs. At the foot we met Simmonds

"We've searched the grounds," he said, "but haven't found anyone. I've left my men on guard. I 'phoned for some more men, and notified headquarters."

SUFFRAGE NOTES.

The first two weeks of the campaign conducted by the Iowa Men's League for Woman Suffrage have indicated beyond a doubt that the men of Iowa intend doing their share in the equal suffrage campagn. The response being made to the state wide appeal for active work on the part of the men has not only been prompt, but is of the most encouraging sort. Men of prominence in almost every walk of life are lining up as workers, and on election day, according to present indications, the women of Iowa will be represented by a splendid corps of workers at the polls.

A most hopeful sign in the campaign is the interest the union labor men are taking in the equal suffrage cause. One of the active workers from now on will be President J. H. Strief, of Sioux City, who expects to do much good for the suffrage cause while traveling about the state in his work as the head of the Iowa State Federation of Labor. A. L. Urick, state commissioner of labor, also is an active suffrage worker, and is serving as a vice president and member of the executive board of the Iowa Equal Suffrage association. Judge John L. Stevens, of Boone, one of the progressive party leaders, became a member of the league last week and will do some active work.

February saw a large number of suffrage speakers in the field, but the coming months will see many more. This week was begun Monday with an address at Iowa City by President John D. Denison, jr., of the Iowa Men's League for Woman Suffrage. On Tuesday Miss Elizabeth Perkins made an address at Audubon.

Women during 1914 applied for 350 patents in England, 10 fewer than in 1913. On the part of men there was a diminution of 5,000 applications

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexions, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

BACKACHE AND KIDNEYS

Dear Mr. Editor:

For the benefit of others, I gladly give this statement regarding the merits of "Anuric." Am nearly 76 years of age. I suffered from backache, weak back, rheumatism, and could not control the excretion of the kidneys. I can safely say that "Anuric," the new discovery of Dr. Pierce, of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., has done me more real good than anything I have ever taken for these ailments.

Signed—Mrs. N. M. Flint.

NOTE:—A new remedy, called "Anuric," has been discovered by Dr. Pierce. It cures backache, headache and the darting pains and aches of rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles. This "Anuric" is 37 times more potent than lithia, and dissolves uric acid, as hot water does sugar.

SIGHT RESTORED BY DR. WEBER

Mr [illegible] G Redinbaugh of Logan, Iowa, an old soldier of the civil war, now 74 years old had an experience [illegible] which he received in an [illegible] hopeless case He says I [illegible] 50 years ago my right eye [illegible] with cataract I had lost the sight of my left eye during the war fifty years ago so I was helpless I went to Omaha to one of the best oculists and he operated on my right eye I stayed in the hospital for five weeks, had severest pains, but the result was a failure I returned home and was advised to go to Dr Weber, who often comes to Logan He examined my eyes and said the right eye could not be helped, but Dr Weber said he could help the left one that had been blind fifty years This seemed almost too good to be true, but Dr Weber treated the eye and operated on it at the hotel and my wife did the care of the eye afterward at home I had no pain and my sight is restored

Primary Held Monday

The presidential preference primary held Monday brought only about one-fourth of the voters, 43 republican votes being cast and 3 democratic, of which for president Cummins received 42 and Wilson 2. The state vote gave Adams the election of National committeeman, Robert Healy and Paul Stillman, district delegates to National convention Marsh won out over Dunn for National committeeman on the democratic ticket. Only 11 votes were cast in Twin Lake township and the vote the state over was very light.

New Light Company

The Iowa Falls Electric Co. have bought an option on the local electric light plant and will purchase same providing the town grants them a franchise This will mean better service for the Klemme patrons if the voters of Klemme grant the franchise which they will more than likely do. The franchise notice will be published in a short time Read it over carefully and see the many advantages to be gained It will mean 24-hour service, a lower rate and better lights than the local company are able to provide and break even It will also enable the nearby farmers to have electric lights and power service if they desire. We have heard some say that they were not in favor of granting a franchise, but we believe that they will change their minds after reading the benefits that they will receive.

TEST SEED NOW OR NEVER

Final Warning and Instructions Given for Insuring Good Crop by Ag. Experiment Station.

With the time for corn planting coming nearer and nearer, and the matter of good seed still unsettled in many places, the farm crops section of the Iowa agricultural experiment station has issued a final warning to farmers that it is absolutely necessary to plant good seed and that the only way to know what is good is to make a test of every ear shelled for planting. The statement of the Ames men, based on visits to all parts of the state, may be summed up as follows:

1 The character of the 1916 corn crop depends absolutely on the individual ear test.

2 There is enough seed corn in the state of Iowa to plant this next year's crop, providing the individual ear test is used effectively.

3 There is evry little corn in Iowa which is fit for seed in its present condition. If there is to be enough seed to plant this year's crop it will be absolutely essential that much of the corn, which gives a low germination test, be gone over by the individual ear method, to separate the good ears from the bad.

4. In many localities nearly one-half of the farmers will need to purchase some seed corn this year.

5. If seed must be purchased, get your seed now. eGt it and test it at once.

6. It is neither sate nor necessary to buy seed from distant points, of which nothing is known regarding either its value or its adaption to Iowa conditions.

7 Locally produced seed will give a greater yield of better quality corn than that brought from a distance. Get seed in your own immediate locality if possible.

8. Don't buy seed from an agent. If you buy from a seed company, buy from one which has years of honest business to its credit. It is best to be on the safe side. Therefore use only the safe method.

ARSENIC IN STOMACH

Several weeks ago Veterinary Stewart treated several horses for a farmer south of Britt by name of Hamilton. Mr. Stewart suspicioned that some kind of poison other than forage poison had caused the death of the horses, and he therefore sent a part of the stomach of one horse to the laboratory at Kansas City. This morning he received a letter from the laboratory stating that they had made the test of the stomach and found that it contained arsenic in large proportions. Whether the horses accidentally got the poison or whether it was given to them by some person with malicious intent is a question that is yet to be solved. —Kanawha Record.

WOMAN'S SKIRT SET AFIRE BY CYCLE ENGINE

Mrs. Ben Baumgardner of 202 Ferrier street had a narrow escape yesterday while motor cycle riding with her husband on North Superior avenue. Mrs Bumgardner was sitting on the front of the machine directly above the engine. Her skirt muffled the engine and in some way caught fire. In an instant she was ablaze and but for the efforts of a passerby who beat the flames with his coat, Mrs. Baumgardner would have probably been seriously burned However, but for the loss of the skirt and the fright Mrs. Baumgardner is no worse for the accident.—Mason City Globe-Gazette.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Mitchell departed Tuesday morning for Rochester, Minn. Mr Mitchell expects to enter the hospital or secure medical relief. Mr. Mitchell was feeling pretty fair for awhile after returning from his vacation, but suffered a relapse and thought it best to see if he could not find permanent relief through the hands of the Mayos. His many friends hope that he will not have to be gone long and that he will return a well man. A. W. Payne woh was here during his recent absence has charge of the station again.

later, the car is likely to be brought to some Overland garage, the owner is quite sure to recover it by this means. Last year there were 1456 Overlands stolen, and all but 30 were recovered. The service is free to the car owner.

W. P. Brady, real estate and tax agent of the Rock Island Ry. with headquarters in the Central Life building at Des Moines, and A. L. Haldeman, roadmaster, were here Wednesday, calling on the business men and distributing literature in regard to the increase asked by the train and engine men. We have not had the time to dig into this matter much as yet, but believe that the railroad men of these departments are now receiving good pay and are asking an unreasonable increase. According to the statement of Mr. Brady and Mr. Haldeman the various unions connected with the train and engine men refuse to arbitrate which looks to us as a fair means of settling the matter. There is no question but what if the railroads have to accede to a $100,000,000 increase in wages per year but what they will have to raise passenger rates to offset the expenditure and that is where you and I come in.

Dolph Fuller Passes Away

Word was received here Wednesday afternoon that Dolph Fuller had passed away on the train at Dows that noon while he was on his way back to the soldiers' home at Marshalltown. He had been up here for a few days visiting his sons and many friends and was just returning to the home. He boarded the train at Belmond and the conductor and passengers thought he was asleep as he was in a sitting position and did not discover his death until it was found that he did not leave the train at Dows where all of the passengers change cars if they wish to go north or south. Mr. Fuller was a citizen of this community ever since the pioneer days and has friends for miles around. We have not learned at this time when the funeral will be held or where the remains will be laid to rest, but presumably in the Amsterdam cemetery beside his wife who died here about 12 years ago. We hope to publish the obituary next week.

Sheffield, England is suffering from a housing famine caused by the influx of munition workers. As the headquarters of the steel trade and the home of several of the largest armament firms in the kingdom, it has been working to its utmost capacity since the war began When the great rush of government orders came whole streets of dwelling houses were torn down to make room for the extensions of some of the leading steel works Many thousands of fresh hands arrived from all parts An unusual situation was created Even before the war there was a marked lack of small houses, and long before the rush the supply was quite inadequate Today it is impossible to enforce the regulations against overcrowding, except in the worst cases. Small two-storied houses are occupied in some cases by three and four families and cases have been known where these families have taken lodgers

Francis Neilson M P, now on a lecture tour of the United States, is a kinsman both of the historian, David Hume and of William E. Very few farmers cultivate the habit keeping careful accounts of their ceipts and expenditures, showing at end of the year a balance, either or against. The farmer of Western nada is no exception to this. It is t if more careful book-keeping were sorted to there that much better re- sults would be ob- tained and shown. There is the case of the Crowfoot Farming Co. of Crowfoot, Alberta, has just issued a certified statement its operations for the years 1912, 13, 1914 and 1915. This Company s had for the past few years about 00 acres in wheat and between 200 d 250 in oats. The total operating d general expenses for 1912, includ- g interest at 6% and depreciation at %, were $12,587, for 1913 $17,506, for 14 $18,729, and for 1915, $29,804.43. xpense per acre of land in crop was 80 in 1912, $11.57 in 1913, $11.70 in 14, and $17.87 in 1915. Total re- ipts were $15,531 in 1912, $30,661 in 13, $31,589.87 in 1914, and $62,520 26 1915. The percentage earned upon pital invested was 6½% in 1912, % in 1913, 23 1-3 in 1914, and 50% in 15, in which year it paid a cash divi- nd of 58%.

Eat Less Meat If Your Kidneys Aren't Acting Right or If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

When you wake up with backache nd dull misery in the kidney region generally means you have been eat- g too much meat, says a well-known uthority. Ohio Man Chosen as Temporary Chairman of Republican Convention—Gleason Is Secretary.

OPPOSED TO T R

Washington D C Apr 7 — Selection of Senator Harding of Ohio as temporary chairman of the republican convention was in the face of protests from many progressive republicans in congress. It is well known some Iowa members were opposed to Harding with the old guard. He is bitterly anti-Roosevelt and in 1912 his paper published [illegible] editor this against Roosevelt. His selection is considered a victory for Root [illegible]

Other [illegible] were [illegible] New York secretary [illegible] of Iowa, Hamilton Hart of Roanoke Va [illegible] porter

Without exception these prominent men declined to discuss presidential possibilities. Chairman Hilles declared that he entertained no thought of success [illegible] next fall

ITALIANS DEFEATED BY AUSTRIAN FORCES

Berlin (by wireless to Sayville) April 7.—The capture by the Austrians of territory north of Monte Cristabel with the taking of more than 100 prisoners and two machine guns, is reported in today's Austro-Hungarian headquarters statement received here from Vienna.

PROPOSES PROMOTION FOR FIGHTING COLONEL

Washington, April 7.—A bill to authorize the president to promote Col. George A. Dodd, who recently led the American troops in Mexico, in a dash against Villa forces, to the grade of brigadier general, was introduced today by Representative Kiess, of Pennsylvania. The colonel will retire next July.

REICHSTAG APPROVES SUBMARINE RESOLUTION

Amsterdam, April 6, (via London.) April 7 The German reichstag today adopted the committees resolution on submarine war as well as the budgets of the imperial chancellor and the foreign office

GERMANY IS FACING SHORTAGE OF COFFEE

Only About Enough to Last Country Six Weeks—Have Tea For Year.

Berlin, April 7.—The government today appropriated coffe, tea and chicory and appointed a commission to regulate their distribution The regulation applies to persons having in their possession 10 kilograms (about 22 pounds) of unroasted coffee, or kilograms of tea.

It is announced that there is a visible supply of coffee sufficient for about six weeks that the army's needs are covered for four weeks and that there is enough tea for about a year.

DE FACTO TROOPS BEAT VILLA BAND

Big Force Moving Into Chihuahua Zone—Bandits Hotly Pursued By U. S. Cavalry.

[illegible] Tex April 8.—Francisco [illegible] Coneguitas, 10 miles [illegible] on April 4, according to Gen Luis Gutierrez, commanding the Carranza troops in Chihuahua. General Bell received this information from Chihuahua and transmitted it to General Funston today American cavalrymen are pushing forward along the rails to and beyond Satevo.

Gutierrez reported that Carranza troops had engaged 50 Villa men at Coneguitla, killing 10 and capturing two. The prisoners said Villa had left there early in the morning with 200 men leaving the 50 as a rear guard.

General Bell reported that information from Mexican sources indicated that some thousands of the de facto government troops were being moved south of Chihuahua, with the ostensible purpose of checking the retreat of Villa.

Another column of American cavalry arrived at Cusihuiriachic, to support that of Col W C Brown, who reached there April 4 according to reports at General Funston's headquarters today. Col Brown explained his delay in reporting a report after the engagement a few days ago at Aguas Calientes near Bachiniva, by saying he and his force had exhausted their money and he had no money to pay the express to get a message to a commercial wire.

The arrival of the second column of troops at Cusichuiriachic, April 5, was related to give fresh impetus to the forces following Villa along the trail through Satevo Colonel Brown, it was learned, had fallen back on Cusichuiriachic on account of the complete exhaustion of his supplies. The column that followed him into Cusichuiriachic convoyed a heavy pack train and here it is believed probable that newly provisioned, he has resumed the chase of the bandit chief now heading towards the waiting forces of Carranza, according to reports from Chihuahua.

Colonel Brown made arrangements to secure money from American mining companies operating in that district.

DENY WITHDRAWAL RUMOR.

Washington, April 7.—Persistent reports that the American forces in Mexico might be recalled soon are emphatically denied by Secretaries Lansing and Baker Both declare there is no present intention of changing the orders given to General Funston shortly after the Columbus, N. M., raid to "get Villa dead or alive."

PROPOSES TO CONSTRUCT AEROPLANES FOR ARMY

Washington, D. C., April 7.—Representative Hull introduced a bill for a governmental aeroplane factory at the Rock Island, Ill., arsenal. It carries an appropriation of $700,000. General Scriven, chief of the signal corps, suggested it, and General Crozier, chief of ordnance, approved it.

BIG SLUMP SHOWN IN WINTER WHEAT

Production Estimated at About 160,000,000 Bushels Less Than Last Year—Condition Is Bad.

Washington, April 8.—A total production of 495,000,000 bushels of winter wheat was forecast today by the department of agriculture, basing its estimate on the condition of the crop April 1, and an assumption of abandonment of acreage and average influences on the crop to harvest. That compares with 655,045,000 bushels, the estimated production in 1915 and 684,990,000 bushels in 1914.

Condition of winter wheat on April 1, was 78.3 per cent of a normal against 88 last year, 95.6 in 1914, and 87.3 the average for the last 10 years. There was a decrease in condition from December 1 to April 1, of 9.4 points compared with an average decline of 3.5 points between those dates in the last 10 years.

The department of agriculture, in a statement analyzing the report said.

"The small production forecast, is due partly to a reduction of about 11 per cent from the acreage of the preceding year and to a low condition of growth, namely 72 per cent of normal, which is lower than the condition on April 1, in any year since 1904 it is 10 per cent poorer than the 10-year average on April 1

"The cause of the low condition was a wet cold fall, causing poor seed beds and poor start for wintering Much of the crop was sown late partly from necessity of the season and partly to avoid Hessian fly.

"The Hessian fly is reported present and active in many sections of the southern part of the belt.

"Climatic conditions were harder on late than on early seeded wheat. The winter snow covering was lighter than usual, often lacking. sleet damaged fields bare of snow, considerable grain on lowlands was destroyed by flooding and the injuring from freezing and thawing was greater than usual. The southern parts of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois and portions of Missouri, were worst affected. The relatively best sections are the most eastern and far western states. The season is late and the real extent of damage is problematical in the northern portion of the belt."

GERMAN INSPIRED REPORT, IS CLAIM

Consul Said to Be Responsible For Rumor of British Ultimatum That Roused Holland to Act.

The Hague, (via London), April 7.—The British government has asked the Dutch government to call the newspaper Avond Post to account for spreading a false report of a British ultimatum to Holland, thus sowing distrust between two friendly nations.

The newspaper Handelsblad claims to know that the Avond Post report was inspired by the German consulate at Amsterdam. The German consul excuses himself, saying that he "had heard it from The Hague."

London, April 7.—The situation in Holland apparently is becoming less tense. Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent says an indication of the change is that the officers of the military transportation staff of the state railways will again be granted leave.

$140,000 FIRE LOSS.

St. Louis, Mo., April 7.—Fire of undetermined origin this morning destroyed the four story building and stock of S. E. Freund & Sons' Shoe & Clothing company, causing a loss estimated at $140,000. Two men were hurt seriously by a falling wall.

SEEK INVESTIGATION OF BIG POWER LOBBY

Congress Asked to Look Into Efforts to Put Across Muscle Shoals Project.

Washington, April 8.—Investigation of "lobbying activities of the agents of the Du Pont powder companies of the present and former agents of the American Cyanide company the Alabama Powder company their subsidiary concerns and their associate corporations, in connection with the effort to bring about the erection of a nitrate plant at the Muscle Shoals site on the Tennessee river," was proposed in a resolution introduced yesterday by Representative Madden, of Illinois a republican. The resolution proposes to empower the judiciary committee to hear witnesses and report to congress.

The resolution sets forth that on April 3 the Du Pont company used improper methods to defeat a section of the House army bill and names Charles B. Landis and Hugh L. Cooper as representatives of the company who have been here It says that a large lobby has been working in Washington in behalf of the nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals.

SENATE INDORSES VOLUNTEER PLANS

National Guard Advocates Fail to Defeat Reserve Army Scheme, But It May Not Pass House.

Washington, D. C., April 8.—The Senate retained the federal volunteer provision in the army bill by a vote of 36 to 34; rejecting Senator Lee's amendment to strike the section from the bill. The vote ended a four-day debate on the section.

Without republican support the volunteer section would have been voted out by the democratic senators, despite the fact that it was unanimously recommended by the military committee.

How They Voted.

Twenty-four democrats and 10 republicans, including nearly all the progressive republicans, voted to strike it out. Nineteen democrats and 17 republicans voted to retain it. The vote follows

Voted to Eliminate the Section—
Democrats—Ashurst, Bankhead, Clarke of Arkansas, Culbertson, Gore, Hardwick, Hughes, Kern, Lee of Maryland, Lewis, Martin, Overman, Ransdell, Reed, Robinson, Shafroth, Simmons, Smith of Georgia, Smith of South Carolina, Stone, Swanson, Taggart, Thompson and Vardaman—24.
Republicans—Clapp, Cummins, Curtis, Jones, Kenyon, McCumber, Norris, Page, Sherman and Works—10.
Total, 34.

Voted to Retain the Section—
Democrats—Beckham, Broussard, Chamberlain, Hitchcock, Hollis, Husting, Johnson of Maine, Johnson of South Dakota, Lane, Newlands, O'Gorman, Pittman, Pomerene, Saulsbury, Sheppard, Smith of Maryland, Thomas, Walsh and Williams—19.
Republicans—Borah, Brandegee, Catron, Clarke of Wyoming, Dillingham, Du Port, Gallinger, Lippitt, Lodge, Nelson, Oliver, Poindexter, Smoot, Sterling, Sutherland, Warren and Weeks—17.
Total, 36.

The narrow margin by which the federal volunteer provision was retained makes it doubtful that it will be in the measure finally framed by the conference committee of the two houses. An effort during debate on the House army bill to insert this section, which is designed to provide such a force as the continental army proposed by former Secretary Garrison, was decisively defeated.

Charge Guard Lobby.

The vote followed charges that the national guard organizations throughout the country were conducing a lobby against the federal volunteer plan. Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the military committee, warned the Senate in the course of the debate that if the national guard proposed to become politically active and endeavor to influence legislation as it had done in this country he would in future oppose any further federal aid for the state soldiers.

Champions of the guard retorted that the military training camps' association had been equally active in behalf of the federal volunteer sections. They pointed to the mass of telegrams laid before the Senate today by Senator Chamberlain to sustain their contention.

WOMAN SPY PUT TO DEATH BY GERMANS

Two Others Are Committed to Prison, One For Life—Aided Enemy, Charge.

Amsterdam, (via London), April 8.—The assertion is made by the Echo Belge that Miss Gabrielle Petit, of Molenbeek, Belgium, has been put to death by Germans, after trial by court martial, on a charge of treason. It is alleged she conducted an information bureau in the interest of Germany's enemies. The newspaper also states that Louise Debettenigies, of Lille, has been sentenced to death, but that the sentence has been commuted to life imprisonment.

Another woman, Marie Houtte, the newspaper says, has been sentenced to imprisonment for 15 years.

FRENCH SHIP TORPEDOED.

London, April 7.—Lloyds announces that the French sailing vessel, St. Hubert, has been torpedoed and may become a derelict. Her crew was rescued.

RAILROAD YARD HANDS ON STRIKE; MAY SPREAD

New York, April 7.—Striking yard workers of the New York Central railroad here threatened today to extend the strike to other cities involving possibly 9,000 to 12,000 men unless their demands for recognition of their union and increased wages were granted.

The British navy now uses a life raft made in the shape of a huge doughnut. Each battleship carries this kind of life saving craft.

GERMAN-AMERICANS LINING UP VOTERS

Not Yet Indicated Which Presidential Candidate They Will Support.

Sacramento, Cal., April 8.—German Americans of Sacramento were formulating today plans urged at a meeting last night by representatives of the German-American alliance, to throw the weight of their influence and votes into the scale of the national elections next November

This is a part of the national campaign which is being waged through the German-American alliance, with headquarters at Philadelphia to consolidate the German vote.

Membership cards were circulated and signed.

No effort was made to put the German vote at the disposal of any particular presidential candidate

SPAIN ASKS THAT GERMANY EXPLAIN

Cabinet Acts Upon Demand of Shippers to Know If Flag Is Not Protection For Ships.

RESENT SINKING OF VIGO

Evidence Piles Up That Sussex Was Torpedoed, But Washington Still Hesitates to Act Definitely.

Madrid, (via London), April 8.—The Spanish cabinet has decided to instruct the ambassador at Berlin to request from the German government explanation of the sinking of the Spanish steamer Vigo, and a definition of its policy with regard to the rights of neutrals on the seas.

The meeting of the Spanish cabinet was brought about by a message from ship owners in Bilbao and Seville, who telegraphed the government inquiring if the Spanish flag was sufficient protection against a repetition of the torpedoing of Spanish vessels, such as the Vigo, by the German submarines.

WILSON READY TO ACT, BUT GIVES GERMANY A CHANCE

Washington, D C. April 8.—It was stated in high administration quarters the president and cabinet have made up their minds what course to take if it develops that the Sussex was torpedoed. Moreover the administration has strong proofs of torpedoing. What the decision is, is withheld. Talk of a rupture was resumed this afternoon.

President Wilson and the cabinet considered the submarine situation again today without deciding on action at this time It was understood the situation still waits on Germany's answer to the inquiries on the recent destruction of the Sussex and other vessels.

When President Wilson met the cabinet today he was yet without definite official information from the German government as to whether its submarines were responsible for the attack without warning on the channel steamer Sussex. Lacking such information, members said action would not be taken, although the administration is almost convinced that the Sussex, with her 25 American passengers, was the victim of a German submarine

Members of the cabinet were not inclined to take an optimistic view of the situation, but were hopeful that events in the next few days would prevent a break with Germany, either by proof that she was not guilty of the Sussex attack or by reparation or explanation that would be satisfactory

The state department had not received today any inquiry from Germany for more information in the case, reported in news dispatches to have been forwarded from Berlin. There was reason to believe that the United States will not further reveal information it holds until the German government has admitted or denied responsibility in the Sussex case.

GERMANY DENIES KNOWING OF ATTACK UPON SUSSEX

Berlin, (via London), April 8.—James W Gerard, the United States ambassador, conversed yesterday with Dr. Alfred M. Zimmerman, under secretary of foreign affairs, regarding the submarine situation. It is understood that the foreign office had no information to convey to the ambassador regarding the Sussex and the other steamships in which the United States government has manifested an interest, but that there was an intimation that Germany is undoubtedly ready, as indicated in Dr. Zimmerman's statement of April 3 to the Associated Press, to meet the United States more than half way if it should develop that the Sussex was torpedoed erroneously.

BABLER IS CHOICE OF MISSOURI REPUBLICANS

Excelsior Springs, Mo., April 7.—Republicans of Missouri in state convention today named Jacob L. Babler, St. Louis national committee, elected Missouri's delegates at large, alternates and presidential electors to the national convention and adopted a platform lauding Herbert S. Hadley, former governor for services rendered his party in the state and nation. Delegates to the national convention at Chicago were ininstructed for president.

The resolution adopted condemned the present national administration, favored a protective tariff and advocated preparedness for adequate naval defense. President Wilson's policy in Mexico also was criticized.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with Lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Suppose we sit down, she said and

Just then the sentry at the door saluted and Simmonds stepped into the room I saw him shake his head in answer to Godfrey's questioning look and knew that Silva had not been found Then I brought him forward to Miss Vaughan and introduced him

Mr Simmonds,' I explained, 'has been in charge of this case and it was he who arranged to watch the house for fear some harm would befall you

I know," broke in Miss Vaughan, clasping Simmonds' hand warmly. "Anne told me all about it this morning I don't know how to thank you, Mr. Simmonds."

Oh it wasn't me especially," protested Simmonds red to the ears 'It was specially Godfrey there, and Mr Lester They were worried to death."

We were rather worried' Godfrey admitted especially after we saw you at that midnight fire works party"

You saw that she asked quickly but how

Oh we had seen the show every night for a week It was its failure to come off last night which first told us something was wrong'

Well,' said Miss Vaughan, with a deep breath, sitting down again and motioning us to follow her example, it seems to me that you have a story to tell, too' But I'll tell mine first. Where shall I begin'"

Begin,' I suggested, "at the moment when you first suspected the plot."

That was when you were telling me of Fred's arrest. When you told me of the handkerchief and then of the finger prints, I knew that someone was plotting against him. And then, quite suddenly, I thought of something"

You jumped up," I said, "as though you were shot, and ran to the bookcase over there and got down that album of finger prints, and found that Swain's were missing. That seemed to upset you completely"

It did, and I will tell you why My father for many years had been a collector of finger prints. All of his friends were compelled to contribute, and whenever he made a new acquaintance he got his prints, too, if he could He believed that one's character was revealed in one's finger prints It was [illegible] but it was for some reason distasteful to Senor Silva He never refused to allow prints to be made of his fingers but he pooh-poohed my father's theories and they used to have many arguments about it One particularly hot argument Senor Silva made the assertion that he could hypnotise suggestions at Mahbub to register prints he desired [illegible] had been manipulated by him when he was a [illegible] only a second [illegible] prints were taken [illegible] said that if Senor Silva could show me proof of that assertion he would never look at finger printes [illegible] Senor Silva asked for a week [illegible] study of the prints [illegible] upon his return [illegible] of that time the [illegible] It was a most extraordinary [illegible] Senor Silva father and [illegible] table yonder under the [illegible] book of prints before [illegible] was placed at a little [illegible] corner with his back to [illegible] Senor Silva proceeded to hypnotise him It took only a moment for he could hypnotise Mahbub by pointing a finger at him He said Mahbub was a splendid subject, because he had hypnotised him hundreds of times and had him under perfect control Then he placed an ink pad on the table in front of him—nothing else My father wrote his name and the date upon the top sheet of a pad of paper, and Senor Silva placed it before Mahbub Then he sat down with us selected a page of prints, and asked us to concentrate our minds upon it. At the end of a few moments, he asked me to bring the pad from before Mahbub. I did so and we found the prints upon it to be identical with those on the page we had been looking at My father touched them with his finger and found that they were fresh, as the ink smeared readily His name was on the corner of the page where he had written it There could be no doubt that in some way Mahbub had been able to duplicate the prints.

"Senor Silva repeated the experiment with another set of prints and then with another I think there were six altogether and every one of them was successful

"Was Swain's one of them'" asked Godfrey

"No but when Mr Lester told me that Fred was suspected because of those finger prints, the thought flashed into my mind that if Senor Silva and Mahbub could imitate those of other people, they could imitate Fred's, too, and when I looked at the album and found that sheet torn out I was sure that was what had happened"

"And so you decided to stay in the house, to win Senor Silva's confidence by pretending to become a convert and to search for evidence against him," I said. "That was a brave thing to do, Miss Vaughan"

"Not so brave as you think," she objected, shaking her head "I did not believe that there would be any real danger, with the three servants in the house. Only at the last did I realize the desperate nature of the man

She stopped and shivered slightly.

"Tell us what happened," I said.

"It was on Sunday afternoon," she continued, "that I went to Senor Silva and told him that I had decided to carry out my father's wish, renounce the world, and become a priestess of Siva. I shall never forget the fire in his eyes as he listened—they fairly burned into me."

"Ah'" said Godfrey "So that was it'"

She looked at him inquiringly.

"Except upon hypothesis," he explained, "that action on your part would have embarrassed Silva, and he would have tried to dissuade you. He had left him by your father's will this valuable place and $1,000,000. If money had been all he sought, that would have satisfied him, and he would have tried to get rid of you. That he did not—that his eyes burned with eagerness when you told him of your decision—proves that he loved you and wanted you also."

A brighter color swept into Miss Vaughan's cheeks, but she returned his gaze bravely.

"I think that is true," she assented, in a low voice. "It was my suspicion of that which made me hesitate—but finally I decided that there was no reason why I should spare him and let an innocent man suffer for him"

"Especially when you loved the innocent man," I added to myself but managed to keep the words from my lips

"As soon as I told him of my decision," Miss Vaughan continued, "he led me to the room where the crystal sphere is, placed me on the divan, sat down opposite me, and began to explain to me the beliefs of his religion. Meditation, it seems, is essential to it, and it was by gazing at the crystal that one could separate one's soul from one's body and so attain pure and profound meditation"

"Was that your first experience of crystal gazing'" Godfrey asked

"Yes both he and my father had often tried to persuade me to join them They often spent whole nights there But it seemed to me that the breaking down of father's will was due to it in some way, I grew to have a fear and horror of it, and so I always refused"

"The change in your father was undoubtedly directly traceable to it," Godfrey agreed "During those periods of crystal gazing, he was really in a state of hypnosis, induced by Silva, with his mind bare to Silva's suggestions, and as these were repeated, he became more and more a mere echo of Silva's personality That was what Silva desired for you, also."

"I felt something of the sort, though I never really understood it,' said Miss Vaughan, "and as I sat there on the divan that Sunday afternoon, with his burning eyes upon me, I was terribly afraid. His will was so much stronger than mine, and besides, I could not keep my eyes from the crystal. In the end, I had a vision a dreadful vision

She pressed her hands to her eyes, as though it was still before her

"The vision of your father's death" I questioned

She nodded

"With Swain as the murderer?"

"How did you know'" she asked, astonished

"Because he induced the same vision in me the next evening But don't let me interrupt"

"I don't know how long the seance lasted," she continued, "some hours, I suppose, for it was dark when I again realized where I was. And after dinner there was another, and then at midnight he led me to the roof and invoked what he called an astral benediction—a wonderful, wonderful thing. . . ."

Godfrey smiled drily.

"You were overwrought, Miss Vaughan," he said, "and straight from a spell of crystal gazing. No wonder it impressed you. But it was really only a clever trick."

"I realize, now, that it must have been a trick," she agreed, "but at the time it seemed an unquestionable proof of his divine power When it was over, I had just sufficient strength of will remaining to tear myself away from him and gain my own room and lock the door"

"You mean he tried to detain you'"

"Not with his hands But I could feel his will striving to conquer mine. Even after I was in my room, I could feel him calling me In the morning, I was stronger I lay in bed until nearly noon trying to form some plan, but I began to fear that I must give it up. I realized that after a few more nights like the night before, I should no longer have a will of my own that what I was pretending would become a reality I decided that I could risk one more day—perhaps two, but I felt very weak and discouraged You see, I did not know what to look for, or where to look I wanted evidence against him, but I had no idea what the evidence would be I wanted to search his room, but I had not been able to because he was scarcely ever out of it, except when he was with me, and, besides, Mahbub was always squatting in the little closet next to it.

I got up at last, and after breakfast he met me here in the library He suggested another seance, but I pleaded a headache and he walked with me about the grounds. I remembered that you were to come in the evening, Mr Lester and I determined to leave you with him on some pretext, and search his room then I told him you were coming, that I had asked you to take charge of my affairs, and it was then he told me of the legacy he believed my father had left him, adding that whether the legacy should stand or not was entirely in my hands. Then I began to feel his influence again, and managed to excuse myself and go indoors.

"You know what happened in the evening Mr Lester As soon as I left you, I flew to his room, determined to search it at any cost. But I was scarcely inside when I heard the outer door open, and I had just time to get behind the curtains in one corner, when someone entered Peering out, I saw that it was Mahbub. He looked about for a moment and then sat down on the divan folded his feet under him, and fell into a contemplation of the sphere I scarcely dared to breathe I was always afraid of Mahbub," she added, "far more so than of Senor Silva About Senor Silva there was at least something warm and human, but Mahbub impressed me somehow as a brother of the snake, he seemed so cold and venomous"

You know he was dead'" I asked, as she paused

Time to Practice Economy.

From Commerce and Finance

While there is general gratification over the manner in which the people of the United States are piling up wealth there is a feeling that the aftermath of our prosperity may afford occasion for eventual disappointment. President Hibben, of Princeton, last week sounded a warning against prevalent extravagance.

The spirit of high devotion which actuates the economy campaigns among the belligerent people of Europe stands out in exalted contrast to the orgy of waste and frivolity which seems to have invaded all sections of this country, from Palm Beach to Podunk No class of society appears to be exempt from the mania, whether it be the mechanic drawing record wages in a Bridgeport factory or the new millionaire giving ostentatious proof of his overnight affluence

Agricultural Iowa proudly asserts that she has an automobile for every 16 persons in the state North Carolina finds less occasion for boast in the reflection that she is spending annually a greater sum for automobile tires than for schools

Dry goods converters say that the scarcity of dyestuffs is accentuated by the perversity of fashion in turning unreservedly to colors simply because dyes are limited in supply and therefore, presumably not within the reach of all.

Only too often this extravagance takes a form that is vulgarly offensive. A short time ago an association of publishers held a banquet in one of the leading New York hotels Before the conclusion of the dinner one of the guests decided that it would be rather neat and somewhat unusual to have another banquet immediately following Being a person of wealth he determined that no artistic or gastronomic flourish should be lacking. At a late hour the chefs and waiters of another hotel were commissioned to minister to the jaded appetites of 40 guests. A company of vaudeville performers meanwhile had been engaged to provide histrionic accompaniment to the gluttonous proceedings. For sheer splendor of gustatory achievement and vinous frills nothing approximating this function has ever startled New York. The cost is said to have been $300 per plate, while the host was a Chicago gentleman prominently identified with a certain 'uplift" movement having for its object the attainment of "social justice."

HENRY VOLLMER'S DAUGHTER RESUMES HER MAIDEN NAME.

Davenport, Ia., April 15.—Mrs. Edward Palm, daughter of former Congressman and Mrs. Henry Volmer, has given up her boy husband, after months of protest against her irate parents' wishes, it is announced.

Mrs. Palm, it has been learned, has gone so far as to resume her maiden name, Miss Dorothea Vollmer. Palm and Miss Vollmer were married three months ago after a sensational elopement.

Palm was handed his passports from the Vollmer mansion several weeks ago, when his 19-year-old bride was sent to California to recuperate from her escapade. Father Vollmer, enraged at the elopment, refused to permit his son-in-law to remain under his roof. Palm was told to get out and make good.

Mrs. Palm has completely secluded herself from Davenport society. To every invitation to a social affair she sends her regrets. For amusements she has joined a swimming class, composed largely of working girls. She gets up early each morning and spends several hours in the class work under the direction of an instructor of the Y. M. C. A.

Recently she recovered from an attack of smallpox but still retains her beauty.

TURKISH AND PERSIAN TROOPS ATTACK SLAVS

Constantinople, April 14, (via London)—The following official statement was made public here today:

MISSISSIPPI CAUSES DAMAGE AT DUBUQUE

Overflow Cuts Off Roads Into Country and Inundates Some Farm Land.

Dubuque, Ia., April 15.—The Mississippi river late yesterday overflowed its banks here, flooding the lowlands and covering the roads leading out of the city and the farm lands bordering them. Midstream islands are submerged and it is estimated that thousands of dollars of damage has already been done. The river will reach a stage of 18 feet today, according to weather bureau figures.

IOWA CROP REPORT SAYS WINTER WHEAT IS DAMAGED

Des Moines, Ia., April 15.—The first weekly crop bulletin of the Iowa service, as issued this week, says:

"With the exception of severe sleet and ice storms early in February, favorable conditions prevailed during the winter, and while cold weather with freezing temperatures at night, has prevailed most of the time thus far this spring, farm work is progressing rapidly over the southern half of the state. Frost is not yet all out of the ground in the northern sections and the ground is, in most places, too wet to work. The bulk of the small grain seeding is finished in the southern counties and considerable plowing has been done for corn, with the soil in excellent condition. Reports vary as to condition of fall sown grains, but there is no doubt but what the crops have been seriously damaged in many localities and the acreage of winter wheat has been greatly reduced. Many reports indicate 15 to 30 per cent damage and 25 to 60 per cent reduction in acreage. Cold weather has kept grass and fruit buds almost dormant. All live stock is in a healthy condition and the spring pig crop will be large. A good warm rain would be very beneficial."

SPECIAL AGENT "FRIENDLY" TO COUNTY JAIL PRISONER

Ottumwa, Ia., April 15.—P. G. Crawford, a special state agent, called by the prosecution in the ouster suit against Sheriff Cremer, admitted on cross examination that he had friendly relations with Blanche Hall, a county jail prisoner, before and after she commenced serving her sentence.

He admitted that he had taken her food and money, and that he had called on her and written to her while she was confined in the county jail. Counsel for Sheriff Cremer also drew the admission from Crawford that he had taken her out from the jail for short walks on different occasions.

On [illegible] which Crawford admitted having written to the Hall girl was introduced in evidence by Cremer's counsel. The letter was addressed "Kind Friend," and signed, "Lovingly." The admission was also made by Crawford that he had taken the girl to [illegible] picture [illegible] [illegible] jailed to act as a stool [illegible] Cremer.

HAD ACCUMULATED $3,336 IN BEGGING OPERATIONS

Eagle Grove, Ia., April 15.—Sheriff Fisher's [illegible] who refuse to give [illegible] the sheriff had found $3,336.[illegible] sewed in lining of his trousers [illegible] off his mask [illegible] the officer that he had secured the money by begging.

The man gave his name as Elling Weeks. After being questioned by the sheriff, about his whereabouts Monday night when the garage here was burglarized and $66 taken from the cash register the old man answered the officer satisfactorily. It is believed by the sheriff that Weeks never was in Eagle Grove before.

Weeks explained to the officers that he had been a beggar for years. The money found on his person was the accumulation of several years' industrious begging he said.

[illegible] which had been put on the trail of the garage robber came upon Weeks several miles out of the city. He was taken here and lodged in jail.

IDA COUNTY MAN WILL BE RETURNED TO DENMARK

Ida Grove, Ia., April 15.—Sheriff McLeod has taken into custody a farm hand by the name of John Graveson. Graveson had been acting queerly for some time and the town marshal at Battle Creek phoned to the sheriff to come and help capture him. Graveson is a Dane by birth and came to this country about four years ago. Last fall he sold a team of horses to a livery man here and with the proceeds went to Sioux City to see the Interstate fair. He claims he was held up and robbed of all his money except $[illegible] which he says the holdup men allowed him to keep.

Graveson has three brothers, two in Ida county and one in Carroll county and as the county officials intended to start deportation proceedings two of the brothers came to Ida Grove and held consultation with the sheriff and promised to send him back to Denmark at their own expense.

WOMAN THINKS HUSBAND DEAD, SHE DIES FROM SHOCK

Montour, Ia., April 15.—[illegible] Millard, manager of the local telephone company and of the Montour plant of the Iowa Railway & Light company, was upon an electric light pole yesterday repairing a transformer. His wife stood nearby watching him at his work. Suddenly he screamed, his body stiffened and dropped from the pole to the ground 14 feet below. A current of electricity had passed through him.

Mrs. Millard started toward the body of her husband, then tottered and fell dead almost beside him. The shock of witnessing the apparent electrocution of her husband had broken her heart, the doctors said.

Mr. Millard was believed dead, also. To all appearances life had fled from his body, for the current was far more than strong enough to bring death.

An hour later he recovered consciousness. Physicians say he will live.

IDA GROVE BOY ATTACKED AND MANAGLED BY DOG

Ida Grove, Ia., April 12.—Clifford Clouse, 11 years old, was badly mangled by a dog Tuesday. The dog was in a wagon, and he boy was passing along when the animal sprang on top of him knocking him down, and tore the ligaments loose in both of his legs, and inflicting severe wounds on his body. The boy fell on his face, and his presence of mind in covering his face was all that kept the enraged animal from mangling his features. Several people in the postoffice heard the boy's cries for help and drove the dog away.

IDA COUNTY LABORER MAY PARTICIPATE IN LARGE OHIO ESTATE

Two Boys, Long Wanderers, Find Their Father Left Property Worth $300,000.

Ida Grove, Ia., April 14.—Charles Watkins, a farm hand who has been making Ida county his home for a year or more, left the latter part of last week for Vermilion, Ohio, where he expects to participate in the division of an estate amounting to between $300,000 and $400,000.

When Watkins, now about 28 years of age, was 8 years old and his brother was 10 years old, they left home because their father contracted a second marriage, and went to New York city to live with an aunt. After her death Charles Watkins came west and has been traveling over the western states for more than 10 years, not as a "hobo" but as a laborer.

About 14 months ago he came to Ida Grove and hired out to one of the big stock feeders and farmers near this place. He has not been in communication with his old home and did not know of his father's death until recently. The elder Watkins died in San Francisco last October. The brother, who had remained in New York city, began a search for Charles Watkins and the two recently got in touch with each other.

A girl was born to the second marriage of the father and she has been in full possession of the estate as there was no will left. The two sons of the first marriage have been assured their claims are valid.

DENISON MEN WERE NOT EXECUTED IN CANADA

Chicago, April 14.—Official denial has been made by J. W. White, inspector of immigration agencies of the Canadian government, that William and Lewis Schoeder, of Iowa, had been executed or condemned as spies at Clavet, Sask., on March 24. Mr. White said that the story was not only untrue, but that such an execution or sentence would be impossible as persons were not being shot in Canada for treason or any other reason.

J. Bruce Walker, Canadian government immigration commissioner, acting in behalf of the Canadian government of the interior. Mr. White said investigated the report to discover its source and reported there could not have been any grounds for it. CUSTER ACTION STARTED AGAINST WAPELLO SHERIFF

Ottumwa, Ia., April 14.—The ouster suit against Sheriff C. C. Cremer was commenced yesterday in the district court before Judge N. A. Hobson. The case is being tried under the Cosson removal statute.

The first surprise of the long [illegible] promised by the defense came in the opening statement of the sheriff's counsel. His attorney asserted that the whole case was the outgrowth of a conspiracy hatched by Deputy Sheriff Doran in order that the latter might secure his chief's job.

Another reason assigned by counsel for Doran's activity in the case was that Doran had been reprimanded several times by Sheriff Cremer for attending cock fights and overindulgence in liquor.

Assistant Attorney General John Fletcher is helping County Attorney Daugherty in the prosecution of the charges. The state charges that Cremer misappropriated fees in his office.

When the charges were first made Cremer asked Doran to resign. Upon refusal, Doran was removed by this superior. Doran later filed nomination papers for the office of sheriff on the republican ticket.

The association pledges itself to oppose all candidates who are responsible for schemes or plans to increase taxation.

INDICATIONS OF MURDER IN MARSHALLTOWN DEATH

Marshalltown, Ia., April 14.—After having been missing for a month, and last seen in this city, the body of Henry Alexander, aged 46, of Gladbrook, Ia., was found last evening by boys in Linn creek in this city. When Alexander was last seen by his brothers he carried a large sum of money on his person. His pockets contained only 21 cents and relatives believe he was robbed and murdered. The coroner is investigating.

DEMAND PROOF OF PURPOSE TO MEET GERMAN PROMISES

Unequivocal Admission of Attack on Sussex and Punishment of U-Boat Captain Will Be Asked.

SHORT OF AN ULTIMATUM

President to Take Matter to Congress If Affairs Reach Breaking Point—Proof Held Conclusive.

Washington, D. C., April 14.—After a prolonged cabinet meeting today it was announced that a communication to Germany would go forward as planned probably within the next 48 hours. It was said the case was complete without the affidavits which arrived today on the steamer St. Paul.

The plan to present the American case came with the accumulation of evidence that not the Sussex, alone, but other ships as well, have been destroyed in violation of Germany's promises to the United States remained unchanged.

With the statement of fact will be a demand for evidence of Germany's good faith to make good her assurances. Nothing in the nature of a time limit will be attached, it was understood, which properly could be described as an ultimatum.

[illegible]

Take it to Congress.

[illegible] President Wilson [illegible] situation [illegible] where diplomatic [illegible] Germany no longer [illegible] to notify congress of his decision of giving a recital on of events.

Statements in [illegible] press dispatches from Paris to the effect that French government was in possession of documents which gave the name of the commander and the number of the submarine which damaged the Sussex were communicated to officials and were [illegible] with much interest. It was said at the state department that should the American embassy in Paris fail to report on the subject Ambassador Sharp would be instructed to make inquiries of the French government.

Difficult to Arbitrate.

The proposal for a mixed commission to determine the facts in case a difference of opinion between Germany and the United States was received here with interest.

The administration does not consider however that there is any real controversy over the facts.

It was admitted at the state department that there was precedent for such a method of procedure before going to the extreme of severing diplomatic relations. It was intimated that there was a bare possibility that the United States before taking a final step might agree to such a proceeding but it was made clear that in any event an inquiry by a commission would not be equivalent to arbitration over the loss or endangering of American lives, or inconsistent with the refusal of the United States to arbitrate as set forth at the outset of the Lusitania negotiations.

Germany's Case Weak.

Assumption of Germany's admission of guilt is founded upon the marked similarity of the circumstances surrounding the explosion which damaged the Sussex and the attack upon a steamer in the channel described in the German note. The date time and rotations are practically the same. The damage done by the torpedo fired by the submarine and the explosion which wrecked the Sussex are identical. The course being followed by the Sussex and the vessel mentioned in the note are similar.

The only differences in the two versions, that of Germany based upon the report of a submarine commander, and that of the United States, founded upon reports of the British and French governments, affidavits of survivors, and investigation by American naval, diplomatic and consular officials, is found in the description of the Sussex and in the description of the vessel attacked by the submarine based upon a sketch made by the submarine commander while peering through his periscope.

The league's final session was featured by the adoption of resolutions demanding that congress enact legislation creating a national defense commission, a navy general staff and providing for an immediate increase in the navy.

LIFE EQUITY IN ART PRODUCTIONS SOUGHT

Artists Seek Law to Benefit By Increase In Value of Their Works.

New York, April 14.—The Artists League of America has begun a movement to arouse the interest of organizations of artists in the enactment of a law giving artists a life time equity in their paintings. This would protect painters whose works greatly increase in value in their lifetime.

The idea was suggested because of the experience of Ralph A. Blakelock, one of whose paintings was recently sold to the Toledo, Ohio, museum for $20,000. Blakelock sold it 20 years ago for $50. For 16 years he has been an inmate of sanatoriums and asylums. A similar movement was started in France, but was discontinued when the war began.

AUTO TRAIN FIRED UPON

Bandits Attack Supply Trucks But Are Driven Off By Soldiers After Short Fight.

General Pershing's Camp at Front, April 12, (via aeroplane to Chihuahua, April 13, via El Paso Junction) April 14 —About 40 mounted men believed to be Villistas of General Tarango's command attacked last night an auto supply train and were driven off after a short fight. There were no American casualties. One Villista was killed

General Pershing yesterday moved his camp south, penetrating far into Villa territory, where he found numerous constitutionalist detachments under General Garza, who gave all the Americans friendly greeting and cooperation. Aeroplanes, which were first to reach this new front yesterday, all had remarkable adventures, but all came through safely

General Pershing traveled here in an automobile train of supply trucks, which made a record breaking trip.

The fight, which occurred about 9 o'clock last night, was several miles in the rear in the autos carrying General Pershing and his escort. It lasted about 20 minutes. When the bandits tried to capture one truck company, the Americans poured in five volleys, which ended the fight completely There were two attacks, the first a slight one and directed against a forward truck The last attack was a rush against the other trucks, during which bullets flew against the automobiles and poured through the brush which covered the mesa.

Made Two Attacks.

The bandits seemed to think the cutting off of the rear truck would be easy, because some of them got within a few feet of it before the Americans, who were withholding their fire, cut loose. The American soldiers thought they hit some of the bandits

Harry Gosnear, of the auto truck train, a resident of Philadelphia, got a bullet through his hat.

At the constitutionalist camp, within a few miles of the scene of the fight it was reported that three bandits were killed during the first part of the week Lieut. A. R. Christie of the aero squad commanded the men in the fight

Capt T F. Godd, of the aero squad who has command of the truck in front, formed his men to attack the bandits but the fight was over too quickly for his men to get into action

The first car attacked carried personal effects and food for General Pershing and his staff

FIND CONSPIRACY IN TOBACCO TAX FRAUD

ndictments Will Be Asked—Evidence of Graft Found In Many Cities.

Washington, D. C. April 14 — The government's investigations at New York, of charges of collusion between deputy internal revenue collectors and tobacco manufacturers and dealers recently arrested in the alleged $20,000,000 internal revenue frauds, has reached a stage, officials here have been informed, where indictments charging conspiracy may be asked in the case of a number of deputy collectors

The investigation, it is said, extends to Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and other cities and a thorough inquiry is now being made to determine whether deputy collectors at those points were in collusion with the tobacco manufacturers, who are charged with having evaded the payment of revenue to the government for 15 years or more.

An effort is being made also to determine whether deputy collectors involved in the New York cases, knew of the alleged activities of deputies in other cities, where the investigation now is in progress.

NAVY MONEY WASTED LEAGUE IS ADVISED

Lack of General Staff Blamed For Misuse of Funds By E. K. Roden.

Washington, D. C. April 14.—To the lack of a general naval staff was attributed the unpreparedness of the American navy and its want of battle efficiency by E K Roden, of Scranton, Pa., in an address at today's session of the navy league of the United States.

Mr. Roden declared that with an appropriation no greater than that expended by the United States, Germany has built up a navy 30 per cent greater in combined units, but as a whole more modern in construction and this he attributed to the fact that the German navy is headed "by a tried out, efficient general staff."

He asserted that although during the past 15 years congress has appropriated more than $1,500,000,000 for the navy, a sum greatly in excess of that by any other power except Great Britain, yet at the present time our navy is rated as a fourth class power

The speaker said that the act of congress of last year creating the office of chief of naval operations has provided only "a skeleton of a form, stripped of all substance."

HOLD BOMB SQUAD AND SEIZE PLANT

Federal Secret Service Men Get at Bottom of Steamer Disasters—Startling Revelations Are Made.

New York April 14 Detectives who yesterday arrested four Germans charged with placing bombs on ships carrying war munitions to the entente allies today sought evidence involving "a well known German," who is alleged to have supplied a $10,000 fund to finance the fire bomb conspiracy They sought also the arrest of the chemist who did the chemical work in the manufacture of the bombs The name of neither of these men has yet been revealed by the police

Four employees of the Hamburg-American and North German Lloyd steamship companies here are under arrest charged with attempted arson, either in making bombs or taking part in the conspiracy

Four Under Arrest.

The men under arrest are

Ernst Becker, 32, born in Germany, electrician on the steamer, Kaiser Friedrich Der Grosse, said by the police to have confessed to manufacturing hundreds of bomb cases.

Capt Charles von Kleist 67 years old born in Germany, superintendent of the New Jersey Agricultural and Chemical company, of Hoboken, N J., who has confessed, it is asserted 'that fire bombs" were loaded in his company's place of business.

Capt Otto Wolpert 44 superintendent of the Atlas line piers of the Hamburg-American line who is accused of having received the completed bombs

Capt Lamo Poole 49 years old, superintendent of the Hamburg-American line piers in Hoboken N J who the police say has been active during the absence of Capt Franz von Papen former military attache of the German embassy in Washington to the plant of the New Jersey Agricultural and Chemical plant and assisting in the distribution of the bombs

Von Kleist who claims to be a brotherinlaw of General Einzen of the German army who was killed in battle in December 1914 was the first to be placed under arrest He was said to have been instrumental in bringing to police headquarters the men accused as conspirators with him

"We have invaded the haunts of the men who are responsible for the fires and explosions on steamships sugar carrying ships both at port and at sea" declared Captain Tunney, of the bomb squad in telling of the seizure at the chemical plant of 200 bombs of the type said to have been used in the attempted destruction of vessels. The arrests are the result of an investigation which has been conducted by federal and city authorities since last June when the French government complained to the state department at Washington that unexploded bombs had been found in sugar bags aboard the steamship Kirkwald according to the police, admitted that it was one of those made by him.

Backed By Rich Man.

Becker, the police say has confessed that his bomb factory was located on the steamship Kaiser Friedrich Der Grosse The containers made by him, he is reported to have asserted, were delivered to Von Kleist at the chemical plant and to be distributed to men who placed them aboard ships It is believed the bombs also were shipped to various parts of the United States frequently in suit cases as ordinary baggage

Captain Tunney declared funds for the manufacture of the bombs were supplied by a wealthy man whose identity he refused to divulge He said he was told details of the plot last October by Lieut Robert Fay, already under indictment in connection with alleged plots against steamships The failure of many of the bombs to explode greatly chagrined the persons responsible for their manufacture and distribution, Tunney and Fay told him This resulted in dissension which aided the police in obtaining information, he asserted.

The bombs were composed of two shells, the outer of aluminum and the inner of zinc The inner shell was filled with a strong acid, the police say, which after 70 hours hours, would eat its way through the zinc and ignite the powder or other explosive in the outer shell The resulting explosion, according to fire department experts, would have been of tremendous force, and if two or more occurred simultaneously in a vital part of the ship they would have blown out the side plates and caused the vessel to sink at sea.

Since January, 1915, fires and explosions have occurred on more than a score of ships at this port under suspicious circumstances. Many of them were attributed to spontaneous combustion. The only explanation given by the police for the failure of the explosives to cause greater destruction was that the chemicals used in loading the bombs were of an inferior quality.

Because of the nature of the cases against them, the specific charge against the four men under arrest is attempted arson.

TROOPS TO REMAIN; PREPARE TO FIGHT; FEAR EOR LIVES OF CAVALRY COLUMN

"Is America Prepared To Fight For Humanity?" Asks President; "Yes" Is The Thundering Reply

"These are days that search men's hearts. These are days that discredit selfish speech. These are days that ought to quiet ill-considered counsel These are days when all the moral standing of mankind are about to be finally tried out. And the responsibility is with us, gentleman, with us democrats, because the power for the time being is ours to say whether America under our leadership shall hold those eternal balances even or shall let some malign influence depress one balance and lift the other till we shall look around and see who stands for the old visions of liberty and whose eyes are still open to those spiritual images conveyed at our birth" —Woodrow Wilson

Washington, D. C. April 15.—President Wilson, speaking at a Jefferson day banquet of democrats from all parts of the country here last night, prayed that the United States would not be drawn into a quarrel, not of its own choosing, but asked if the people were ready to go in where the interests of America were coincident with the interests of humanity and have the courage to withdraw when the interests of humanity have been conserved. He was interrupted by cheers and shouts of "Yes."

During his address the president had mentioned the European war and the Mexican question without intimating what were his plans in either of the problems confronting the United States

He declared that in the present situation the responsibility was with the democratic party, because that party controls the government, and that "It is for us" to hold the balance even and not to allow malign influence to depress one side or the other.

Calls Republicans Provincial.

Most of the speech was devoted to reviewing the achievements of the democratic party during the past three years, and to a criticism of the republicans as the party with a "provincial spirit."

The president asserted that the nation was better prepared than ever before to show how America can lead the way along the spirit of light

The president declared that he was not interested in personal ambition, nor even enthusiastic over party success, but that he was interested in seeing the load depressing humanity lifted. He mentioned none of the republican leaders by name, but when he spoke of ambitious men there were shouts of "T. R."

What the nation demands now, the president said, is service, essentially nonpartisan, not only in consideration of foreign affairs, but in domestic affairs as well

Referring incidentally to Mexico, he told how a man had urged that trustees for that nation's welfare be chosen, and of his reply that no nation had achieved real prosperity and happiness for its people through a trusteeship imposed on it from abroad

High Officials Hear Him.

It was the first speech of a political nature the president had made for several months and was delivered before an audience including nearly all the members of his cabinet, democratic members of the Senate and House, democratic state chairmen from many states and other high officials of the nation and states gathered to attend the annual banquet of the Common Counsel club

The president said, in part

"One of the things that have seemed to me most to limit the usefulness of the republican party has been its provincial spirit, and one of the things which has immortalized the influence of Thomas Jefferson has been that his was the spirit of humanity exemplified by the people of America. Thomas Jefferson was a great leader of Americans, because he understood the spirits of men Some men can be led by their interests All men can be led by their affections. Some men can be led by covetousness All men can be led by the visions of the mind

"The only way we can honor Thomas Jefferson is by illustrating his spirit and following his example. His example was an example of organization and concerted action for the rights of men first in America and then by America's example everywhere in the world The thing that interested Jefferson is the only thing that ought to interest us. No American who has caught the true historic enthusiasm of this great country that we love can be proud of it merely because it has accumulated great material wealth and power. The pride comes in when we conceive how that power ought to be used.

Prepared to Lead.

"As I have listened to some of the speeches tonight the great feeling has come into my heart that we are better prepared than we ever were before to show how America can lead the way along the paths of light. Take the single matter of financial statistics of which we have very recently become precisely informed The mere increase in the resources in the national banks of this country in the last 12 months exceeds the total of the resources of the Deutscher Reichsbank, and the aggregate resources of the national banks of the United States exceed by $3,000,000,000 the aggregate resources of the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank of Russia, the Reichsbank, the Bank of The Netherlands, the Bank of Switzerland and the Bank of Japan.

"Under the provincial conceptions of the republican party this would have been impossible Under the world conceptions of those of us who are proud to follow the traditions of Thomas Jefferson, it has been realized in fact, and the question we have to put to ourselves is this, 'How are we going to use this power?'

"There are only two theories of government, my fellow citizens one is that power should be centered in the control of trustees who should determine the administration of all economic and political affairs That is the theory of the republican party. A careful hand has picked that body of trustees; the other theory is government by responsible and responsive servants of the great body of citizens able to understand the common interests coming in direct and sympathetic touch with the common desire and the common need. The peculiarity of those who think in the terms of trusteeship is that their thinking always squares with the preferences of the powerful and never squares with the lessons of history Trusteeship Flayed.

"I was talking one day with a gentleman who was expounding to me the very familiar idea that somebody—I dare say he would have referred to name the persons—should act as guardians and trustees for the people of the neighboring republic of Mexico. I said: 'I defy you to show a single example in history in which liberty and prosperity were ever handed down from above. Prosperity for the great masses of mankind has never sprung out of the soil of privilege. Prosperity and right prosperity and liberty, have never come in favor, they have always come by right' And the only competent expounders of right are the men who covet the opportunity to exercise it. When I see the crust even so much as slightly broken over the heads of a population which has always been directed by a board of trustees, I make up my mind that I will trust not only my arm, but my heart in the aperture and that only by crushing every ounce of power that I can use shall any men ever close that opening up again.

"Wherever we use our power we must use it with this conception always in mind that we are using it for the benefit of the persons who are chiefly interested and not for our own benefit."

BRITISH DRIVE TURKS BACK; ARTILLERY DUEL AT VERDUN

London, April 15—Defeat of the Turkish forces in Mesopotamia by the British was reported officially In an engagement on the Tigris, the Turks were driven back from one and one-half to three miles.

The text of the statement says:

"General Nake reports that on the afternoon of April 12 our forces on the right (south) bank of the Tigris forced back the enemy's advanced lines over a distance varying from one and one-half to three miles.

"To do this they had to cross an inundated belt intersected by deep cuts, from 500 to 1,200 yards wide, extending from the Tigris to the Umm-El-Brahm marsh.

"On the left bank water from the marshes had been driven by a northwest gale into some of the enemy's trenches at Sannay Yat. The enemy was heavily punished as he took refuge from the flood in the new position."

The announcement of the British victory came at a time when the public was beginning to fear efforts to relieve the force of General Townshend at Kut-El-Amara were doomed to failure, owing to the check suffered by the relieving army a few days ago and the conditions brought about by floods.

Many military writers in England believed the floods had made the relief of General Townshend almost an impossibility, but today's official report shows that, instead of hindering the British, the high water has helped the forces of Lieut. Gen. Gorringe in one of the most difficult tasks undertaken by the British army. Each mile the Turks are forced back makes the British operations easier. As they approach Kut-El-Amara the Turks are compelled to defend a wider front. In view of today's news therefore, the prospect of rescuing the army at Kut-El-Amara is regarded as better than it has been for some time.

2,500 CARRANZA TROOPS MENACE SUPPLY LINE

Force Ostensibly Advancing to Aid In Campaign Against Bandits Is Viewed With Suspicion By American Officers Who Are Shifting Forces Southward to Strengthen Lines of Communication In Anticipation of Possible Attack—Situation Regarded as Critical.

[From The Tribune Bureau.]

Washington, D. C., April 14.—President Wilson has told close advisers that the American troops will not leave Mexico unless Villa is taken. It is felt here that possibilities of placating Carranza are doubtful and there is growing talk of calling out National Guard forces.

American troops are to stay in Mexico until Villa is run down, or at least, until further effort to "get him" has been made.

The president has made up his mind not to pull out the troops.

On the other hand efforts will be made to appease Carranza through negotiations. It is hoped that some sort of an understanding can be patched up.

One possibility is an agreement to quit Mexico if Villa is not taken in a given time, such as 60 or 90 days.

Army Free to Act.

When Secretary Baker left the cabinet meeting he said there was "absolutely no change in the Mexican situation," and that the status of the American troops was the same."

Secretary Baker said today there had been as yet a change in General Funston's orders, but declined to discuss questions of policy raised by the Carranza note. The border commanders' hands were entirely free, he said, to make any necessary disposition of the 30,000 men under his command.

Dispatch of troops to strengthen the supporting lines or the shifting of border forces to places best adapted to eventualities are matters of which General Funston himself is the only judge, in the war department's view.

Official advices giving details of the fight at Parral where a detachment of 140 American cavalrymen were attacked by citizens are still anxiously awaited

BORDER GUARDS HELD IN READINESS FOR CRISIS

El Paso, Tex April 15—More than 19,000 United States regulars are guarding the Mexican border from Brownsville, Tex., to San Diego, Cal., today, while hurried troop movements southward from Columbus, N. M., show that the line of communications reaching over 400 miles into Mexico to the advance guard of General Pershing's expeditionary force, is being rapidly strengthened to meet any emergency. American scouts are watching the Pulpit Pass, which leads from Sonora into the Casas Grandes district of Chihuahua state for the appearance of General Arnalfo Gomez, commanding a body of 2,500 Carranzista infantry and cavalry. General Gomez is awaiting orders from the Mexican minister of war, Gen. Alvaro Obregon, to move into Chihuahua for the announced purpose of taking up the pursuit of Villa. In the event of trouble with the de facto government, General Gomez would be in position to strike the line of American communications at Casas Grandes

OFFICERS ARE INFORMED OF DANGER; SOLDIERS ENTRENCH.

Columbus, N M, April 15—Commanders of American troops along the American line of communication are being kept informed as to the progress of diplomatic relations between the United States and the Carranza government it was learned today.

Unofficial reports reaching here indicated that the number of roving bands of Mexicans between here and Casas Grandes is increasing daily. However, General Gomez with 4,000 Carranzistas, four pieces of artillery and 12 machine guns was reported today to be a few miles west of the motor supply route between Boca Grande and Ascension

Two army air scouts left here today for an unannounced destination.

Barbed wire entanglements have been thrown up at Colonia Dublan, Ascension and Boca Grande and additional entrenchments and small rifle pits have been dug.

Fear Advanced Column May Have Been Cut to Pieces by Mexicans

Washington, April 14—Special Agent Rodgers, at Mexico City, telegraphed today that "a few people" were killed on both sides in the fighting Wednesday at Parral. He mentioned no numbers.

Washington April 15.—Deep anxiety was felt in official circles today over the fate of Major Tompkins and his little force of United States cavalry attacked in Parral, Mex., on Wednesday

Known to be outnumbered, perhaps beleaguered in a district notoriously anti-American, it was feared that the troopers might be in grave danger. Lack of information from the isolated detachment intensified the anxiety for their safety

General Funston today reported to the war department that he had received no word from General Pershing on the fighting Wednesday at Parral, but that he is continuing to press for information.

Severe Battle Reported.

Mexican Consul Andrew Garcia had no further information than was contained in the message from General Obregon.

There are unconfirmed reports that the battle in Parral was more desperate than indicated in the Mexican official advices and that it lasted for three hours. One report had it that more than 100 Mexican civilians and Carranza soldiers were killed and wounded and that one American soldier was killed and several wounded. The Americans were said to have used a machine gun in the battle.

The advance guard, which met the unexpected attack in Parrall, probably has passed the Chihuahua-Durango line and now is in a district where Villa has a strong following and where there is little love for the "Gringo."

From different sections of lower Chihuahua come vague reports of disorders arising from economic conditions and the de facto government is having difficulty in maintaining order.

A dispatch from Mexico City, the latest information obtainable from Mexican sources regarding the Parral affair, says:

"American soldiers and the townspeople of Parral engaged in a pitched battle at 1 o clock Wednesday, according to a report received here this evening from General Obregon, secretary of war

"In the fighting, one American soldier was killed and many wounded. Several Mexicans were wounded.

"The populace of Parral, according to General Obregon, organized a mob and protested loudly against the force of American soldiers entering the Mexican town without permission. These authorities notified the commanding officer that the troops should leave immediately, and the officer seemed about to acquiesce when the populace attacked, despite the efforts of the municipal authorities to frustrate them

"After the fight the American force retired from the town"

Carranza's Own Version.

A dispatch from General Carranza to his ambassador in Washington, relating the incident at Parral, concludes:

"Call on the secretary of state and advise him that the occurrence was due to the unwise action of the American commander in having entered Parral without the permission of authorities, violating the orders of that government forbidding the occupation of towns by American forces.

"Please cause the secretary of state to see that it is unwise for American troops to remain any longer on our soil, as more serious incidents than the present one, which we must avoid at all costs, may develop.

"Please make use of any arguments you may deem advisable to put an end to the situation created by the presence of American troops in our territory. I will keep on advising you through the foreign office of any further incidents."

Consul General Edwards at El Paso telegraphed today his reports indicating there had been no further fighting with American troops since the affair at Parral Wednesday night. Counsul Edwards said Americans reaching El Paso from the interior of Mexico brought varied rumors of the fighting at Parral, but no confirmation of the report that 160 Mexicans were killed. All his information was that the Americans retired from Parral Wednesday and there was no news of further hostilities

Berlin, April 14, (via London), April 13—What is characterized as a recrudescence of the spirit of the blue laws is observed in some German cities. In Munich the police have been authorized to act as censors of women's dress and have been ordered to arrest all women who are dressed too conspicuously. The first victim of these instructions was a young woman who was on her way to meet an officer She was taken to a police station and compelled, according to the newspaper reports, to wipe the powder and rouge from her face before being permitted to leave the station.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried, some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

LITTLE "NO GOOD" LAKE ABODE OF EVIL SPIRITS

Strangest Body of Water in the United States—It Comes and Goes Regularly.

Port Angeles, Wash.—The most singular body of water in the United States is that of a small lake in the western portion of the state of Washington, known by the Chinook Indians as "Nao Skookum"—meaning "no good," To the inhabitants of the Indian villages this lake is a great mystery as well as a source of great fear, for they believe the underground crevices that feed the lake are full of "evil spirits."

The lake covers perhaps fifty acres of ground and fish and waterfowl are more than plentiful—for about nine months of the year. North of the lake towers Mt. Olympus of the Olympic range, while to the south and west are the coast range of great hills.

In western Washington the rainy season usually lasts something like nine months and a week or so after the rain sets in "Nao Skookum" lake grows very much in circumference and in depth, but after a weeks dry weather its waters vanish, taking with them the fish and, so the Chinooks declare, the waterfowl, too. When the rain stops all the Indians in the neighborhood gather on the shore of the lake in order to get as much fish as possible while there is yet time.

Hour after hour the waters sink lower and lower, until the last of it drains down the great holes and crevices at the bottom of the lake. Underground openings of immeasurable length, and as yet untraced by human eye, take the water from the lake, till what was once the bottom of a deep body of water is open to the sky Then and there the superstitious Indians desert the vicinity of the lake, nor will they again go near it until the rain again comes and the waters return with a rush and fill almost to overflowing what scientists claim was once the crater of a volcano. When it is empty the Indians declare that the thunderous roars and groans issue from the great crevices in the lake's bottom and they will not venture near it, for "it is the voice of the evil spirits," they declare.

They again return to fish when the rain sets in and the waters surge quickly up the subterranean openings throwing up fish and great waves and —so the ignorant Indians claim—the waterfowl. In from thirty to forty hours where there had been a great bed of mud all is deep water and the lake of "Nao Skookum" is again sparkling in the sunlight.

Scientists explain the most singular occurrence by stating that the lake is connected by means of its underground openings with great bodies of water, some on a higher level, under the great snow capped peaks of the mountain ranges nearby, others on a lower level than itself, and that the ducks and other waterfowl come and go from the Pacific and Puget Sound. But no one can convince a Chinook of anything but that they are thrown up with the fish and rushing waters.

BEAR BITES HIS WOODEN LEG

Farmer Escapes When Locomotive Scares off the Beast.

Sunbury, Pa.—John Davidson, a Catawissa Mountain farmer, who lives near the town of that name, says he is glad he has a wooden leg, for it saved him serious hurts in a battle with a bear.

Davidson says he was riding horseback along the Susquehanna, at a point where the river skirts dense mountain growths, when he saw a black bear fishing in the river. It would dive down and come up with a fish in its mouth.

Angered by his approach, bruin dropped a fish and gave chase, but Davidson drew his revolver and fired. He missed and the animal came on after him and bit and clawed at his wooden leg.

He fired again and then a freight train approached on a railroad near by. This together with the tooting of the locomotives whistle, frightened the beast and it dropped to its feet and ambled off into the woods.

Four Inch Tires

HERE is another Overland Model. A brand new car at a brand new price. Many people prefer a car with the advantages of the larger and higher priced cars but that is smaller, lighter and more economical to run.

Model 75 is a comfortable, family car with virtually all the advantages of the very large cars at a price which is well within your reach.

The body is the latest full streamline design with a one-piece cowl.

It is handsomely finished in solid black with bright nickel and polished aluminum fittings.

Five adults can ride comfortably.

The tires are four inch all around because we believe in the advantage of large tires. They insure greater mileage and comfort than can be obtained from the smaller size used on other cars of similar specifications.

The motor is four-cylinder, long stroke bloc type, having a 3¾-inch bore and 5-inch stroke. Horsepower is 20-25. It is of the most modern design.

It has high-tension magneto ignition. This is the kind used on the most expensive cars.

The electric starting and lighting system is one of the most efficient on the market. It is of the two-unit type.

The electric switches are conveniently located on the steering column. This is the same arrangement used on the highest priced cars.

It has the easy working Overland clutch which any woman can operate. The pedals are adjustable for reach. The steering wheel is large and turns easily The brakes are large and powerful.

The rear springs are the famous cantilever type. These are probably the easiest riding and most shock absorbing springs ever designed. With these springs riding comfort is insured.

It has a one-man mohair top.

In short, there is everything that makes this car up-to-date and comparable with many cars costing considerably more money.

You will be delighted when you see it. And when you ride in it you'll know instantly that this is your ideal of a modern automobile at your idea of a moderate price.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs 'What's an inside bath?" you say Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day s waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which, if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result i poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from any druggist or storekeeper This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do. —Adv

Power of Lightning.

Lightning has been proved to have struck a building with a force equal to more than 12,000-horse power. A single horse power, in mechanical calculation is equivalent to raising a weight of 33,000 pounds one foot in a minute The force of lightning therefore has been proved to be equal to the raising of 384 000 000 pounds one foot in a minute This is equal to the united power of 12 of our largest steamers, being collectively 24 engines of 500-horse power each The velocity of electricity is so great that it would travel round the world eight times in a second

"Yes, Annie told me," and she shuddered slightly.

"The cobra, too, is dead," aded Godfrey "I agree with you, Miss Vaughan. There was a kinship between them—though the cobra turned against him in the end. How long did he sit there?"

"I do not know—but it seemed an age to me Finally, in despair, I had made up my mind to try to steal away, when I heard steps in the entry Mahbub slipped from the divan and disappeared behind the curtains, and then the door opened and Senor Silva and Mr. Lester entered. I saw, at once, that there was to be another seance, and that I could not escape, for Senor Silva sat down facing the corner where I was. I could only brace myself against the wall and wait It was a dreadful ordeal But it had its reward," she added with a smile

And what was "" I asked.

The discovery of the glove. Senor Silva suddenly switched on the lights, and I knew that the seance was over, but he had some difficulty in arousing you— the trance must have been a very deep one—and finally, leaving you lying on the divan he went to the wall, drew aside the hangings, and pressed his hand against a panel. A little door flew open, and I saw that there was a cupboard in the wall. He filled a glass with some liquid, pulled the hangings into place, and went back to you and made you drink it. It seemed to do you good "

"Yes," I said, "it brought me around at once And then?"

"And then, as soon as you went out together, I ran to the cupboard and looked into it But for a moment I was confused I saw nothing which seemed of any importance—some bottles and decanters and glasses, a glass tray or two, a pile of rubber gloves. I couldn't understand. I picked up one of the gloves and looked at it, but it was just an ordinary glove. Then farther back, I saw some others—their finger tips were stained with ink—and then another, lying by itself. I looked at it, I saw the patches on the finger tips I saw the stains—and then I understood I do not know how I understood or why—it was like a flash of lightning revealing everything And then as I stood there, with the glove in my hand, I heard Senor Silva returning "

She paused a moment, and I could see the shiver which ran through her at the recollection

It was not that I was afraid," she aid, 'it was that I seemed to be lost I let the draperies fall, ran to the divan and sat down before the sphere. I could think of nothing else to do I can still see his astonished face when he entered and found me sitting there

'I was waiting for you,' I said, trying to smile 'You remember I was to have another lesson tonight'

Yes,' he said, and looked at me, his eyes kindling

I was trembling inwardly, for suddenly I began to fear him, I knew that I must keep my head that I must not yield to his will, or I would be swept away

I thought Mr Lester would never go,' I said

He came to the divan and sat down close beside me, and looked into my eyes

Did the time really seem so long" he asked

It seemed very long,' I said

He gazed at me for another moment then rose quickly and turned off the light

Sit where you are,' he said, and I will sit here Fix your eyes upon the sphere and your mind upon the Infinite Mind so shall great wisdom come to you

I felt my will crumbling to pieces, I closed my eyes and crushed the glove within my hand, and thought of this man's villainy and of the part I must play if I were to defeat him His voice went on and on but gradually I ceased to hear it I was thinking of the glove, of escape, of Fred "

Yes, love is strong, I told myself, and it giveth to the dove the wisdom of the serpent, else how had this child come victorious from such an ordeal!

I do not know how long I sat there," Miss Vaughan continued, "but Senor Silva rose suddenly with an exclamation of impatience and switched on the light

There is something wrong,' he said, coming back and standing over me. Some hostile influence is at work. What is it"

I do not know,' I said 'I cannot help myself as I did last night.'

Something holds you to earth—some chain Perhaps it is your own wish

No no' I protested 'Let us try again

He switched off the light and sat down facing me, and again I felt his will trying to enter and conquer me And again I clasped the glove, and kept my mind upon it, thinking only of escape"

You can guess how we were leaning forward listening breathlessly to this narrative I fancied I could see her sitting there in the darkness, with Silva's evil influence visibly about her, but held at bay by her resolute innocence as Christian's shield of Faith turned aside the darts of Apollyon It was indeed, a battle of good and evil, the more terrible because it was fought, not with bodily weapons, but with spiritual ones

'At last, Senor Silva rose again," Miss Vaughan continued, "and turned on the lights, and I shivered when I met his gaze.

'You are defying me,' he said, very low 'But I will break you yet,' and he clapped his hands softly together.

"Mahbub appeared at the inner door, received a sharp order and disappeared again. A moment later, there was a little swirl of smoke from the door of his room, and a sharp, overpowering odor, which turned me faint.

'And then Senor Silva, who had been pacing up and down the room, stopped suddenly and looked at me, his face distorted.

"'Is it that?' he muttered. 'Can it be that?'

"And he strode to the curtain which hung before his secret cupboard and swept it back.

"I knew that I was lost. I sprang for the outer door, managed to get it open and set a foot in the hall, before he seized me. I remember that I screamed, and then his hand was at my throat—and I suppose I must have fainted," she added with a little smile, "for the next thing I remember is looking up and seeing Dr. Hinman."

I sat back in my chair with a long breath of relief. My tension during the telling of the story had been almost painful, and it was not until it was ended that I saw two other men had entered while Miss Vaughan was speaking. I was on my feet as soon as I saw them, for I recognized Goldberger and Sylvester.

"Simmonds telephoned me this morning that I was needed out here again," Goldberger explained. "But first I want to shake hands with Miss Vaughan."

"You have met Mr. Goldberger, Miss Vaughan," I said, as he came forward, "but Dr. Hinman didn't tell you that he's the cleverest coroner in greater New York."

"He doesn't really think so, Miss Vaughan," Goldberger laughed. "You ought to read some of the things he's written about me! But I want to say that I heard most of your story, and it's a wonder About that glove, now, Simmonds," he added, turning to the detective, "I'd like to see it—and Sylvester here is nearly dying to."

"Here it is," said Simmonds, and took it from his pocket and passed it over.

Goldberger looked at it, then handed it to Sylvester, who fairly seized it, carried it to the door, and examined it with gleaming eyes. Then, without a word, he took an ink pad from his pocket, slipped the glove upon his right hand, inked the tips of the fingers and pressed them carefully upon a sheet of paper From an inner pocket, he produced a sheaf of photographs, laid them beside the prints, and carefully compared them. Finally he straightened up and looked at us, his face working.

"Do you know what this does, gentlemen?" he asked, in a voice husky with emotion "It strikes at the foundation of the whole system of finger-print identification' It renders forever uncertain a method we thought absolutely safe' It's the worst blow that has ever been struck at the police!"

"You mean the prints agree with the photographs?" asked Godfrey, going to his side.

"Absolutely!" said Sylvester, and mopped his face with a shaking hand.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE END OF THE CASE.

To Sylvester, head of the identification bureau, it seemed that the world was tottering to its fall, but the rest of us, who had not really at the bottom of our hearts, perhaps, believed in the infallibility of the finger-print system took it more calmly And presently we went upstairs to take a look at the contents of Silva's secret cupboard When he had first come to the house, Miss Vaugh explained, he had been given carte-blanche in this suite of rooms He had them remodelled, installed, the circular divan and crystal sphere, selected the hangings, and at the same time, no doubt, caused the secret cupboard to be built

Its contents were most interesting There was a box of aerial bombs, which Godfrey turned over to Simmonds with the injunction to go and amuse himself For Sylvester's contemplation and further confusion were the gloves with which Sylva had managed his parlour mystification scheme, six pairs of them, and there was also the very simple apparatus with which the finger-print reproductions had been made—an apparatus, as Godfrey had suggested similar in every way to that used for making rubber stamps. There, too were the plates of zinc upon which the impressions of the prints had been etched with acid And, finally, there were various odds and ends of a juggler's outfit, as well as various bottles of perfumes, essences, and liquids whose properties we could not guess.

Godfrey looked at the gloves carefully, as though in search of something and at last selected one of them with a little exclamation of satisfaction

"I thought so," he said and held it up "Look at this glove, Sylvester You see it has never been used—there is no ink on it. Do you know what it is? It's the print of Swain's left hand"

Sylvester took it and looked at it

"It's a left hand all right,' he said "But what makes you think it is Swain's?"

"Because Silva expected to use both hands, till he learned that Swain had injured one of his But for that, the blood needed to make the prints would have come from the victim, and Silva would have worn this glove, too, but Swain's injury gave Silva a happy inspiration Wonderful man!" he added, half to himself

Goldberger and Simmonds went on into the inner room to arrange for the disposition of the body of Mahbub, but Godfrey and Miss Vaughan and I turned back together, for we did not wish to see the thug At her boudoir door Godfrey paused

"The case is clear," he said, "from first to last, provided you can supply us with a final detail, Miss Vaughan"

"What is that"" she asked

"Did you write that note to Swain in your own room?"

"Yes"

"And will you show me the table at which you wrote it?"

'Certainly" And she opened the door "Come in I wrote it at that little desk by the window"

Preparing For Death.

Rev E Morlae, in the Atlantic

The detail was infinite, but everything was foreseen Twelve men from each company were furnished with long knives and grenades. Upon these "trench cleaners,' as we called them, fell the task of entering the German trenches and caves and bombproofs, and disposing of such of the enemy as were still hiding therein after we had stormed the trench and passed on to the other side. All extra shoes, all clothing and blankets were turned in to the quartermaster, and each man was provided with a second canteen of water, two days of "iron rations," and 130 rounds additional, making 250 cartridges per man. The gas masks and mouth pads were ready emergency dressings were inspected, and each man ordered to put on clean underwear and shirts to prevent possible infection of wounds.

One hour before the time set for the advance, we passed the final inspection and deposited our last letters with the regimental postmaster Those letters meant a good deal to all of us and they were in our minds during the long wait that followed. One man suddenly began to intone the Marseillaise Soon every man joined in singing It was a very anthem of victory We were ready, eager and confident, for us tomorrow held but one chance—victory

Before Lorraine was united with France, in 1736, it belonged to the dethroned king of Poland Before that it belonged to Austria.

EASTER.

From the Daily Oklahoman.

Christian nations will observe the termination of the Lenten period. Throughout the Christian world will be heralded that "Christ is risen." It is a day of beautiful thoughts—the day is full of beautiful significance. It is a day of joy—a day of green things, of flowers and music.

Yet while there is only one Easter day, advanced religious thought teaches that every day should be an Easter day—that every day should be a bright star rising out of the night, which will not lessen any of the beautiful significance of Easter nor alter its observance in the days to come, but rather to intensify the joy that it has brought to all Christian people from the time of the world s redemption to the present day.

Magnificent pipe organs will give forth glorious notes—tens of thousands of voices will unite in the melody of Easter music—the spirit of resurrection will prevail, while from 10 times 10,000 pulpits will be told again that "Christ is risen."

EASTER GREETING TO ALL

An Easter suggestion by Cornelia W. Bull

This is the message of Easter day
The little bulb, awakening saith,
After its sleep that seemed like death,
and lifting its beautiful head—
There is no death,
There are no dead,
But I shall live forever and aye!
This is the meaning of Easter day.

An Easter hymn
Sing with all the sons of glory,
Sing the resurrection song!
Death and sorrow, earth's dark story,
To the former days belong,
All around the clouds are breaking,
Soon the storms of times shall cease,
In God's likeness, man awaking,
Knows the everlasting peace.

A blessed promise of everlasting life
"I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

A Winner, If—

At an Easter breakfast John D. Rockefeller, jr., once said

"The road to success is called Perseverance. Perserverance conquers everything. But—"

Mr Rockefeller, with a smile, took up an Easter egg.

"But," he added, "let us remember that a hen on an egg of porcelain perseveres.

Her Dear Thoughts.

Captain Turner, of the Mauretania, told in the smoking room of his ship an Easter story

'I once overheard a bride and bridegroom talking," he began "The bridegroom said, tenderly

"'A penny for your thoughts, my dear"'

"'A penny?' she replied, indignantly. 'Well, they'll cost you just $200 I was thinking of the Easter gown I'm going to order the minute we strike Paris.'"

Why Priscilla Fasts.

The fair Priscilla fasts through Lent,
No devotee before a shrine
Nor seeker on perfection bent
Shows such determination fine.

The fair Priscilla eats no meat,
She dines upon a crust of toast.
She does not motor along the street;
She walks more miles than she can boast

And thus she goes her daily rounds
In patience fasting What's the use"
Priscilla weighs 200 pounds
And says she simply must reduce Easter Prayer.

Father in heaven, we thank Thee,
For flowers that bloom about our feet,
For tender grass so fresh, so sweet,
For song of bird and hum of bee,
For all things fair we hear or see,
For blue of stream and blue of sky,
For pleasant shade of branches high,
For fragrant air and cooling breeze,
For beauty of the blooming trees.

For mother love and father care
For brothers strong and sisters fair,
For love at home and here each day,
For guidance lest we go astray
For this new morning with its light,
For rest and shelter of the night,
For health and food, for love and friends
For every thing His goodness sends,
Father in heaven, we thank Thee

"SCOPPIO DEL CARRO," THE QUAINT EASTER CEREMONY OF FLORENCE

Explosion of a Car Takes Place In Front of the Great Cathedral—Italy a Land of Elaborate and Interesting Easter Observances—Many Superstitious Beliefs Cherished In Connection With the Car Ceremony.

From the Washington Star.

Church customs and ceremonies at the Eastern season in every Christian land present a series of pictures that have a fascination for the student of history or religious progress apart from their picturesque features. As to the most important festival of the ecclesiastical year, in commemorating as it does the supreme event in the great tragedy that forms the foundation of the Christian faith, the culmination of the divine mission to sinful humanity, it is only natural that it should be celebrated with a great deal of pomp and solemnity, although it cannot be denied that in many instances the methods of celebration, the forms and ceremonies, can be traced back to secular and, in many instances, to pagan sources.

They represent, as a matter of fact, features of old time faiths and beliefs that, on account of their impressiveness and the boons they conveyed, the people were unwilling to abandon, and the early fathers of the church wisely adopted them in modified form and adapted them to the teachings of Christianity As an instance, may be quoted the attitude of St. Paul toward the altar erected by the Greeks to the "unknown God," which identity the apostle tactfully connected with the God whose word he had come to preach.

Italy, perhaps more than any other country, is the land of elaborate and interesting Easter ceremonies. From Rome, where the presence and participation of the supreme pontif lend special state and importance to all affairs of the church, to the humblest village, almost every community has its own peculiar customs and forms of ceremony for Easter, and many of them are intensely interesting on account of their picturesque originality and their religious or historical significance. All, however, have for their final object the impression on the human mind of the significance of the event that occurred nearly 2,000 years ago at Jerusalem, and in some way they are designed to emphasize the grave importance of the Savior's sacrifice on Calvary. All over Italy the custom prevails of priests going around Easter time blessing the houses with holy water, while the bishops go out in soleumn procession to bless the baptismal fonts

One of the most interesting ceremonies in connection with the celebration of Easter in Italy is the "scoppio del carro"—literally, the explosion of the car—which takes place on the square in front of the great Cathedral of Florence Easter Saturday of every year.

The ceremony is supposed to be in some way connected with the carrying of the holy fire from the Church of the Holy Apostles—one of the oldest in the city—to the cathedral The fire is produced with the aid of flint and steel, the flints used for the purpose having been brought from the holy sepulcher at Jerusalem during the crusades and carefully preserved and used every year for the same purpose, in the same church, for upward of 800 years.

The original car for this ceremony was furnished by a representative of the ancient Pazzi family, an early member of which, with great trouble, brought from the holy sepulcher at Jesusalem to Florence the holy fire with which the lamps in the "duomo" were lighted and which burn eternally in the sanctuary Previous to Easter the great cumbrous car framed with heavy timbers and mounted on four low massive wheels, which is kept in a three-story building in the Via del Prato, purchased by the city for the purpose—and in which all the floors have been removed and the entire front connected into a huge doorway—is redecorated for the occasion and covered with festoons of fireworks—squibs, crackers, Roman candles, etc., in red, white and green—and in its festive array makes quite an imposing appearance. In reality, however, it is a perfect piece of patchwork, each succeeding year's ceremony resulting in its partial destruction by fire and making its more or less complete restoration necessary

Drawn by four stately white oxen, kept for this sole purpose on the municipal farm, with gilded horns and crimson trauppings, and with attendants equally gorgeous of apparel, the car moves ponderously from its winter quarters to its appointed station opposite the great doors of the cathedral, which are thrown wide open. From a stand erected in front of the high altar a wire is stretched tightly to the car, and on this is mounted the "dove"—Columbina—a bird shaped wooden device, propelled by a concealed mechanism.

After the completion of the ceremonies connected with the lighting of the Easter candle at the sacred fire, an immense crowd being by this time assembled in the cathedral and on the plaza, at about 11:30 o'clock, the Archbishop of Florence begins the celebration of the mass, which is so timed that when the choir commences to chant the "Gloria in Excelsis Deo" the great bell of the cathedral sounds the first stroke of noon. This is the signal for every bell in the many churches in the city, silent under the strictest injunction since the preceding Thursday, to burst into sound, and throughout the city there prevails an indescribable clangor.

As the first stroke of the cathedral bell is heard a member of the pompieri, the city firemen, a detachmeat of whom has charge of this part of the ceremony as a precaution against accident, lights the fuse of the dove with sacred fire from the altar and sets it in motion. Trailing a hissing flame, it glides along the wire down the aisle, and, if all goes well, plunges into the waiting car and ignites the fireworks with which it is bedecked. This mission accomplished, the dove returns over its wire to the stand in front of the altar.

In the meantime the crowds in the cathedral and in the plaza have been eagerly watching the flight of the dove to the car and its return. If it travels straight and without interruption to its goal, successfully accomplishes its purpose and returns without hitch or delay to its station, all is well—a good year, bountiful crops and good fortune for the community are confidently anticipated. If, as sometimes happens, something goes wrong with the fiery bird, the fireworks fail to ignite freely, or some other misfortune attends Columbina's flight, woe and trouble are looked for during the following 12 months and the unfortunate constructor of the device is not only execrated by the populace, but his pay is withheld by the municipal authorities as a punishment for his failure.

There are many other superstitious beliefs cherished in connection with the ceremony. Some, waiting until the bells ring out and the first explosion is heard, wash their eyes at this moment in the belief that they will thereby be strengthened during the year. Mothers present with infants try to induce them to their first attempts to walk while explosion is in progress, believing thereby the little ones steps will be strengthened.

To the foreign visitor and the many of high rank, sometimes come to see the curious spectacle Queen Victoria on one occasion witnessed it from the Loggia del Bigallo a special point of view for the privileged—there is in the crowd gathers as much of interest as the ceremony. From all the neighboring villages, from other cities and even from the more distant mountainous regions the people flock, all wearing their characteristic and often variegated customes, packing the square in a solid mass, gay with the brilliant color, representative of all the ranks and classes that make up the population of this part of the country, silently waiting for the moment when the clanging bells shall announce the coming of the dove and eagerly watching to see whether the omens are propitious for the year to come.

After the fireworks on the car have been partially exploded the car is drawn to the corner of the street facing the Pazzi palace, where, according to an ancient custom, the remaining fireworks are exploded and the car then returned to its resting place until it shall again be required for the next Easter ceremony.

The present car, several of its predecessors having become a prey to the flames, was built in 1622, to the order of Cossimus Aloisi Pazzi, as an inscription it bears states. Another inscription tells us that Giovanni Cossimo de Pazzi had it restored in the 18th century at a cost of 131 scudi. Other inscriptions indicate work done on it at various times by different artisans, who, as a matter of pride for their work, are granted the privilege of inscribing their names on the interior panels.

The connection of the Pazzi family with the car and with the ceremonies attending the Easter celebration is a part of the history of Florence. The Pazzi originally were prominent among the merchant princes of the city and was one of the great mercantile houses of Europe. A member of the family who was on a crusade to the Holy Land spent Easter in Jerusalem, being a man of great physical strength was able to force his way to the tomb at the lighting of the holy fire in the sepulchre, and afterward to bear the taper he had lighted safely out of the crush.

This according to the story, he lighted to Florence, riding bareback his horse a great part of the distance the better to shield the precious fire from the wind. At one point the story himself made an attempt to extinguish it, but was successfully rebuffed by the doughty knight. He brought his prize safely to Florence and presented it to the baptistery, claiming as a right in recompense, the privilege each year of being the first to take a light from the sacred fire for the shrine at his home corner.

The present name of the family is due to his knightly ride from the Holy Land. People seeing the crusader approach backward on his horse thought him as "pazzo" (mad), and the Pazzi family had remained ever since.

Another scion of the family was prominently identified with the procession annual Easter ceremony of kindling the holy fire in the city He was a famous warrior and of great personal prowess and had command of the Tuscan contingent in the crusade of 1095. During the siege of Jerusalem he was the first to plant the banner of the cross on the battlements of the holy city In recognition of his feat he received from the leader of the crusade, Godfrey de Bouillon, a new coat of arms, commemorative of the act, and three pieces of the from the holy sepulchre

On returning to his native city he was received with great honor and presented the three flints—small, almond shaped stones—to the signori of the city, who kept them carefully and eventually deposited them in the baptistery, with the order that they be used at every Easter celebration in kindling the sacred fire Preserved in a crimson velvet bag, heavily embroidered with gold, they are still to be seen in the old church.

While the car is unquestionably an ancient institution in Florence, there is no authentic record of its origin, nor any reason given in the city's records for its use in connection with the Easter Saturday ceremony That it was in existence prior to 1478 is proved by the fact that one of the conspirators condemned to death and conspiracy against the Pazzi family was the forfeiture of the dignities and privileges, that of furnishing the car for the Holy Saturday ceremonies being expressly enumerated.

This only was conferred on the Guild of Foreign Wool Merchants, by whom it was for a time undertaken. But a few years later the Pazzi were pardoned and restored to all their former dignities and prerogatives that of furnishing the car and having the fireworks exploded in front of the palace was included among them and until 1863 they continued to provide the provision and maintenance of the quaint vehicle.

In that year, however, the head of the house expressed a desire to relinquish the honor and the responsibility, and the municipal authorities were unwilling that the ancient ceremony should be discontinued for fear of provoking dissatisfaction among the people who had become accustomed to regarding the blessing of the car as part of the Easter celebration and as a basis for auguries for the coming year. They consequently determined to continue the custom and in 1866 the Pazzi family transferred to the municipal authorities the car and sufficient securities to furnish an income of 2,000 lire per annum to defray the expenses of the annual explosion.

While the people of our time may feel inclined to belittle some of these peculiar old ceremonies connected with religious celebrations that are performed in the cities of the old world, there is no question as to the fact that of their symbolism on the less matter-of-fact people of those countries and to them, religion associated with ceremonial forms, symbols and ceremonies appeal greatly by power and influence, and that the symbols and ceremonies are the substantial exemplification, they are deeply impressed with the great truths which the church seeks to inculcate, and the impressions derived from the celebrations are factors of no small importance in maintaining the dignity, the authority and the reference that are, in older countries, inseparable from the church

Feud of the Raccoon-Loop

By Robert Adger Bowen

Author of "A Knight of the Lariat," "Mandy of the Twin Bar," "Plain Betty Deane," "The Blue Ridge Mystery," "Because of Queechie," etc.

CHAPTER I.

SHEEP.

Trouble had been brewing for some time between the Loop and the Raccoon river ranches, and things had reached that pass where the crack of a blacksnake whip might speedily bring the trouble to a head

It had begun when Blass Cardross had added some thousands of head of sheep to the possessions of the Raccoon river range Of course he might have added thousands of devils to his stock so far as his right to do so was concerned, but your cattleman hates sheep almost as much as he does devils and it was no time before those sheep began to overrun the boundary lines of the two big ranges Worthing had protested in some disdain, and Cardross had grown sore What were a few sheep that they should threaten a long friendship'

"What did any fullblooded cattleman want with the damned wool sacks, anyway?" Worthing had retorted

Then it was the sheep dogs. There being no alien flocks of sheep in the neighborhood for the occasional sheep-killer to molest, they developed a predilection of the Loop calves After Worthing had lost several mavericks in this way, and again protested, he shot one of Blass Cardross splendid collies.

The depredation continued, for the dog has taugh his vicious tendency to others, and the hard feeling between the two ranches grew To make matters worse, Earle Worthing was in love with Cardross sister, Nance, and the girl took sides with he brother

But all this was nothing to what had more recently happened.

When Worthing had heard that his old time chum and friend was damming up the Raccoon river so that the perennial pools of that portion of it which ran through the Loop would probably go dry in the season of drought when the river bed as a whole was as dry of water as the plains of trees he realized that Cardross was no longer his friend

The realization hurt even more than it angered at first There had always been a vindictive streak to Blass Cardross, but it had taken the sheep to make him do so mean a thing

That is what they were saying about him on the Loop

It's them to Cross sheep's what's made Blass Cardross so contrary declared Buck Brannon, foreman of the Loop, as a number of the outfit hung about the bunk house after hour It's like bein' in a protracted camp meetin' in Dixie down Texas them solemn critters, all they ain't nothin like a camp meetin for stirrin up the devil in a man

"I reckon this last thing's stirred the devil up in Worthing, all right responded Kilrain I can't see white over anything for a long time, an when the boss sits white in the face an don't say nothin' he means that much more Too bad too for Blass Cardross ain't a bad fellow

'It's them sly Durhams I hold Kilrain reiterated Beef Durham A long'orn steer can't milk a cow easy as a crazy cow can be vicious but there ain't nothin like a sheep for spreadin' cussed influence, less'n it be a woman an!"

'That so, Buck Brannon'

It was Jess Kilrain who had stepped at the moment and stood beside her father

"I'm glad to know what you think of sheep—an' women" she added

The young fellow colored under the amused smiles of those about him

"I was just talkin, Jess, he said "though it's plumb true 'bout steers

"That's all you're ever on retorted the girl Even cattle don't stop you talkin Only you eat good grub an' talk mighty poor sense but it's 'cause your grubs fixed for you by a woman, an your tongue's a brute

"Jess," remonstrated the girl's father, 'when you've roped an' throwed your steer, jest hold tight Don't yank him.

Jess Kilrain tossed her handsome head.

"Some steers don't know when they is roped, father '

"That'll do now' said Kilrain speaking a little sternly, for the young cowpuncher was a favorite with him and he knew that his daughter was not always merciful 'There's enough doin without havin' ructions in our own camp What's it, my girl

"Nothin," answered Jess, somewhat crossly "I seen you talkin, an I come over Any harm in that' What's doin, father?"

For some reason the girl's presence broke up the lingering group of men. Perhaps it was the serious nature of this latest act of their neighbor on the Raccoon River ranch that made them feel rather averse to talking about it just then.

Perhaps they had heard enough about it for the time being Perhaps it was their general knowledge that Jess Kilrain was on very friendly terms with the Cardross household

Singly and in pairs they moved toward the stables, and Kilrain himself, remembering something, left his daughter abruptly and followed them

Buck Brannon sprang down from the high fence upon which he had been perched.

"Blass Cardross is hittin below the belt this time," he said to the girl, who turned to him, something of a question in her fine eyes.

"You mean he's gittin' the best of Earle Worthing?"

"Anyway he's tryin' to do him the worst. He's dammin' up his water supply. With the summer drought only a few months off, that'll mean hell."

"You seem to know a whole lot 'bout sheep an' women an' hell, Buck," Jess said, scorn in her eyes and voice. "Ain't a man the right to do what he pleases on his own land?"

The words swept Buck into a vehemence that was kindled not alone by his loyalty to Earle Worthing.

"No," he cried, "he ain't with a free river what means all the difference 'tween another man's havin' water an' havin' none, an' I reckon he'll find that out. The boss'll fight now, sure an' plenty"

"I guess two can fight," said the girl, and smiled at his evident amazement

"You ain't meanin', Jess," he managed to say with some check upon his astonishment "that you sides with Cardross against the Loop'"

The answer carried evasion "I always like to make a turkey gobble Buck Brannon You gobble fine"

She saw the anger that whitened his face at that was, indeed, a little afraid of it, and stepped back at his impetuous approach.

"What makes you treat me so?" he demanded. "What makes you try to make a fool of me, Jess Kilrain? What I said about women was true They do loose the devil in a man But why does you try to stir it up in me? No one in my life, man or woman, ever scorned me so afore."

"Then you's learnin' somethin'," she answered, her laughter short and not too certain, for there was a stern light in the young fellow's honest eyes before which her own gaze faltered and fell 'Shucks!" she cried "You take on like you was in one of them movies they got in town"

He moved away from her suddenly He laughed, too, a little brittle laugh with a hint of a threat in it."

If you don t look out" he said, tense in the repression he put upon himself, some day I'll take on in a way that'll lift you clear off your feet, Jess Kilrain, an I ain t gobblin' when I say that, you can bet your sweet life!"

He swung about and left her standing there, a curious mixture of anger, admiration, and self-humiliation warring within her Then she lifted her shoulders and sniffed

The sass of him!" she murmured.

CHAPTER II.

A DISTURBING SUGGESTION.

"If Jess warn't so good lookin', Martin,' said Kilrain's sister to him that evening, after she had made ready for him the foreman's place by the cleared supper table, "she wouldn't be so headstrong, an' if she warn't so headstrong she'd be more good lookin'—which you can look at from behind side fore, or t other way, as you please, it meanin' the same thing whichever way. Jess is spoiled, and spoiled bad, an' I ain't the one what's done the spoilin'."

Agnes Kilrain had come to her brother from the east at the time when, his wife dying, he had been left with Jess, a squalling child, upon his hands.

She was a capable woman, with a will of her own which, as the girl grew up was not always in harmony with that of her charge, and a tongue which was not always in harmony with her kind heart Kilrain idolized his sister and stood somewhat in fear of her sister facts which the girl had long since found out to her own advantage

To Jess Kilrain was something of a puzzle to those who knew her best She was always in hot water with her aunt She teased and bullied her cousin She was scornful and unkind to Buck Brannon, whose heart, she knew, she held in the hollow of her hand

She was by turns gracious and unapproachable to the outfit. Even to Martin Worthing himself Jess not infrequently indulged in the caustic flicks of her tongue that made her seem as full of a wasp in the social life of the Loop

At last Jess asked Kilrain of his sister if she had spoken with an unusual disapproval of her niece

Agnes Kilrain shrugged

Where?" she echoed "I'm sure I don't know With the owls out alone on the plains where she hadn't ought to be She's never indoors. Day an' night she's always somewhere else. Ain't right, Martin Ain't proper"

Kilrain face sobered He was an easy going man in his own household, and sometimes he might have wished Agnes were not quite so determined

The girl means no harm,' he said, but I'll speak to her"

Girls don't have to mean harm to get into harm though I ain't so sure, Martin that Jess wouldn't grapple with the devil himself just to see what his horns was made of Jess is powerful pernickety. An' you know what comes of hobnobbin with the devil '

Kilrain looked up with some impatience at his sister's pertinacity laying aside the Stock Gazette he had been making an attempt to read and proceeding to relight his pipe with one of the long twisted paper lighters of which Agnes made a supply each week

She was herself rather aimlessly hanging about the oak sideboard as though expectant of the question her brother was to put

An who's the particular devil Jess is feelin the horns of, Agnes'"

The woman lost her indecision at the pointed inquiry turning abruptly

Blass Cardross'"

"Blass Cardross'"

'Ain't you ever heard his name, Martin Kilrain'"

He looked at her now more than half inclined to be angry

Blass Cardross is a square man," he said slowly, "if he is on the wrong track 'bout some things. I don't see what you drivin' at, Agnes."

She came nearer to him, any trace of lesser irritation gone from her voice and manner alike.

"Just this, Martin Is he square enough to marry the gal if he might make her love him—or is he too fine'"

Only recently the realization that his daughter had grown into woman's estate had come upon Martin Kilrain with a shock of surprise. Another and a more numbing shock ran through him now A mother would never have been thus taken by surprise about her daughter Martin Kilrain was a man.

'I don't like to think of Jess marryin ' he said, his face grave.

'That isn't going to keep her from thinkin' of it."

Helpless under this logic, he was silent. She left him at that, going into the kitchen, and Kilrain took up the Gazette once more, but he could not read.

Where was Jess?

After a time, Kilrain threw down his paper, rose, and went out of the house His sister's words had taken an unpleasant hold upon his mind.

With his arms upon the gate he stood smoking. The night was dark, soft with the hint of the coming summer, very still and motionless over the flowering prairies. Most of the surrounding cabins were already in unlightened silence, for the boys of the outfit were given to early turning in.

Kilrain opened the gate, stepping out into the road beyond, and noiselessly letting the latch fall back into place. He was not conscious of this care he took to be unobserved. It was born on the vague disquiet of his mood.

Going down the lane, he reached the lower barn lots, the orchard lying further to his left, pungent with the fragrance of its full bloom Kilrain turned his back southward across the prairie to the distant woods that formed at that point the boundary between the Loop and the Raccoon river ranches.

And still it could not have been said that he had done this of deliberation.

Suddenly he paused in his walk, which had become brisk, at a sound which seemed to crystalize his former inchoate distress into a sickening certainty The distant galloping of a horse's hoofs fell upon the still air, hollow and muffled from the springy turf, dying into soundlessness.

Kilrain's breath thickened in his throat. His nostrils dilated. His muscles stiffened along his limbs. Then, almost as an animal might have done, a dog or a horse, he shook himself, and moved onward slowly, halting on the instant.

Coming toward him through the enveloping gloom of the plain a slight figure walked quickly, heedless of Kilrain's eyes, staining, incredulous of what they dimly discerned yet discerned with an unpleasant certainty.

Just before him the figure stopped, its breath catching in some shock of surprise.

"Jess," cried Kilrain "I'd hoped to God my eyes had played me false!"

CHAPTER III.

COUNTERPLAY.

The girl had been very silent, though nothing better than her silence had been needed to confirm Kilrain in the shock of his disappointment in her.

"I would never have dreamed it of you, Jess," he groaned. "I never would 'a' dreamed you would live to deceive me so."

For the first time then Jess made a sound She laughed, a bitter thread in the laughter catching her father's notice

"No, you never would 'a' dreamed it, father, if you hadn't been put to sleep with a burr on your mattress. That's Aunt Agnes' doin's. Some people's so loaded down with goodness that the bad in 'em floats on top, like cream. So she told you I was out here to meet Blass Cardross, an' you swallowed it' You'll have to cough up a lie then, father" weight seemed to have slipped from his heart. "I heard—"

"You heard a horse gallopin'. So did I. If you'd come just a little farther you'd 'a' heard me talkin' to the man ridin' that horse. That ain't sayin' it was Blass Cardross. Go look in your stable, father, an' see whose horse is missin'. An', talkin' 'bout dreamin',"

"That the citizen in the exercise of a Jess went on, "I never would 'a' dreamed, father, that Aunt Agnes could throw sand in your eyes an' make you think it was a thunder storm."

She could not see Kilrain's abashed smile.

"I m feared she done xactly that," he admitted, "but your aunt means well, Jess"

'Oh, sure!'" laughed Jess. "She means well when she gives us rhubarb pies, but if you eat 'em you wish you hadn t. Meanin' well an' doin' well ain't always the same—specially when the meanin' p'isons you."

"I m sorry, Jess."

'So'm I, father. 'Tain't good to be thought bad of"

Kilrain was silent

Indeed, his mind was not at ease There still remained the matter of Jess' intimacy with Cardross. He said no more upon the subject then, however, nor did Jess, but when she had gone on to her room upon reaching the house she did not get ready for bed

Sitting by her open window, she seemed to wait, and while she waited Jess Kilrain's thoughts were busy.

She had told her father the truth, but not the whole truth. Not even to herself had she ever told what for some time intuition had been vainly endeavoring to warn her

She was not happy in her love for Blass Cardross. Some indefinable blight was upon its bloom. Something acted in the joy of her heart too vague to be unhappiness, yet, like a baser alloy in pure gold, subtly changing its color

It was something which made the girl long this night for the mother she had never known Jess Kilrain had grown up a man's woman All her life she had been among men—among them yet apart, as the woman must ever be. It had made her unusually self reliant.

It had left her strangely alone.

Indeed, for some days past the girl's mind had been wavering on the point of speaking to her father of her love for Cardross, but intuition, telling her that he would not be in sympathy with that love, had helped to prevent her doing so.

The growing oppposition toward Cardross in all those about her on the Loop had while stimulating her loyalty to her lover, made her even more inclined to be reticent. Her father's action this night in rebuking her so sternly for what he had supposed had carried her abroad drove all confidence back upon her own heart.

The room behind Jess was in total darkness.

Beyond her window the prairie stretched an indeterminate space overhung by the warm stars. A sense keener than that of either hearing or sight compounded of both, made her aware that she had heard a sound, that she saw an indistinguishable blur upon the gray darkness—a blur that moved silently, furtively, that gave her an uneasy feeling of being seen herself far more clearly than she could see.

Some of the Paris dressmakers are recommending high necked dinner frocks with transparent bodices instead of those with a low neck line.

Black mercerized crochet cotton is desirable to use when darning stockings instead of the usual mending cotton It is stronger, easier to work with and makes neater looking work than mending cotton.

Neatness of footgear counts more than ever before. The shoes must be spotless, well polished and in good repair Heels that slant are an outrage on good dressing; moreover, they are decidedly unhealthful.

Picture hats a la Rommey and Gainsborough are on the way. They will be large and ostrich trimmed, very likely.

New coiffures call in many instances for high combs. Pins often hold the strand of hair in place until it is swathed across the back of the head.

Never throw away stale bread. Cut it into various shapes, place the cut pieces in the corn popper and toast them. You will then have them on hand for garnishing purposes or for croutons. These can be kept in glass jars for an indefinite length of time, and will be found most convenient when one wishes to add a dainty touch to a dish set before an unexpected guest. The croutons will add flavor to the canned soup.

A home "cold storage" for eggs may be made by placing two inches of wood ashes in the bottom of a tin pail. In this stand, on the small end, as many fresh eggs as will fit easily, without letting them touch. Over these sift a couple inches of ashes and adjust another layer of eggs. When the pail is full, cover it tightly and place in a cool place and the eggs will keep perfectly for an indefinite time

How to avoid Operations

These Three Women Tell How They Escaped the Dreadful Ordeal of Surgical Operations.

Hospitals are great and necessary institutions, but they should be the last resort for women who suffer with ills peculiar to their sex. Many letters on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., prove that a great number of women after they have been recommended to submit to an operation have been made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here are three such letters. All sick women should read them.

Marinette, Wis.—"I went to the doctor and he told me I must have an operation for a female trouble, and I hated to have it done as I had been married only a short time. I would have terrible pains and my hands and feet were cold all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured, and I feel better in every way. I give you permission to publish my name because I am so thankful that I feel well again." —Mrs. Fred Behnke, Marinette, Wis.

Detroit, Mich.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so run down with female troubles that I could not do anything, and our doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. I could hardly walk without help so when I read about the Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others I thought I would try it. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and used them according to directions. They helped me and today I am able to do all my work and I am well." —Mrs. Thos. Dwyer, 989 Milwaukee Ave., East, Detroit, Mich.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."—Miss Irene Froelicher, 1923 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

"ANURIC!" NEWEST IN CHEMISTRY

This is a recent discovery of Doctor Pierce, head of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y Experiments for several years proved that there is no other eliminator of uric acid comparable. For those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, "Anuric" acts quickly. In rheumatism of the joints, in gravel and gout, invariably the pains and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear.

GOODBYE, WHITE BABY DRESS

Clothing Child in Glaring White Likely to Injure Eyesight.

There is danger in dressing the baby in white The continual glare of light reflected from a white surface is likely to injure the child's nerves and eyesight, say the home economics authorities at Iowa State College

Clothing a baby in a white dress, placing him in a crib with white coverlets underneath, above and on all sides with perhaps a white ceiling to gaze at, is as hard on the eyesight of the child as squinting at glaring white snow is on that of a grownup

To change the custom centuries old of dressing the baby in white will be hard work but the really sensible mother will realize that baby will be no less just as such and be just as pretty dressed in pale shades of pink, sky blue and blue as in white and is much more likely to grow up with better eyesight

TOES AT THEIR TOENAILS

Good Way to Distinguish Active from Lazy Hens.

Well worn toenails are earmarks of the vital, vigorous hen, is the tip that H. A. Bittenbender, extension poultryman at Ames, gives to the poultryman in selecting his stick. Such toenails, broad and flat across the end, result from constant scratching, indicating a healthy, virile bird.

Likewise, it is the hen with the high, broad brow, clear, wide set and prominent eyes, broad and well curved beak and well preened feathers that is at the top notch of health and vigor.

Beware of the hen with thin face, dull, sunken eyes, pale comb and wattles and long, unworn toenails. This type of hen is less active and spends most of its time sitting around or roosting, instead of hustling for worms.

Answers God's Call

Our wife has been called to her Heavenly home! When you read that sad sentence if you have passed through an ordeal of that kind or have been called upon to mourn some one near and dear to you, you certainly can realize that we are endeavoring to do a task that is very hard, and we know that we are going to write miserably where we would like to portray to our family of readers and many kind friends just what the passing away of one so dear to us means and try to tell you something of her beautiful character. But words fail us on every hand as we are filled with grief.

Ethel Pearl Bradfield, twin sister of Edith Eshter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Bradfield, was born near Hubbard, Hardin county, Iowa, December 10, 1891, and lived in Hardin and Hamilton counties until she was twelve years of age when the family moved to Germania. It was there that she met her husband M. M. Magner and in June 1908 became his bride We were at that time part owner and publisher of the North Kossuth Record at Germania, but in September sold out and purchased the Dispatch at Ringsted, where we lived until January 1, 1913 when we again sold out and bought the Independent at Calumet, living there only nine months when we came to Klemme. Not once did we think when we came here a little over two years ago that we would be called upon to write anything so sad to us as this but it must be the will of God and in Him alone can we find relief.

On Thursday evening, April 13th, at six o'clock she suffered a stroke of paralysis from which she never recovered and passed away, Friday April 14th at 12.15, noon. Besides her husband and three little daughters. Ethel, Aileen and Lavon, she leaves to mourn her untimely death, her mother and father, four brothers and five sisters, and a large circle of friends A short funeral service was held at the English M. E church, Saturday morning at 10 00 o'clock by Rev. Figge after which the remains were shipped to Eldora where on Sunday services were held at the home of her parents, being in charge of Rev Gallagher of the M. E. church and interment made in the Berlin cemetery near there

We wish to most heartily thank all those who so kindly assisted us in the many ways and we assure you that your kindness will never be forgotten. Especially do we wish to thank the I. O. O. F. lodge, both here and at Eldora; those who gave the many beautiful floral offerings, those who assisted in the singing, the ministers for their fine sermons, the doctors for their untiring efforts before her death, all those who have written us letters of consolation and gave us words of cheer, in this our hour of deep affliction.

IN MEMORIAM

Whereas It has pleased Almighty God to invade the family of our esteemed brother M M Magner, removing therefrom by death his beloved wife, therefore be it

Resolved, Although we bow in humble submission to the who doeth all things well" still we feel the loss this death has been to the family, as it has removed from our midst a loving woman and one who was loved by all who knew her; be it further,

Resolved, That the I O O. F. lodge No 44 extend to this bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this their deep affliction, commending them to our all wise God, in whose words alone we can find comfort and hope and be it further,

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and that they be published in the Klemme Times

Why It Pays To Trade With Firms That Advertise

¶ Advertising creates sales. The modern business man knows this; he also knows he must depend upon many sales with a small profit rather than on a few with big profits. The world knows the firm that advertises most can sell cheapest.

Test Association Is Re-Organized

The Klemme Cow Testing association was re-organized Tuesday with all of the old officers being re-elected. Howard Barker of the Extension Department, was here to assist in the re-organization. The officers are: President, C. A. Arnold; vice president, Mat Lowe; R. W. Elder, secretary and treasurer. W. F. Williams was retained as the official tester. The association is now composed of 27 members all living contributary to Klemme and Garner. We hope to publish the report of the last year's business next week and it should prove interesting reading. The association decided at their meeting to do more of the co-operative buying, hold regular monthly meetings and to also hold a tour of the members some time in June, when they hope to have two men of the extension department with him who will deliver talks on alfalfa and dairying.

As a result of the association many of the members are seeking to improve their dairy herds. W. L. Habrekamp has bought a fine young herd bull from the famous Mulck's herd and V A. Cook a herd bull from J T. Galford. C A. Arnold sold one of his young short horn bulls at a high price as the result of the showing of the dam in the test work.

You are hereby notified to proceed at once to remove all manure, ashes, tin cans, garbage and rubbish on any alley, parking, or street adjacent to or abutting your premises, and also make a thorough clean up of all refuse property, without further delay.—C. L. Yahnke.

HOW THEY PLAN THEIR ADVERTISING

Listen to what Herman Rossfield, advertising manager for Sears, Roebuck & Co., recently told the members of the American ad. club at a convention:

"We have a bureau whose duty it is to read each week, the country newspapers from all over the country. There is not a paper of any consequence in our trade territory that our bureau does not get. This bureau looks over all these papers and when we find a town where the merchants are not advertising in the local paper, we immediately flood that territory with our literature. It always brings in results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants use the local papers."

DOES IT PAY?

The largest cream check ever paid out by the Fenton Creamery company to any one patron was paid to C. F. C. Laage & Son this month for March cream and amounted to $201.72. Upon interviewing Mr. Laage as to the number of cows he milked last month we were informed that it was ten, and means that his herd of milch cows averaged him $20.17 a head for March cream sold at the Fenton creamery. We shall let our readers judge for themselves whether or not it pays to keep good cows.

THE KLEMME TIMES

KLEMME, IOWA

The dissatisfaction of the railroad companies in the United States with the payments made to them by the government for mail haulage, is as nothing compared to the attitude of the British railroad companies The British postoffice department discovered that for short haulage, up to about 125 miles, the motor truck or tractor is far cheaper and better than the railway For this reason the great bulk of British mail transfer over distances within 125 miles is now made with trucks The railroads are allowed to handle only the unprofitable end of the mail haulage— the whole system resulting in a technical profit" for the postoffice department The contract between the British government and the railroad companies provides for a flat rate for both long and short hauls with profitable operation on short hauls only As, however, no provision was made in it for the installation of motor trucks by the department, the railroads are powerless to prevent this practice, and must continue to haul mail at a loss for long distances

SETTLEMENT EFFECTED ON RAINSBARGER WILL

Disinherited Son and Daughter Were Contestants—They Get $6,500 and Costs.

Eldora, Ia., April 22 —A final settlement of the William Rainsbarger will case was reached yesterday in the Hardin county district court. Mr. Rainsbarger was a brother of the two Rainsbarger boys, Frank and Nate, who were recently released from prison after serving more than 25 years.

The suit to break his will was brought in the Hardin county district courts in December, 1913. The will devised a life estate to the widow and the balance to his sons, Jay and John. Suit to break the will was started by Mary Ellen Robinson and George Rainsbarger, a son and daughter. The first trial lasted about 10 days and terminated in a directed verdict sustaining the will. The contestants appealed this to the supreme court and this appeal was still pending at the time the settlement was effected.

Seven lawsuits were brought in this matter in the three years, in which the widow was placed under a guardian just after the will was probated. A suit was brought to terminate the guardianship by Mary Ellen and George Rainsbarger At the instance of George and Mary Ellen Rainsbarger, the court gave the widow her dower interest of one-third, notwithstanding the terms of the will. By terms of the stipulation now on file it appears that the contestants received $6,500 and all costs and expenses of the litigation. The estate is valued at $70,000.

DECLARES CANCER IS CAUSED BY MICROBES

Scientist Asserts Disease Cannot Be Cured Until Germ Is Isolated.

Washington April 21 Results of research work, which he said would revolutionize present theories regarding the origin of cancer, were announced before the national academy of science here today by Dr Erwin F Smith in charge of the pathological laboratory of the federal bureau plant industry He said experiments with plants had convinced him cancer was due to a germ and that the solution of the problem of the cancer treatment would be possible only when the germ was isolated

Plant tumors Dr Smith declared had been found to be similar to those developed by animals and plants inoculated with what was described as the germs of human cancer had developed cancerous growths demonstrating that a micro organism, contrary to the notions held heretofore was the cancer agent He made no recommendations as to the treatment

The academy which has been in session here during the past two days with many of the country's foremost scientists in attendance decided to direct a comprehensive exploration of the Pacific ocean which will occupy from 10 to 20 years Details are yet to be worked out

NEW FRENCH HELMETS MAY LEAD TO ARMOR

PARIS Surgeons consider the success of the new helmet of the French so effective that the possibility of a return to the old days when the chest and abdomen were also protected by armor is being seriously discussed Dr Roussy has just stated before the medical academy that the number of men sent to the hospitals with slight scalp wounds doubled between the month of August when the helmet was first put into use and the month of January, when the army was still only partially equipped with it This enormous increase is supposed to indicate that the percentage of dead from bullets and shell fragments in the head has diminished in a corresponding proportion

In each case the fire was started with loose paper, mostly religious literature. At the First Evangelical a broom saturated with oil was placed on the floor.

Two women saw the incendiary enter the Universalist church. They described him as wearing long hair and having a wild appearance. He was shabbily dressed.

The fires were set on the eve of the city's church census.

IOWA REPUBLICAN LEADERS WOULD "SMOOTH" TICKET

Des Moines, Ia., April 20.—A conference of National Committeeman John T Adams, State Chairman Charles Rawson and other republican leaders was held here yesterday and, unofficially, it was stated an effort was being made to induce two of the four republican candidates for governor to withdraw from the primary race. The republicans are plainly worried over the reuniting of the democratic factions and the subsequent nomination of a ticket headed by E. T. Meredith, of Des Moines, for governor, and John T. Clarkson, of Albia, for attorney general. Republican leaders say if all four of the party's candidates for governor stay in the race so much internal strife may be stirred up that the democrats are likely to win next fall's election.

The effort to remove two of the candidates is said to be directed at State Senator Joseph Allen and Karl Kuehnle. This would leave Attorney General Cosson representing the "dry" element, and Lieut. Gov. W. L. Harding the liberal forces, still in the field.

SHERIFF CREMOR PLACES ALL BLAME ON DEPUTY

He explained the use of the telephone in serving subpoenas by declaring County Attorney Daugherty authorized him to make such service. He acknowledged that in serving subpoenas and warrants he charged actual expense incurred and that when he used his own car he always charged for service at same rate as if he had hired an automobile.

RUSSIA WILL SEND FRANCE 250,000 MEN

Troops Landed Yesterday at Marseilles Only First of Great Force to Be Sent to the Western Zone.

EASY TO ARM THEM THERE

Czar Has More Men Than He Needs — Coming Forecast Operations on Great Scale on French Front.

London, April 22. General developments are expected in France soon the arrival of Russian soldiers to support the French and English lines and withdrawal of German troops from Macedonia and Serbia, are taken to forecast impending events of major importance.

The arrival of the transports which brought the Russian troops sent to the entente forces on the western front had been expected since Tuesday when a heavy storm in the Mediterranean delayed their reaching Marseilles.

Every precaution for their protection had been taken up owing to reports that hostile submarines were operating in the Mediterranean, but the voyage was concluded without untoward incident.

250,000 Russians En Route.

The coming of Russian troops to the western front has been talked of for military people for two or three months. The reason, as now explained is that it is easier for Russia to ship and supply fighting material to the Russian troops on the western front than on the eastern.

Russian still has many hundreds of thousands more men under training than she can use on her fighting front because the Russian problem seems to be not how to get the men but the munitions. The allies can now provide complete equipments for the Russians more easily in France than shipping to Russia. Possibly 250,000 men will be sent into France this spring

Paris, April 22.—The French succeeded to make progress in the region of Dead Man's hill on the Verdun front in the fighting last night The war office announcement this afternoon reports the capture of German trenches and of four officers and 150 men.

East of the Meuse a fierce German attack was repulsed In the region of Haudremont wood, the French made gains.

Marseilles Is Gay

Marseilles, France's principal seaport was gay with bunting today in honor of the arrival of the first Russian troops, the first public manifestation of greater cohesion and unity of the entente allies growing out of the resolutions of the Paris conference.

The Associated Press correspondent who witnessed the disembarkation of the troops was informed in a whisper quarter that the arrival of the Russians was chiefly a demonstration of Russian friendship. The public attached special significance to the event as it knows the French army is not short of efficiency, further it believes that the European war must be decided on the western front and feels therefore, that the Russians have come so that all elements of the allied hosts may be represented when that decision is reached.

Hence the Russians are looked upon as the heralds of happenings of great moment.

All Picked Men.

This feeling manifested itself in enthusiastic statements as the crack formed men marched through the city singing their characteristic national air. A Moscow boy of 13 named Natieff, who has been adopted by one of the regiments, was the first person to land. He received an ovation. He has been eight months on the Austrian front The Russians are all picked men Most of them are decorated with the St George's cross. Some of them have four decorations. The men were delighted to get to their quarters after the sea voyage.

The Russian forces will be used to fill in gaps on the western front caused by the recent fighting The arrival of the Russian troops is regarded as an event of great importance and significance from both a military and political standpoint. The Russians came on a great flotilla of transports Not a single word of their coming was permitted to become generally known until they had actually concluded their journey and were landed on French soil No exact details as to the number of Russian troops are available

(BY ROBERT DUNN)

With General Pershing at Headquarters April 17 ... aeroplane to Columbus N M April 20 — General Pershing is apparently for the time ... at the end of his string. The ... campaign as originally outlined ... our government and rigidly ... adhered to by the army in the field, is temporarily at least at a standstill.

It is needless to define what is meant by this. But its seriousness written by one with the army, where the censorship has at times seemed over meticulous, must be grasped before reading what follows. The army in the field is ... to speak upon the present condition, and the extraordinary chain of facts leading up to it.

Censorship Removed

The lid has been more or less lifted from the censorship and ... ensuing the words alone are my own.

As I write 700 men, the enduring fit of our cavalry, are practically still near Parral. They are at the end of a line of communication 500 miles long and this line is maintained by a scant number of auto trucks, wagons and pack trains. Yet paralleling it Parral is touched by two lines of railway.

This force in the heart of a Mexico practically united against us, where all distinctions between Villistas and friendly Carranzistas have been wiped out. And at present our little force is being supplied by nothing but pack trains, none able to carry more than five days' provisions for more than a handful of men. The base is at San Antonio, itself 100 miles from Parral.

Effective control can be brought out by two things alone: co-operation with the defacto government which in effect has been but cumulative opposition, and by unhampered use of whatever railways we desire. The army has now done its best—better effectively than any national force has ever accomplished before against so great odds. Simply as an example of individual self sacrifice one flying column, that of the 10th cavalry under Col. W. C. Brown, has practically financed its own providing and equipment, spending some $4000 chipped in by officers and men according to their resources.

From now on Carranza officials may make promises until they are black in the face but our people will not believe them. The entire region of our operations is in a state of anarchy. An officer arriving at a town asks of the president, "Are you a Villista?"

"No."

"A Carranzista?"

"No."

No Organized Government

The truth is that there is no organized government; the land is in a state of anarchy. Presidents are self appointed and between the two factions the sympathies of the populace have been overwhelmingly for the bandits' men. He had at least often from his plunder dealt a lavish charity which appealed to its primitive mind. But others have all along been ... ruthlessly, never with that softening touch.

Under such conditions I do not need to emphasize the forbearance and gentleness of our troops, nor the tact and military ... which always predicates such conduct. It reached of course its height in the Parral affair, and you must remember that practically every force actually in the chase has been much reduced by the exigencies of their arduous service.

There has been no real privation, but from March 21 onward no mounted command with the front has received anything but the scantiest rations for man and beast. Each has been living off the country on beef and parched corn chiefly. For a week I was with such a command, that of Lieut Col H T Allen, Eleventh cavalry and organizer of the Philippine scouts.

My acutest memory of our activities is one night when he ordered a detail to search a village from which we had been sniped. After almost each sentence as he gave his instructions he worded, "Remember no shooting whatever happens if it will endanger any women or children." It all puts you in a Philippine mood. The matter of railroad transportation is the one upon which my lips have been sealed tightest. This because it has been that of greatest delicacy in our new moribund relations with the defacto government and of major importance in the campaign.

It may be said that the two times when the Northwestern line was used it was not in violation of any understanding with the Carranza government. The first when the troops of the Tenth cavalry were transported to Musica, (two men killed and a car of supplies lost in a wreck), was done with the consent of a high official of the line. The second instance, when supplies were lately brought by this same road to San Antonio, was through an arrangement made with a civilian American merchant.

Pershing's Heroic Effort.

Today I was given permission to outline the complete strategy of campaign to date. It is a subject which will be treated in full by the press associations. From the Carranzista opposition at Palomas the very day that our first troops crossed the border to the masterful strategy which in the end found every active unit concentrated upon the storm center, Parral, at exactly the psychological moment.

RURAL CREDIT BANK PLAN IS PERFECTED

House Committee Drafts Bill For Establishment of 12 Regional Mortgage Banks.

Washington, D. C., April 22.—A bill to establish 12 regional land mortgage banks as a part of the administration's rural credit legislation program was perfected today by the House banking committee and will be urged for passage next week by House leaders.

The proposed banks would make loans on land through national farm loan associations. Stock would be taken by the federal treasury, but under an amendment adopted by the committee today no payments would be made in such stock until the bank in question had received applications for loans from at least 10 loan associations.

Subscriptions to stocks also would be made by the loan associations, and when they had subscribed to $750,000 in any land bank, that bank would be authorized to apply semiannually to the payment and retirement of the shares issued to represent the subscriptions to the original capital 25 per cent of all sums thereafter subscribed until after such original capital stock was retired at par.

At least 20 per cent of the capital stock of any land bank paid in by the loan association must consist of cash in the bank's vaults, of deposits in member banks of the federal reserve system or bearing securities approved by the federal farm loan board. Not less than 5 per cent of capital stock must be invested in United States bonds.

Representative Moss, a member of the joint committee of congress which framed the original bill, reintroduced it today as amended by the banking committee.

AMERICAN POLICY CITED BY ALLIES

United States Course In Civil War Given as Precedent For Present British Order In Council.

Washington, D. C., April 22.—According to authentic information reaching Washington, Great Britain and France in their joint note replying to the American protest against interference with neutral trade, made no attempt to dispute principles contended for by the United States, but insist that those principles have been given legal interpretation and application by the allies in their blockade of Germany and Austria.

This note, which will be handed to the state department within the next day or two by the British and French ambassadors, is understood to be long and extremely technical, treating of the whole subject on a purely legal basis and relying upon the precedents laid down by the United States in the civil war. It is said the allies assume that the United States government does not contend that it has the right to ship goods without restrictions into Germany or Austria through contiguous neutral countries, such as Holland, Sweden and Denmark.

The concession of the right to blockade an enemy country, which is universally recognized, is regarded as necessarily carrying with it the right to regulate the admission of goods to the neutral country evidently destined to be transferred to the enemy. Consequently it is contended that it is perfectly within the spirit of international law to limit imports into a neutral country, such as Holland, of goods that might be of use to Germany and Austria to the amount normally consumed in the neutral countries.

Moreover, it is argued that an incident to the exercise of this right of regulation of imports is the right to search vessels approaching the neutral country. In this connection the allies held that while in early days it was possible to conduct such a search at sea, conditions of modern sea traffic have made this impossible, hence it has become necessary to take the neutral ship to the nearest convenient port where the cargo may be examined. This is the explanation offered by the apparent unreasonable diversion of many ships from their regular courses and what has been complained of as an unnecessary delay in search. It was with a view to reducing complaint on this score, it is pointed out, that arrangements were made for the British embassy here to advise would be American shippers whether their cargoes probably would be subject to detention.

COLORED BISHOPS TABOO; VETO PROPOSAL IS LOST

Chicago, April 22.—Methodists who sought to have colored bishops provided for work among the colored people failed to receive the sanction of the annual conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church, the affirmative vote falling by 680 votes to reach the necessary two-thirds.

Announcement of the total vote was made today by Dr. Joseph B. Hingeley, secretary of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. The proposition was known as the Mississippi proposition to provide bishops for race and languages, and was sent to all the annual conferences. The vote as compiled by Dr. Hingeley was:

Total affirmative vote, 4,921; total negative vote, 3,481.

The Wilmington proposition giving bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church in constitutional matters the right to veto, which was submitted to the annual conferences by the general conference of 1912, was lost by a majority of 1,571 ministers and 960 laymen.

The Colorado proposition granting honorary privileges to retired ministers and absentee voting on constitutional matters had a majority of 2,012 ministers and 818 laymen. These privileges will be granted and will become law by favorable action by the general conference at Saratoga Springs, May 1.

South America Will Aid Uncle Sam Press Claims: Neutrals Praise Wilson

Rio Janeiro, April 22.—The publication of the American note to Germany created a deep impression upon public opinion and the press. The Journal Do Commercio says:

"The United States, profoundly impressed by the responsibility it assumed in the American continent by the proclamation, adoption and preservation of the Monroe doctrine, feels clearly that if Germany is victorious sooner or later she will turn against the United States the powerful weapons which will have conquered the great strength of the allies. The expected action of President Wilson yesterday will be a forward march signal to the mighty American nation."

The Gazeta De Noticias says:

"North America, by her diplomatic attitude, makes herself the leader of the neutral nations against piracy."

Support Is Predicted.

The Epoca hold that German's war methods placed her in political circles outside the human pale and expresses no doubt that in case of war the United States will rally all the South American countries.

Buenos Ayres, April 21.—In commenting on the American note to Germany La Nacion says that the United States in taking up the defense of all neutrals places itself in a position with which neutrals are in extreme sympathy.

"The United States is the one great neutral power," says the newspaper. "Consequently its voice must carry the greatest weight, not because of the nation's army and navy, but because of its civilization, its democracy and its economic capacity.

"All American republics participate in the same sentiments and greet with profound political sympathy the constant desire of President Wilson to render less grievous the effects of the war and enforce respect for neutrals.

"The work makes for the solidarity of civilization and Christian brotherhood."

The Hague, (via London), April 21.—The newspapers of Holland devoted considerable space today to discussions and speculations on the situation created by the American note to Germany. The Nieuwe Courant says President Wilson evidently has come to the conclusion "that behind the torpedoings by German submarines, there is a system imposed by high authorities.

The newspaper thinks that a rupture of relations between Germany and the United States would hurt all belligerents and says that neutrals would regret should the greatest neutral find itself unable to continue as the head of their interests. It realizes the great mediatory services rendered by the United States, such as the treatment of interned prisoners and through the Red Cross—"splendid work to which thousands owe their life and health."

The Holland View.

It asks how Belgian relief measures could be continued in the event of a rupture.

"Whatever one may think of President Wilson and his endless, hesitating notes," says the Amsterdam Handelsblad, "few will deny that while seeking to avoid war, he always strove to do what was right and just."

The Handelsblad thinks that for Holland, a rupture between the United States and Germany would likely aggravate the situation and bring fresh troubles and complications and possibly still greater difficulties for Holland in securing food supplies.

Paris, April 21.—The comment of the French press on President Wilson's address to congress may be summed up in these words, which the Petit Parisian prints in large type as a heading over the text of the speech:

"Never has the head of a state pronounced such grave words against a state with which it was not at war."

The president's address has made a deep impression in France. All the newspapers give it the place of honor. It overshadows the British cabinet crisis and even the arrival of Russian forces at Marseilles. "The speech is not merely a formal injunction," the Petit Parisian says. "It is a closely knit and stern indictment pronounced in the name of all neutrals against German barbarity and duplicity marking the German government with a brand which nothing can efface."

Epoch Making Note.

The Matin characterizes the address as epoch making and continues:

"When the responsible and almost sovereign head of a 100,000,000 free citizens mounts the rostrum in Washington to declare, 'we are the spokesmen of the rights of humanity,' he has performed an act of immense moral importance. It is in the name of legality that this statesman, having behind him the country on which the whole world depends, declares before the whole world: 'We will not tolerate injustice.'

"In those few words his whole message is summed up. It is an historical event which is deserving of our admiration as one of the noblest acts in the memory of mankind."

Stephen Pichon, former foreign minister, says in the Petit Journal that the firmness and solemnity with which Mr. Wilson made known his resolution to congress recalls the greatest days of American history. He continues:

"Whether or not the Germans disavow the action of their submarines, they are caught in their own trap and all their presumption falls to the ground before the calm and resolute attitude of a great country standing up for the 'rights of humanity.'"

M. Herbert's View.

Under the heading, "Germans Confronted With an Honest Man," Jean Herbert, one of the leading French authorities on international politics, says:

"The German government must be surprised to find itself face to face with the only force of which it is again ignorant—the conscience. If Germany gives in, it would be an unforgettable humiliation, for it would be the triumph of that ideal of justice and liberty against which Germany went to war."

SPY MAKES KNOWN EXTENSIVE PLOTS

Von Der Goltz Reveals Names of Scores of Germans Implicated In the Welland Canal Scheme.

Washington, April 22.—Additional indictments of German sympathizers in this country will be asked by the department of justice as a result of revelations made by Horst von Der Goltz, alleged German spy, brought to New York, by Scotland Yards detectives, it was learned authoritatively here today. Von Der Goltz's statement was said by department officials to have opened a "field practically without limits."

New York, April 21.—Horst von Der Goltz, the German soldier of fortune and secret agent, whose statement of details of the plot to destroy the Welland canal, was made public by the British government last night, is now detained at the Ellis island immigration station here. He was brought here from Liverpool on March 28 in the custody of a Scotland Yard detective with the understanding that after he had made his statements to federal officers or a grand jury he should be returned to England to be detained as a war prisoner until the war is over.

Soon after arriving here he was taken before the United States district attorney, and it was said that he revealed to the federal officer most of the details of the Welland canal plot. As a result, it is said, of the information he gave to federal officials, indictments were found a few days ago charging complicity in the Welland canal conspiracy against Capt. Franz Von Papen, the recalled military attache of the German embassy; Capt. Hans Tauscher, who is said to be agent of the Krupps; Wolfe Von Igel, Von Papen's former secretary, in whose office federal officers seized the documents now claimed by the German embassy; Alfred A. Fritzel and Constantine Govani.

There was no mention of Von Igel's name in Von Der Goltz's statement as made public in England. The German embassy now demands Von Igel's release from arrest on the ground that he is a member of the German diplomatic organization in this country.

Many names of German propagandists, or Germans employed in alleged unneutral activities mentioned in Von der Goltz's statement have never before figured publicly in that connection.

According to his story Von der Goltz was a captain in Carranza's army in Chihuahua in June 1913, when he was arrested by General Mercado and sentenced to be shot. Three times Von de Goltz said he was place against a wall before a firing squad, but each time was taken back to prison. Eventually he was released upon demand of the German consul. He then went to Los Angeles, where in November he says an attack was made upon his life. He returned to Mexico and took part in the battles of Torreon, Ojinaga, San Pedro and Zacatecas. Just before the European war began he said, the German consul at Chihuahua sent him to Washington, where he met Captain von Papen.

JAPAN FILES NEW PROTEST ON BILL

Immigration Measure Revives Issue Long Existing—Chinda Lays Case Before Wilson.

Washington, April 22.—Viscount Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, conferred with President Wilson over the provision of the pending immigration bill which proposed to enact into law the so called gentleman's agreement restricting the immigration of Japanese laborers. A memorandum on the subject had been presented to the state department.

The proposed inclusion in a law of an informal agreement which Japan has promised on honor to fulfill, according to the agreement between former Secretary Root and former Ambassador Takahira is understood to be repugnant to the Japanese government.

Other proposed Asiatic exclusion features in the bill as it has passed the House and has been reported to the Senate are understood to be the subject for objection. For many obvious reasons the attitude of the administration is said to be one of disinclination to irritate the situation between Japan and the United States, which has been smouldering since the California anti-alien land law negotiations went into an indefinite stage three years ago this summer. Administration officials are not unmindful of anti-Asiatic sentiment in congress, particularly among members of the Pacific coast states, and their constant endeavor has been to allay it.

The United States never has replied to Japan's last note on the California land law.

The last that was said on the subject was said by former Secretary Bryan to Ambassador Chinda when the negotiations got into the stage of apparent deadlock and the ambassador on taking his departure from a conference at Secretary Bryan's office, inquired if he were to transmit the last word of the United States to his government. To that Secretary Bryan replied:

"There never can be a last word between friends."

One portion of the bill which is understood to draw the resentment of the Japanese government is the inclusion, by inference at least, of Japanese in the excluded class with Hindus, although the same paragraph of the bill excepts from the exclusion such as covered in "existing agreements."

This phase refers to the Root-Takahira agreement.

MUCH OF 1915 APPLE CROP NOT YET SOLD

Washington, D. C., April 21.—Much of the 1915 apple crop has not been sold, said a statement issued today by the department of agriculture, which also declared the condition of the apple market was giving growers and dealers grave concern. Thirty per cent of the apples put in cold storage by December 1, 1915, it was said, are still waiting to be consumed.

A backward spring ... the department explained ... free movement of the remainder of the crop.

BERLIN STILL SILENT ABOUT WILSON NOTE

Note Delivered By Ambassador Gerard, But Berlin Is Silent Regarding What Course Will Be Taken.

FEAR NEW U-BOAT RAIDS

Would Be Difficult For Germany to Explain Should Attack Occur While Negotiations Are Pending.

Washington, D. C., April 22.—Secretary Lansing announced today that the submarine note to Germany was delivered to the Berlin foreign office by Ambassador Gerard at 4.30 yesterday afternoon.

Washington, D. C., April 22.—Word from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin that he had delivered the American note to the German government, and some indication from him as to how it was received were awaited with keen expectancy by administration officials today. Unofficial advices early today saying that he had presented the communication to the German foreign office last evening and that the chancellor had not yet seen it because of his absence at army headquarters, were read with interest by officials.

Pending Germany's reply to America's demands that she immediately abandon the present methods of conducting submarine warfare, one of the chief concerns of officials here is the possibility of another attack on a ship carrying Americans. It was admitted that an immediate rupture could only be prevented by proof that Germany had been unable to communicate with her submarine commanders.

Must Stop Present Method.

In explaining the demand of the United States officials said that while abandonment of the present illegal methods at once was essential to continuance of diplomatic relations, the United States might agree to the German submarines operating under the strictest restrictions of cruiser warfare. It was emphatically reiterated, however, that a discussion of that phase would not be entered into until the present campaign was brought to a stop. The United States stands firm in its determination not to tolerate unlawful and inhumane sinking of another ship.

Cruiser warfare such as would be regarded legal by the American government would make imperative the exercise of the rights of visit and search, the passengers being accorded a degree of safety considered adequate. The mere placing of passengers and crews in small boats, far from land and in dangerous seas, would not meet the requirements.

Just how long the United States is willing to wait for the German reply has not been disclosed. All officials agree that "a reasonable time" will be allowed. The fact that a series of religious holidays, which are scrupulously observed in the German empire, began today, Good Friday, to continue until next Tuesday, has been suggested as a possible source of delay on the part of the German foreign office.

Congress With Wilson.

Though William J Bryan is here working on congress, there is every indication that the great majority of congress will back the president in any course he may take as to Germany.

Congress as a whole is ready to stand by the administration if it breaks relations, and whatever may be the consequences.

Some of the ablest Bryan men in congress admitted privately today that they would follow where the president led, regardless of anything Bryan may do.

Secretary Lansing, who conferred with the president before the cabinet meeting, said he did not expect any action until a reply was received from Germany or unless another ship carrying Americans were torpedoed by a German submarine.

He said that in case diplomatic relations between the two nations were broken the work of the United States in caring for the diplomatic interests of Germany in other countries in all likelihood would be suspended.

ANOTHER NEUTRAL VESSEL IS SUNK OFF DUTCH COAST

London, April 21.—A Lloyds dispatch from Ymuiden, Holland, says the Dutch steamship, Lodewijk Van Nassau, was sunk yesterday afternoon. She went down in six minutes. Five of her crew were drowned. Thirty-six survivors have been landed at Ymuiden.

The Lodweijk Van Nassau sailed from Chile in February with a cargo of saltpeter for Rotterdam. A Berlin dispatch wireless of April 19, said she had been held up in the Downs by the British authorities since March 22, and that her detention had aroused public opinion in Holland as the Dutch farmers feared the saltpeter would arrive too late for their use this spring.

The vessel was built in 191[?] and owned in Amsterdam. She was 325 feet long. Her gross tonnage was 3,397.

TWO AMERICANS SAVED.

Washington, D. C., April 21.—The American consul at Lisbon reported today that the Norwegian steamer Terjeviken, which sunk on April 18, off Lisbon harbor, struck a floating mine and that all on board were saved, including two Americans.

GERMANS URGE PEACE.

Washington, April 21.—Senators Cummins and Keynon and members of the Iowa delegation in the House are being flooded with messages and letters from Iowa and elsewhere urging them to do all possible to keep peace with Germany. Many others in congress are getting like appeals. The appeals are largely, though not wholly, from German-Americans.

CHANCELLOR AT FRONT.

Paris, April 21.—The visit of Dr von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German chancellor to the headquarters of the general staff, will extend over the Easter holidays, according to the Geneva correspondent of the Havas News agency. The chancellor left Berlin for headquarters Wednesday night.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Legal Day of Rest.

The New York court of appeals has given a decision sustaining the "one-day-rest in-seven" law that meets the strong approval of progressively minded citizens The following sentences are worth quoting "We have no power of decision of the question whether it is the wisest and best way to offset these conditions and to give employees the protection which they need, even if we had any doubt on that subject Our only inquiry must be whether the provision on its face seems reasonable, fair and appropriate, and whether it can fairly be believed that its natural consequences will be in the direction of the betterment of public health and welfare and therefore that it is one which the state for its protection and advantage may enact and enforce"—Chicago Evening Post

TURK CROWN PRINCE LONG DOOMED TO DIE

Claim He Was Assassinated By His Ordnance Officer —Can't Hide Crime.

Paris, (by mail)—The question whether the death of the Turkish Crown Prince Yussof Izzedin was suicide or assassination is no longer open to doubt, according to an authority here on Ottoman affairs, who says:

"The prince was assassinated on the first of February in his palace of Zindjirli-Coyou by his ordnance officer, Hassan Bey"

"Long before the war," this authority avers, "when Enver Bey succeeded in having a crown council instituted for him, Prince Yussof was condemned to die Since the war began he had been more than ever eliminated from all influence.

"When the sultan fell ill during the summer of 1915, the eventuality of the accession of the prince preoccupied the committee of union and progress. His hostility to the war had been unconcealed, his accession to the throne meant the opposition of the monarch to the projects of the government and menaced its existence

"One evening in September the principal leaders of the committee of union and progress were secretly assembled in the house of the Sheikh Ul Islam, Hairi Effendi, Enver Bey, Talaat Pacha, Bedri Bey, the prefect of police, Hussein Djahid, vice president of the chamber, and Behaeddine Chakir, private physician of the prince were present Hussein Djahid called attention to the difficulty of Turkey's situation at the time, deprived of all means of renewing its supplies of ammunition and consequently anxious as to the developments of the Dardanelles campaign In those circumstances he pointed out the presence on the throne of a prince known to have been opposed to the war might be useful in obtaining a favorable peace from the allies. Others present expressed the same view It raised a lively opposition, voiced by Enver Pacha. To leave the way to the throne to Yussof might result in giving the committee a master, he argued The second heir, Prince Wahid Eddin, he observed, nourished no better sentiments toward the committee, but it was impossible to suppress everyone in the palace and the death of Yussof Izzedin must certainly prove a salutary lesson.

"The deliberators separated without taking a decision, but they met again at the same place a few days later when four determined voices called for the death of Prince Yussof, they prevailed over all resistance, but left the date for the execution to be determined later, according to the turn of events Thereupon came the Bulgarian accord with Turkey and intervention at the side of the allied empires, followed by the evacuation of the Gallipoli peninsula by the entente allies. The time was considered propitious and on the first of February the prince was assassinated in his palace of Zindjirli-Coyou by his ordnance officer, Hassan Bey

"It was officially announced that the cause of the prince's death, suicide by the opening of important veins in his left arm, would be certified by Turkish and foreign doctors

"When the certificate appeared there were no names of foreign doctors signed and those of Turkish nationality were all affiliated with the government, with Enver Bey or with the committee of union progress.

Prince Wahid Eddin the new heir to the throne, must by this time know what is current information in Constantinople now, that Yussof was assassinated, and that he was assassinated by order The day of his condemnation is known as well as the house where the verdict was rendered and the names of those who were present"

SAYS OUR COLLEGES MERIT BRITISH SNEERS

From the New York World

Dr Marion Le Roy Burton, president of Smith college, delivered an amazing arraignment of American colleges yesterday at the 21st annual luncheon of the Smith College club of New York at the Hotel Biltmore, when he announced the standardization just completed of Wellesley, Vassar, Mount Holyoke and Smith in their requirements of the college applicant.

Smarting under the sneers of Oxford professors at the dilletante methods, deficiency in accuracy and serious purpose—"schools for shamming and skirking," as they call our institutions—Dr Burton declared hotly that he was "absolutely and utterly unwilling to be the president of any college exposed to such criticisms from Oxford

"The indictment is of our standards," said Dr Burton "Are there things in our colleges which justify such statements' I think there are"

The new qualifications for the applicant for entrance to college decided on by the four women's institutions include the school record of the applicant in the prep school for four years preceding, a certificate of character from the principal of the school, dealing with the moral standard and self control of the student, is required There must also be four comprehensive examinations to test the mental capacity and power to think along the usual lines of scholarship No applicant will be received under the new arrangement till 1919

The feature of the banquet was the exchange of greetings by telephone with California. Dr Burton talked with Dr Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California. Raymond Fosdick hailed Police Commissioner D. C White of San Francisco, and Mrs. George B Ford "spoke" Dr Adelaide Brown, president of the Smith College club of Frisco.

Printing required for all branches of the government service cost $7,111,075 last year All except $883,009 worth was done at the government printing office.

Russia has placed in Japan another huge war order which is said to reach $22,000,000 The munitions will be turned out by government arsenals and the first deliveries will begin in 1917.

FURNISHES HIS HOUSE WITH TOBACCO PRIZES

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A boilermaker employed by the Standard Oil company at Wood River, Ill., has furnished a four-room house, even to the piano, by saving tobacco tags and coupons, and is now saving toward a five-passenger automobile. It has taken him eight years to furnish the house.

The boilermaker, John Haderlein, recently told in Alton how he began saving He, like most tobacco users, had been in the habit of throwing away the tags and coupons, until one day a little more than eight years ago a friend jocularly reminded him that if he would save them he could obtain many articles of value.

"I looked over a premium list," Haderlein said, "and started to save to get a pocket knife. I told a few of my friends about it, and they gave their tags to me. Pretty soon I had the knife Then I began to save for furniture

"In eight years I have completely furnished my home I have obtained all the articles of furniture as well as pictures and many kinds of bric-a-brac After I had those things, I decided I wanted a piano. The premium book said it would take 750,000 tags to get it I got the tags and I got the piano

"Of course I didn't do it all myself If I smoked for several hundred years I couldn't save up enough tags to get all those things I asked the men at the oil refinery, where I work, to save tags for me and a lot of them have been doing it In addition to that I have written friends in many parts of the country and they are saving tags for me I get tags from Chicago and St Louis, as well as from many other places."

Haderlein says he is now saving for an automobile and he has promised many of his friends that he will take them riding in it by Christmas or very soon afterward He estimates that he has received premiums for more than 3,000,000 tags

AWARD TO MILITIAMAN FOR ACCIDENTAL WOUND

Los Angeles—An award of $1,464 to Frank Earl Wallace, of the machine gun company of the Seventh regiment National Guard of California, for a bullet wound in his left foot, has been made by the California industrial accident commission, established a precedent, according to H H Kinney secretary of the commission that will make the state responsible for death or injuries to guardsmen caused by obeying orders.

Wallace accidentally shot himself with a pistol at target practice at Glendale, near here, November 21, 1915

The precedent, it was explained would apply only while the National Guard remained a state organization and would not apply in time of war if the guard becomes a federal body

Must Have Been Careful.

From the Chicago Herald

During the progress of the morning bath of a few months' old infant a neighbor's little girl came into the room carrying a doll, and stood watching the operation for some time The little girl's doll was much the worse for hard usage, being minus an arm and a leg Finally she said to the mother of the child

"How long have you had your baby?"

The child was informed, and, looking from her doll to the baby, she said

"My, but you have kept it nice!"

An American In Europe.

'Tis fine to see the Old World, and travel up and down
Among the famous palaces and cities of renown
To admire the crumbly castles and the statues of the kings—
But now I think I've had enough of antiquated things.

So its home again, and home again, America for me'
My heart is turning home again, and there I long to be,
In the land of youth and freedom beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight and the flag is full of stars.

Oh, London is a man's town, there's power in the air,
And Paris is a woman's town, with flowers in her hair,
And it's sweet to dream of Venice, and it's great to study Rome,
But when it comes to living, there's no place like home.

I like the German firwoods, in green battalions drilled;
I like the gardens of Versailles with flashing fountains filled,
But, oh, to take your hand, my dear, and ramble for a day
In the friendly western woodland where Nature has her way.

I know that Europe's wonderful yet something seems to lack;
The past is too much with her, and the people looking back,
But the glory of the Present is to make the future free—
We love our land for what she is and for what she is to be.

Oh, it's home again, and home again America for me'
I want a ship that's westward bound to plough the rolling sea,
To the blessed Land of Room Enough beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight and the flag is full of stars

THE GLOVED HAND

A Detective Story

By BURTON E. STEVENSON

Author of "The Holladay Case," "The Marathon Mystery," "The Mystery of the Boule Cabinet," etc.

Godfrey walked to it, picked up a blotting book, which lay upon it, and turned over the leaves.

"Ah," he said, after a moment. "I was sure of it Here is the final link. Have you a small hand mirror, Miss Vaughan?"

She brought one from her toilet table and handed it to him in evident astonishment.

"What do you see in the mirror?" he asked, and held a page of the blotting book at an angle in front of it.

Miss Vaughan uttered an exclamation of surprise, as she read the words reflected there

Mr Frederic Swain,
1010 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

If not at this address,
please try the Calumet club.

"'Tall oaks from little acorns grow,'" quoted Godfrey, tossing the book back upon the desk "But for the fact that you blotted the envelope, Miss Vaughan, young Swain would never have been accused of murder"

"I do not understand," she murmured.

"Don't you see," he pointed out, "the one question which we have been unable to answer up to this moment has been this: how did Silva know you were going to meet Swain? He had to know it, and know it several hours before the meeting, in order to have those finger prints ready. I concluded, at last, that there must be a blotting book—and there it is."

Miss Vaughan stared at him.

"You seem to be a very wonderful man'" she said.

Godfrey laughed

"It is my every day business to reconstruct mysteries," he said "Shall I reconstruct this one?"

"Please do'" she begged, and motioned us to be seated

Godfrey's face was glowing with the sort of creative fire which, I imagine, illumines the poet's brow at the moment of inspiration

"Where did you first meet Silva?" he asked

"In Paris"

"What was he doing there?"

"He was practicing mysticism My father went to consult him, he was much impressed by him, and they became very intimate"

"And Silva, of course, at once saw the possibilities of exploiting an immensely rich old man whose mind was failing So he comes here as his instructor in orientalism, he does some very marvelous things, by continued hypnosis, he gets your father completely under his control He secures a promise of this estate and a great endowment, he causes your father to make a will in which these bequests are specially stated Then he hesitates, for during his residence in this house a new desire has been added to the old ones It had not often been his fortune to be thrown in daily contact with an innocent and beautiful girl, and he ends by falling in love with you. He knows of your love for Swain He has caused Swain to be forbidden the house but he finds you still indifferent At last, by means of his own entreaties and your father's, he secures your consent to become his disciple He knows that, if once you consent to sit with him, he will in the end, dominate your will, also

"But you ask for three days' delay, and this he grants During every moment of those three days, he will keep you under surveillance Almost at once he guesses at your plan, for you return to the house, you write a letter, and the moment you leave your room, he enters it and sees the impression on the blotter He follows you into the grounds, he sees you throw the letter over the wall and suspects that you are calling Swain to your aid More than that Lester," he added, turning to me "he saw you in the tree, and so kept up his midnight fireworks, on the off chance that you might be watching"

"Yes, that explains that, too," I agreed thoughtfully

When he realizes that you are asking your lover's aid, Godfrey continued to Miss Vaughan "a fiendish idea springs into his mind If Swain answers the call, if he enters the grounds, he will separate him from you once for all by causing him to be found guilty of killing your father He hastens back to the house, tears the leaf from the album of finger prints and prepares the rubber gloves That night, he follows you when you leave the house he overhears your talk in the arbor, and he finds that there is another reason than that of jealousy why he must act at once If your father is found to be insane the will drawn up only three days before will be invalid Silva will lose everything not only you, but the fortune already within his grasp

"He hurries to the house and tells your father of the rendezvous Your father rushes out and brings you back, after a bitter quarrel with Swain, which Silva has, of course foreseen You come up to your room your father flings himself into his chair again It is Silva who has followed you—who has purposely made a noise in order that you might think it was Swain And he carries in his hand the blood soaked handkerchief which Swain dropped when he fled from the arbor

"Up to this point" Godfrey went on, more slowly, "everything is clear—every detail fits every other detail perfectly But, in the next step of the tragedy, one detail is uncertain—whose hand was it drew the cord around your father's throat" I am inclined to think it was Mahbub's If Silva had done the deed he would probably have chosen a method less oriental, but Mahbub, even under hypnotic suggestion, would kill only in the way to which he was accustomed—with a noose Pardon me," he added, quickly, as she shrank into her chair, "I have forgotten how repellent this must be to you. I have spoken brutally"

"Please go on," she murmured. "It is right that I should hear it. I can bear it"

"There is not much more to tell," said Godfrey, gently "Whoever it was that drew the cord, it was Silva who moistened the glove from the blood-soaked handkerchief made the marks upon your father's robe, and then dropped the handkerchief beside his chair Then he returned softly to his room closed the door, put away the [illegible] cleansed his hands, made sure that Mahbub was in his closet, took [illegible] upon the divan and waited I [illegible] the rest And now, [illegible] take my leave, but Miss Vaughan, her eyes shining, stopped me with a hand upon the sleeve.

"I should like to go with you, Mr. Lester," she said. "May I?"

The color deepened in her cheeks as she met my gaze, and I understood what was in her heart. So did Godfrey

"I'll have my car around in 10 minutes," he said, and hastened away.

"I have only to put on my hat," said Miss Vaughan, and I found her waiting for me in the library, when I entered it after arranging with Simmonds and Goldberger to appear with me in the Tombs court and join in asking for Swain's release.

Godfrey's car came up the drive a moment later, and we were off.

The hour that followed was a silent one Godfrey was soon sufficiently occupied guiding the car through the tangle of traffic. Miss Vaughan leaned back in a corner of the tonneau lost in thought It was just six days since I had seen her first, but those six days had left their mark upon her Perhaps, in time, happiness would banish that shadow from her eyes, and that tremulousness from her lips. Every battle leaves it mark, even on the victor, and the battle she had fought had been a desperate one. But, as I looked at her, she seemed more complete, more desirable than she had ever been; I could only hope that Swain would measure up to her

At last, we drew up before the grey stone building, whose barred windows and high wall marked the prison.

"Here we are," I said, and helped her to alight.

Godfrey greeted the door keeper as an old friend, and, after a whispered word, we were allowed to pass. A guard showed us into the bare waiting room, and Godfrey hastened away to explain our errand to the warden.

"Won't you sit down?" I asked, but my companion shook her head, with a frightened little smile, and paced nervously up and down, her hands against her heart. How riotously it was beating I could guess—with what hope, what fear

There was a quick step in the corridor and she stood as if turned to stone

Then the door was flung open, and, with radiant face, she walked straight into the outstreached arms of the man who stood there. I heard her muffled sob, as the arms closed about her and she hid her face against his shoulder; then a hand was laid upon my sleeve.

"Come along, Lester," said Godfrey softly. "This case is ended'"

(The End.)

How the Submarine Fails.

Arthur H. Pollen, in the North American Review.

The most questionable element in the American program is the very large provision of submarines. Fifty fleet submarines and 85 coast submarines, which are to cost in all nearly $80,000,000 make a vast hole in the half bilion that it is proposed to spend. As it is in many respects the most striking, so in another it is the most difficult item to criticise.

Essentially the submarine is a variant of the destroyer Once within attacking range of an enemy it has what the destroyer has not, the power of delivering a daylight attack, remaining itself almost unseen. But its invisibility does give it a function new to naval war It has the capacity to pass through waters which are absolutely commanded by surface ships—because it can pass them submerged and unseen

The use of nets, of mines and of patrols—especially when assisted by aircraft- these at any focal point which submarines coming or going must pass, can do much to obstruct their free passage

The highest submerged speed does not exceed the half-power speed of the slowest warship.

The point is that if the ship is armed the submarine must keep submerged, and if it keeps submerged its maneuvering speed is low, its capacity to get within striking distance is very limited, and its weapon very uncertain If the ship it intends to strike is both at speed and accompanied by destroyers or fast craft, the area of danger of the submarine and the intensity of the vigilance are increased, and the danger from submarines becomes altogether negligible.

"Distance Makes Heart Grow Fonder."

In the Woman's Home Companion appears an account of a husband who recently spent $375 in travel. From the standpoint of culture the travel probably did not do him any good, but from it he gained one thing of importance—a better appreciation of his home. Following is an extract from article.

"He and she had reached that state of mutual boredom that comes sometimes to people who have lived too close together and known each other too well It seemed before he left as though they could not get on together, and she saw him leave without regret. But to her surprise the place seemed very lonesome after he had gone, and to his surprise he found himself roaming hotel corridors, restlessly, vaguely yearning for the companionship that had so long been his life. And when at last he came home it was to discover that his home was the neatest, her cooking the finest, and she herself the most beautiful woman in the world.

"We sometimes wish that the position of 'traveling salesman' were not conferred on one man for life, but could be passed around, so that the lawyer, the doctor, and the preacher who have lived at home forever might each be separated from home at least once in a lifetime. It would add a wonderful freshness and zest to the comforts that too often become commonplace."

"Freedom of Seas" In Baltic.

From the Springfield Republican.

One exasperation we have been spared because of distance is the mining of our coast. To appreciate the feelings of European neutrals we should imagine a fleet of mine sweepers having to go out from New York every day to clear the channels for shipping Sweden has just undertaken this dangerous task in order to clear the outlet of the Baltic from the mines laid by the German navy which have blown up several Swedish ships, one of them in territorial Swedish waters.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, sleep well, look well [illegible] glorious condition to attain, and how very easy it is if one will to adopt the morning inside bath

Folks who are accustomed to dull and heavy when they arise, having headache, stuffy from a cold, tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism, others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from any store that handles drugs which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—Adv

Statistics on Baths

In kinship to godliness the Brooklyn leads. In estrangement from cleanliness, Manhattan goes farthest. So stated the reports of the sanitary bureau, submitted to the board of health. An inspection of all lodging houses except the municipal lodging house, where baths—alas for Manhattan lodgers—are compulsory revealed the fact that Bronx lodgers faithfully take their daily baths Brooklyn lodgers take one in five days; and Manhattan lodgers take one in eight days. There were 3,000 inspections.—New York Times

SPEAKS UP FOR CANADA

And No Wonder—Renting His Land He Made $8.50 Per Acre.

So many Americans now have personal knowledge of Canada that false reports concerning this country are being continually corrected by Americans themselves who know the facts and who are too fair-minded to let a false statement go unchallenged A case in point arises out of a statement supposed to be made by a resident of Alberta, and published recently in the Spokesman-Review, of Spokane. In which the condition of settlers in this country was painted in a very bad way indeed. The writer of this attack on Canada refused to let his name be known, so it can be taken for what it is worth, but Mr S L Wallace, of N 4723 Crestline, Spokane, who lived for some years in Western Canada, came to the defense of the country in the following letter which was published in the Spokesman-Review of February 11, 1916 —

"To the Editor of the Spokesman-Review:

"In Sunday's Spokesman-Review was a letter from a man in Alberta to the chamber of commerce, asking that something be done to keep Americans from going to Canada, and saying that that government was run by the railroads, banks and manufacturers, that once a man got there he never could get away. Had this man published that letter over his own signature there is no doubt but he could get out of Canada.

No country will do as much to help a man to get on his feet, if he tries to help himself, as Canada. I know of the government helping people to provisions, feed, seed grain and fuel, and charging only cost of delivery to the nearest town and 6 per cent. What more could a man ask?

I lived five years in Southern Saskatchewan and earned a patent to 320 acres of as good land as I ever saw. I have raised over 80 bushels of oats on sod, 40 bushels of wheat, and 20 of flax to the acre. Until I lost my health I never was better satisfied anywhere. I had my land rented this last year for one-third. It brought me almost $8.50 per acre, or $1,143.91 for 135 acres.

This man says he loves the land his fathers died for. So do I, and I love the land that gave me my home.

Jess knew that on the plains nearer to the barn lots the calves of the milk cows were turned at night

She knew too that this was no calf she so dimly discerned Then, her suspicion leaping, she herself sprang softly to her feet, seized from the wall her quirt where it hung beside the window and, active and lithe as a boy, dropped through the open casement to the ground outside

Thence she ran, fleet as a wild thing of the plains, over the soft turf to where a slight commotion and that curious stumping of the fore legs of affrighted cattle told her the home calves were huddled in terror and danger A moment more and she could dimly descry their dark mass even as a large object bounding forward toward them in huge leaps showed the girl the cause of their stupefied fear

Jess Kilrain, too, sprang forward cracking her quirt sharply and crying aloud, and so sudden and unexpected was her interruption that the big sheep dog cowered and, turning cringed, belly to the ground, at her feet

She knew that dog, black as coal, save for the tan about his muzzle and the white ruff of splendid hair about his neck -Cardross's prize collie About that cowering neck Jess now gathered the pliant thong of her quirt, holding the dog fast

"Banjo, you devil!" she murmured "You murderin' devil! What am I goin' to do to you, you beauty"

'Leave that to me," said a voice out of the night behind her, and Jess Kilrain straightened in her body You won't deny now, will you, Jess, that it's Blass Cardross's sheep dogs that murders the Loop calves" The brute doubled on his tracks an dodged me, but he ain't goin to double no more"

Buck stepped forward In his extended hand the starlight gleamed upon the steel barrel of his revolver

Stan' back" he said to the girl and the trigger clicked

Quicker than thought Jess let go the loop of the quirt about the dog's neck and lashed the creature with the full force of her strength and as he leaped back with a yelp of pain and fright, fleeing into the darkness, Buck's bullet tore open the earth where he had crouched an instant before

Quivering with white rage the young fellow faced the girl Frightened but determined Jess Kilrain faced him

So it is Cardross" he breathed thickly after a long moment I was right when I told you just now that your love for him was makin you false Jess Kilrain

False to who

To yourself an to every one even to him, for you deny your love

The girl's head lifted defiantly

That's a lie she cried

Buck turned from her laughter caustic and scornful on his lips

'You're a woman ' he muttered 'My hands is tied If a man had said it to me they'd be his last words for a time I'm goin to get my horse'

She made no effort to detain him Curiously her anger burned not against him but again Blass Cardross for the secrecy he imposed upon her

CHAPTER IV

WHEN FRIENDS FALL OUT

Of the events of that night Buck Brannon said nothing to any one and indeed to tighten the tension that now existed between Earle Worthing and Cardross There had been a meeting between these two, sought of intent by Worthing, though somewhat against the grain and prompted by the pleading of his mother in the interest of their old friendship

Give him one more chance Earle,' Mrs Worthing had urged Then, if he persists, I'll say no more Truly, the devil seems to have entered into Blass Cardross

So Worthing had taken horse and ridden over to the Raccoon river range and there before the house working among the flowers on the big beds he found Nance Cardross She drew off her gloves and, as he approached after hitching his horse, went forward to meet him

You have become a stranger Earle" she said, some touch of constraint in her manner for all her effort

'Has it been of my doing Nance? It was not easy for me to come today Really my coming is in the nature of a truce'

A slight color deepened in Nance Cardross cheeks and her glance turned aside

You must fight your battles with Blass alone she said a little coldly "Do you wish to see him

That is what I came for I had hardly hoped to see you Nance'

'Yet I am pretty substantially visible. How are your mothers plants this spring"

'Why do you never come to see them'' he asked gravely

'Have you not made that impossible when every day your cattle tread on my brother grows"

'You can really put it that way Nance? Why, I am here today to try once more if I cannot reach some more friendly understanding with Blass And you must know my leading motive in doing that 'I will go and send him to you" said the girl, disregarding the meaning in his last words "He may go out the back way while we stand here talking

She left him with that a king no show of asking him to go with her into the house, and the omission was significant to Worthing, who since his boyhood had been as much at home there as in his own house His face set rather grimly as he waited

A moment later Cardross came toward him across the sward

His greeting was not friendly

"I am somewhat at a loss to understand your being here Worthing, he said, "after the many unexplained outrages I have suffered at the hands of your men."

Their eyes met squarely, but it was anger that gave decision to those of Cardross.

"I have come," Worthing answered "to see if I might not avert a tenfold greater outrage on your part, Blass—avert it peacefully if I can for avert it, in one way or another, I shall'

"Then you have had your ride for nothing," said Cardross. "I suppose you refer to my plans of irrigation"

I refer to your plans to deprive me of my water rights."

Cardross shrugged his shoulders He smiled annoyingly

"It is your misfortune, Worthing that the Raccoon river runs through my land to yours"

Worthing controlled himself admirably

'Is our old friendship nothing to you, Blass?' he asked quietly "Would it not be well for each of us to remember it before it is too late?"

Cardross laughed.

Why talk rubbish?" he demanded curtly "If you bid fair to be the loser in the little war you inaugurated, why squeal about it, Worthing?"

For a moment Worthing said nothing There was no plea in his voice when he finally spoke

And that is your answer, then' I had hardly expected it to be otherwise, though I had hoped" His head lifted suddenly 'Every dollar you spend, Bliss that threatens to deprive me of any gallon of water I need, you will spend in vain I warn you of that in good part You had better remember it'

An instant he hesitated

That's all, I guess," he then said "Other things will take care of themselves," and walked rapidly toward his horse

He did not ride homeward at once, but in the contrary direction, and so it was that some little time later, returning toward the Loop, he struck the more direct trail that led through the dividing woods of the two ranches and so on to his own corrals and barns.

And so it was, too, that in the heart of those woods where they dipped down into the tangled ravine that formed the actual boundary line between the Loop and the Raccoon river ranges. Worthing halted at the sound of a woman's voice raised in tense and passionate pleading.

"Let me speak of it Blass'" cried Jess Kilrain entreatingly. "Let me tell my father. Why does you try to hide your love for me, an' make me guard it like it was a sameful thing? I'm feared it will come to make me hate it Blass I'm feared of that'"

Worthing caught the sound of Cardross soft laugh

"Don't you see Jess," he murmured and in the silence the words came clearly that now it is all our very own just you and me, with the whole world shut out? Why do you want to let every one into our secret?"

I hate that secret'" Jess cried her low voice vehement "It's made me do what I never done in all my life before lie I've lied about what I ought to be proud to have the whole world know Why do you make me do that Bliss' Tell me why''

Worthing rode on It was not for him to hear more but in that instant the last remnant of his old time friendship for Bliss Cardross died in his heart

CHAPTER V

SHEEP AND MEN.

It had happened again, and not a man on Worthing's outfit but took it as a personal challenge and affront

Kilrain Buck Brannon and others, riding out one morning before the sun was well up had seen the choicest bit of pasturage of the nearer ranges of the Loop just beyond the home enclosures white with the detested forms of thousands of Cardross' sheep, and the land denuded in one night of more grass than their own cattle would have consumed in many

Now wouldn't that make the pages of your bible shrivel, Kilrain?" demanded the younger man "What self respectin long'orn is ever goin' to be willin to graze on that p'isoned land? Look at them sanctimonious bunches of wool reprovin' us for bein' here with them church like eyes of theirn' Let me find a ram what's got some spunk in him'"

Wait Buck," called the foreman. 'I'm goin to put a stop to this thing Cardoss s been warned over an' over again I'm goin to take a big bunch of them sheep up to the corral, an' if he wants em he can pay ransom for em Cut out a good thick bunch, boys"

They did it with a will, carrying the bleating flock back to the corrals, while others of the men drove the larger number over to the Raccoon river ranges from which they had strayed—strayed or been driven, for the question was an open one

Cardoss had done many things of late to justify the suspicion

"It's funny 'bout meanness in a man ain't it, Buck'" said Kilrain, while they waited for the return of the men who had driven off the sheep to their own pasturage. "It's just like the disposition of a bull. The most innocent yearlin' will make the worst 3-year-ole, an then keep on gittin' uglier an' cusseder for every new ring roun' his horns Now who'd ha' thought Blass Cardross would ever turn so pesky'"

The smile left Buck's face. He had his own reasons for being disturbed over Cardross' ugliness.

Is you watchin' him careful, Kilrain?" he asked He hesitated "I think you got special cause to, Martin," he added, slowly

Kilrain glanced up, a keen scrutiny in his regard

"I know what you mean, Buck," he answered, with grave concern, "but I think Jess can take care of herself"

The younger man looked over the level plains, his eyes coming slowly back to Kilrain's face Something grim in the seriousness that was upon him had dashed the usual boyshness from his bearing

'Martin," he said, "if he played her false—or even if I was sure that he meant to—I'd kill him sure as hell holds fire."

Kilrain paled. There was an ominous suggestion in Buck's tense words which threw a baleful color over the other man's unsettled doubts that actually weakened him for the moment. He threw off the feeling by an effort.

'I want you to ride over to him now, Buck," he said, "an' tell him 'bout them sheep. Let him know I sent you, hear—not Worthing. Can I trust you, Buck? Just a cold business proposition—no hot feelin's."

"Sure," said Buck, brightening. "You just soak him hard, Kilrain, an' I'll tell him soft—soft as an April shower an' as penetrating'. What'll it be'"

"Market value," returned Kilrain "Them sheep is ours. Leastways, he don't git 'em on any other terms."

But when Buck delivered his message to Blass Cardross, the owner of the Raccoon River ranch flew into a rage

Ransom to hell'" he cried. "So you turn cattle thieves on the Loop, do you? And you have the nerve, Brannon, to come on my place to bring me a message like that' Clear out with you, and tell those that sent you I say they are a gang of thieves I'll come after my sheep in my own way"

'Sure," replied Buck, smiling pleasantly I never come expectin' to stay, an' I'll just naturally tell what you said They'd want to know As for your own way' 'bout them sheep which ain't no longer yourn, I'd be careful, Mr Cardross We don't keep no murderin', thievin' sheep dogs on the Loop, but there's dogs there what bark powerful true, six times to a clip, and some more--if needs be."

'Get out with you!" cried Cardross, angrily "When I want your advice I'll pay for it."

Having delivered his message and received his answer, Buck should have been discreet and ridden off, but he lingered, standing by his horse's head, his disconcerting gaze studying Cardross with a calm leisureliness. He had little goodwill for Cardross, distrusting him, fearing him where fear gripped him with a deadly intensity of passion that always threatened to transform him when he gave it a thought.

He knew that Jess Kilrain, whom he loved, loved this man He knew with an instinct sharpened by his love that Cardross was not playing fair with the girl.

Watching Cardross now, the hated thought leaped into unpremeditated words. He forgot his mission, he forgot Kilrain's ammunition. He remembered only the unhappiness which threatened Jess Kilrain at the hands of the man before him

An when you come over, Cardross," he said, his manner quite other from the whimsical banter which had marked it, 'don't come by way of the Skunk Hollow The air's gittin p'isonous in that ravine'"

Blass Cardross flushed and paled. His breath came sharply

'By heaven!" he cried, "but you take a chance'" With sudden caution he checked himself. "Just what do you mean by that, Buck Brannon?" he demanded hotly.

I reckon you don't have to ask me that," retorted Buck, coldly contemptuous. Just remember them words of mine The Skunk Hollow's gittin' mighty unwholesome, Cardross—plumb dangerous, I might say." His temper suddenly flared. "Keep out of it, you snake!'

So impetuously had the words come that Blass Cardross fell back, only to spring as quickly forward, chest almost to chest with the other. And so for an instant they stood while the alarmed cry of Nance Cardross, as she ran rapidly toward them, snapped the threatening tension. Cardross, muttering an oath, stepped back.

Buck turned to his horse.

Another time, Buck Brannon," Cardross murmured "I'll not forget."

And, if you do," said the other, swinging on to his horse, "I'll jog your memory pretty lively

Cardross turned impatiently at the touch of his sister's hand upon his arm.

MISGIVINGS

Jess Kilrain stood behind her father's chair drawn up before the open door of things 277 pounds ous 270 pounds ride 240 pounds no the remarkable of which is R. W. Elder's tun man when she entered test, one 4-year-old, a child under. Barring mishaps this herd Kil H you and Jess?" he asked

The girl came forward, seating herself on the broad arm of the chair

Aunt Agnes knows if she waits 10 minutes I'd help her," she said "She prefers to go ahead alone, so she can have the chance to say I didn't help her That pleases her, father, more'n my help would help, an I've somethin' to say to you You've done wrong, father, 'bout them sheep. If Earle Worthing was home he'd say so too"

Kilrain was sober Since Buck's report of his reception by Cardross that morning, the foreman had reached the same opinion as his daughter's

"P'r'haps," he admitted, "but it's done now, Jess Anyway, you needn't bother

'I'm thinkin' of you," she said, suspecting a reproach in his words. "You've bit off more'n you can chew, father, an' you can't either swallow it or spit it out'

Kilrain laughed, putting up an arm and encircling the girl's waist. "You come powerful nigh bein' right 'bout that, Jess" he granted "I reckon I was too hot under my collar when I done it"

Jess nodded

'I reckon that's it, an' humble pie's sharper than even rhubarb pie"

"There'll be no humble pie 'bout it," said Kilrain, rising and laying down his pipe. "The bridges is all down 'tween Cardrossa an' the Loop, an' it's his own doin's. You'll have mutton pie, my gal, till you're plumb sick of it."

'P'r'haps an' p'r'haps not."

She handed Kilrain his hat and took his parting kiss, going into the kitchen to join her aunt.

FLOWERS ON HATS.

Every little while in millinery modes the pretty fashion of underbrim trimming reappears This style, which has been out of fashion for nearly a decade, seems to be coming back again with the large sleeves, high hats and other old fashioned details.

One way this trimming has reappeared is as a bandeau of silk, covered by roses, closely placed and encircling the hair like a wreath. Another trimming is seen in the new poke like hats, which are turned up at the back and made to tip over the nose a bit by a band which is placed at the back and covered by flowers.

The Passing of Youth.

From the American Magazine.

To me the passing of youth was escaping from a torment of passion, strife and trouble into a placid content. My griefs and joys grew less violent, I ceased hating those who had wronged me, and, in lesser degree, grew calmer in my attachments. Undisturbed by passions I found I could think more clearly, be more liberal and understand better.

Wind Watches by Motor.

While the winding of one's watch would seem to call for only a small amount of energy, it assumes a significant aspect when multiplied several hundred times, as in the instance of a watch-repairing concern in New York city, part of whose work it is to wind 700 or more watches each day To facilitate the work the firm uses an electric motor, which drives a small felt lined socket through friction drive It is only necessary to start the motor and hold the stem of the watch against the felt-lined socket to wind the timepiece When the watch is wound the tightened spring overcomes the pressure between the motor pulley and the friction disk, with the result that slippage takes place Simple as this electric watch-winding equipment is, it has replaced several men formerly required for the work

"Ideal" Lawnmower Grinders

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT that owing to a Lawnmowers peculian shape it is next to impossible to sharpen the blades with a file; and many a first-class mower has been ruined in the attempt. Resort has been made to emery sticks and emery dust and while this method is a cheap one it is not desirable as the clearance of the cutting blade is reduced, making more surface in contact with the lower bar. As the edges become dull the mower has to be adjusted very close so that it TEARS the grass INSTEAD OF SHEARING IT, at the same time making tt run harder than ever. With my machine your old mower will be made to cut as well as a new one.

I solicit a share of your work.

Annual Report Klemme Co Teasting Association

The Association completed its testing year April 15, 1916. There were no phenomenal records made but many of the cows have done remarkably well, considering the scarcity of corn to make properly balanced rations of the most efficiency for milk production. The most commentable record made by one cow was Greeny, a 7-year-old Gr. Sh., owned by Emil Beier.. Greeny produced 414 pounds of butterfat from 10,694 pounds of milk with an average test of 3.8 per cent.

This record was made under ordinary conditions. She was not pampered with extravagance. No fancy mill feeds, not even silage Here is her ration.

Roughage:

Total cost of feed for year $31.50; cost to produce 1 pound of butterfat is 8c Net profit $92 81 value of butterfat above cost of feed. Her calf was sold at 7 months of age for $35.00. The value of the calf at birth, the skim milk and manure would compensate for all charges other than feed

BLIND MEN LEARN SALESMANSHIP

WASHINGTON CLASS MAKES PROGRESS WITH THIS, AS WELL AS ADVERTISING

OPENS A NEW BUSINESS FIELD

Brooklyn Association for Improving Condition of the Poor Encouraged.

Brooklyn, N Y.—With eyes sightless, but with mental perception abnormally keen, a group of 15 earnest young men are undertaking the study of advertising and salesmanship. Each Saturday afternoon the members of this unique class gather in a room on the third floor of the building at 161 Livingston street, occupied by the Brooklyn Association for Improving the condition of the poor.

A short time ago Charles B Hayes, director of the work for the blind division of the association, hit upon a plan whereby the adult blind who have reached an academic stage in their education could become useful and independent members of society by entering branches of the trades and professions wherein lack of eyesight would not prove unsurmountable obstacle

The experiment was first tried with a class in advanced typewriting, specializing in the transcription of court testimony by means of the dictaphone. Three graduates of the first class have already secured good positions with court stenographers who have found their services extremely satisfactory. The success of the first effort encouraged Mr Hayes to establish a class in advertising and salesmanship.

Guy Hubbart, who volunteered to devote himself to the work, and give up his Saturday afternoons for the benefit of the blind students, is a man well qualified for the task He is both a practical advertising man and an experienced teacher of advertising and selling Besides being connected with the staff of The Dry Goods Economist, a trade publication, Mr Hubbart has for the past four years successfully conducted courses in advertising and salesmanship at Columbia.

During the first few weeks the members of the class have shown remarkable progress and Mr. Hubbart justly prides himself on their accomplishments thus far. He assured a reporter that much dormant talent had been discovered and that it was only a matter of a short time before the effects of the students at preparing advertising copy could be presented as models for that kind of work

The method of instruction differs but slightly from that pursued in an ordinary class. The students hear weekly lectures and individual assignments are given for preparation during the interval between sessions. This includes the preparation of advertising copy, which the members write on the typewriter, most of them being adepts at the touch system of operation.

No tuition fees are charged to members of the class residing within this borough. The class has grown rapidly and Mr. Hayes predicts it will be a matter of only a short time before a permanent institution for the education of the blind to the higher fields of endeavor will be established in Brooklyn.

Representatives of the Teachers College at Columbia have followed the movement very closely and promised their active aid in carrying on the work. It is expected that shortly the services of one of the professors of that institution will be secured in connection with the organization of a class in advanced English for the blind.

The class in advertising and salesmanship is the first of its kind in this country.

LOSS OF DODGE WILL CAUSES TANGLE OVER $300,000 TRUST FUND

Executors Ask Court For Ruling on Disposition—Daughters' Rights Involved.

Council Bluffs, Ia., April 29.—Because [illegible] old will made by the late General Dodge in 1890 has been either destroyed or lost, a dispute has arisen over the ownership of a $300,000 trust fund created by General Dodge for [illegible] of his three daughters.

The executors of the Dodge estate have petitioned Judge Wheeler, of the district court, to rule about the disposition of this fund. The Dodge heirs, the city of Council Bluffs and Norwich university, military academy at Northfield, Vt., are all interested in the dispute.

In [illegible] General Dodge created what is known as the N. P. Dodge trust fund, the income of which was to go to his wife and unmarried daughter, Miss Anne Dodge. In 1894 this trust fund was split in two.

On January 30, 1894, General Dodge entered into an agreement by which the Pusey trust fund of $150,000 was created. The income from this goes to General Dodge's widow, who is now residing with Miss Anne Dodge in New York. There is no dispute about this fund.

On February 24, 1894, General Dodge entered into an agreement by which the Morgan Jones trust fund was created. The income from this fund, which is in dispute, goes to General Dodge's three daughters.

In this agreement it is stated specifically that the fund shall be disposed of in accordance with the terms of the will of 1890. The old will is not to be found. In the last will of the general, dated February 3, 1911, no direct reference was made concerning the disposition of this 'Morgan Jones trust fund.'

It is the contention, or opinion, of the executors that the principal of this fund is at the disposal of the three daughters. Scott believes that the Morgan Jones fund is an entity entirely separate from the estate of General Dodge. He believes that the daughters have the power to split up this $300,000, and use the proceeds of the securities as they see fit.

Twombly and Mayne contend that the Morgan Jones fund belongs to the estate. Peterson, acting for the city, stated that the city would not take sides in the matter, although it would mean $75,000 for the city if Twombly's contention is upheld.

If Judge Wheeler upholds Scott the [illegible] never be declared a part [illegible] Dodge's estate. In case [illegible] upheld the $300,000 will [illegible] of the $4,000,000 trust [illegible] the main body of the Dodge estate.

In [illegible] latter case the principal can [illegible] until 21 years after [illegible] of General Dodge's youngest [illegible]. The whole fund will then [illegible] to the Dodge heirs, [illegible] city of Council Bluffs [illegible] Norwich university.

[illegible], Ia., April 29.—Clyde [illegible] years, a farmer living near [illegible] is occupying quarters in [illegible] county jail here as [illegible] impersonating his brother, [illegible] Robinson. Clyde Robinson [illegible] Council Bluffs a few days ago [illegible] H. At his suggestion M[illegible] called up the banker at [illegible] who promptly declared [illegible] Robert Robinson was well known [illegible] his check good. Mills [illegible] check for $[illegible].

[illegible] came a volunteer call from the banker, who said he had just learned that Robert Robinson was at home in Portsmouth and not in Council Bluffs. He suggested it might be his brother, Clyde Robinson, as proved to be correct. A search by the police, Clyde's arrest and his failure to give $1,000 bond on a forgery charge when bound over to the grand jury followed.

JEWELRY STORE DAMAGED BY GAS TANK EXPLOSION

S[illegible] City, Ia., April 29.—While C. W. Sawyers was filling a gas tank in his jewelry store Wednesday afternoon the pressure suddenly became too great and the tank exploded with [illegible] force. The showcases in the room were demolished and the glass [illegible] of the store was blown into the street. While in the Sawyers living rooms on the second floor pictures were jarred from the wall and dishes broken while Mrs. Sawyers was thrown to the floor.

Mr. Sawyers was standing close to the gas tank when it exploded but the force of the explosion seemed to be away from him and he escaped without serious bruises.

The explosion occurred about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and a number of school children had just passed.

ROOSEVELT SHOWS STRONG IN HAMILTON COUNTY TEST

Webster City, Ia., April 29.—After Senator A. B. Cummins, the people of Hamilton county favor Theodore Roosevelt as the republican nominee for the presidency. This is indicated in a straw ballot, conducted by the Webster City Journal and announced today. A total of 605 ballots were cast, the result being as follows: Roosevelt 3[illegible], Hughes 171, Ford 38.

The straw vote taken by the Journal assumed that the people of the county were for Senator Cummins and the ballot as published, asked voters to express their second choice assuming that the Iowa senator stood first in their affections. This vote shows that Roosevelt has a clear majority of 190 over both Justice Hughes and Henry Ford. Hughes and Ford together got 200 votes.

ADVANCE "TIPS" INDICATE STRIKE OF IOWA MINERS

Des Moines, Ia., April 29.—Owing to difficulties which have arisen over details of the mining wage agreement on the joint committee of miners and operators, Iowa mine owners fear that there may be a strike in the Iowa coal fields. Large users of fuel are being notified to store a sufficient supply to meet emergency needs.

Among the users of coal notified to lay in a supply was the state executive council. A meeting was called this morning to consider the matter. The storage capacity of the statehouse heating plant is small. It was determined that all coal possible will be stored. By the time that is used the officials say summer will be about to begin and the state force can get along without heat.

ROCK RAPIDS—At the annual meeting and banquet of the Rock Rapids Commercial club resolutions were adopted indorsing the candidacy of S. D. Rinker for congress.

KEYNOTERS FOR TWO IOWA CONVENTIONS

Clark to Sound "War Cry" at Republican Meeting—Meredith Acts For Democrats.

Des Moines, Ia., April 29.—Howard K. Clark of Des Moines was named temporary chairman of the state republican convention to be held at Cedar Rapids on May 1. The designation was made by the state central committee today. Ora Williams was named secretary. C. E. Pickett of Waterloo was honorably slated for permanent chairman. The committee on arrangements is D. E. Goodell, W. G. Haskell and E. R. Moore.

Clinton, Ia., April 29.—Keynotes for the state and national democratic campaigns will be officially sounded in Iowa for the first time at the state convention to be held in Clinton on May 9 and 10.

With this announcement the results of the first special conference of democratic party leaders held here were made known yesterday afternoon.

The state keynote speech will be delivered to the 1,000 delegates in the Clinton coliseum on the morning of May 10 by E. T. Meredith, candidate for governor. The national political political analysis will be made in the evening by either Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels or Governor Major of Missouri.

WATERLOO COUNCIL IN DEADLOCK ON PAY CHECKS

Waterloo, Ia., April 29.—The pay checks of all city employes were held up yesterday pending an opinion by the city attorney on the right of the mayor to cast a deciding vote on a resolution authorizing the payment of bills.

The six members of the new council were deadlocked last night or the proposition to consolidate the public funds. The three councilmen from the west side of the city opposed the resolution providing for the payment of all bills from one fund, while those from the east side, aided by Mayor Law, prevented the tabling of the resolution, and a special meeting will be held Friday evening to settle the question.

The consolidation of the street department under the supervision of a single commission also occasioned a dispute so that action has been taken on the proposed ordinance to create the office of purchasing agent.

GIRL EXPOSES MAN AND WIFE CAUSES HIS ARREST

Dubuque, Ia., April 29.—Miss Lucile Hatfield, 15-year-old girl whose mysterious disappearance Friday evening last, caused much anxiety and whose uncle caused the name of an innocent girl to be published in an effort to hide his niece's identity under the cloak of a fictitious name, yesterday afternoon caused a furore of excitement when she charged Alba Shireman as being the man with whom she had spent Friday night. Shireman was arrested on a warrant sworn out by his wife and was later bound over to the grand jury.

Miss Hatfield was arrested on a charge of incorrigibility. In the meantime Mrs. Shireman had her husband arrested on a statutory charge. As the girl was before the judge in circuit court, Shireman was brought into the room and she identified him as the "man in the case." It developed that the girl had met Shireman at the roller skating rink and that he had taken her to the apartment building in which he and his family live. The two entered another apartment in the same building not occupied at the time and there, according to the girl's testimony, they spent the night.

DUBUQUE BUILDINGS THREATENED BY FLOOD

Dubuque, Ia., April 29.—It is now feared the continued high water from the Mississippi will greatly damage the foundations of numerous large buildings in the lower sections of the city.

The water has been backed into their cellars now for more than two weeks, but has receded about two feet. Now there is another and even higher rise on the way, a rise that it is believed will reach 21 or even 22 feet.

Stocks of goods and merchandise of all kinds were removed before the flood came. It is the damage which the prolonged soaking is expected to do to the foundations and walls that is feared.

ALLEN MADE IMPRESSION ON STOCK YARDS QUESTION

Washington, D. C., April 29.—State Senator Joe Allen departed for Iowa today following his appearance before the House committee of judiciary to urge that comprehensive legislation be enacted to regulate the packing interests. Senator Allen's views have made an impression on the commission in particular the view that the government ought to regulate the stock yards.

Representative Green is trying to work out a plan for such regulation which will be constitutional. He is convinced as is Representative Steele, that if all users of the stock yards have an equal chance independent packing establishments will be built up.

LAKE PARK—The J. J. Wilhelmyra family, living three and one-half miles north of here met with an affliction in the death of two sons, one dying Monday night and the other Tuesday afternoon. The boys were 4 and 5 years of age and died from the effects of lead poisoning, having been sick several days. A third child also was seriously sick, but will recover. It is not known where nor just how they got the poison but it is thought from a bottle or can in the yard.

DUBUQUE—Frank Maringo, a restaurant proprietor of Cedar Rapids, pleaded guilty of violation of the Mann white slave act and was sentenced by Judge Reed to 15 months in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth. Maringo is an unnaturalized Greek, unmarried. His crime was transporting a woman to Cedar Rapids from Gary.

BURLINGTON—Former State Senator F. M. McSberry of Columbus Junction will not be a candidate for the republican nomination for congress in the First district. His withdrawal leaves three candidates—Congressman Kennedy, State Representative Kopp of Mount Pleasant and Railroad Commissioner Clifford Thorne.

FARMER GOES INSANE AND ATTACKS WOMAN

Shoots Through Window Without Provocation—Threatened to Murder His Wife

Jefferson, Ia., April 28.—Failure of a cartridge to explode perhaps saved the life of Mrs. H. A. Eckhart, a farmer's wife, living near Paton, when an insane neighbor pulled the trigger of a gun pointed at her through a bedroom window.

Charles Van Pelt, a farmer, suddenly became insane during the night and told his wife that it was his duty to kill his 4-year-old daughter and himself. Mrs. Van Pelt attempted to quiet her husband. In reply, Van Pelt threatened to kill her.

He suddenly jumped out of bed and rushed out of the house. His wife was afraid to follow him.

Van Pelt rushed across the field to the Eckhart place and fired a shot through the window of their bedroom. The noise of the explosion awakened Mrs. Eckhart, who arose to investigate.

Seeing her, Van Pelt pointed the gun at her head and pulled the trigger. The shell failed to explode.

Eckhart and a hired man secured a rope and after a stiff encounter with the insane man, succeeded in binding him.

An insanity commission met promptly and ordered Van Pelt taken to the state hospital at Clarinda.

SWENSON NOT OPPOSING BETTER ROADS CAMPAIGN

Des Moines, Ia., April 28.—Representative Peter Swenson of O'Brien county, one of the legislators marked for slaughter by certain alleged "boosters," was in Des Moines yesterday. In relation to the outside campaign against him, Mr. Swenson declared that he defies any one to prove that he is the reactionary on road matters or any other matters which the good roads men declare him to be. He also declared that nothing in his record as a county supervisor in O'Brien county or as the representative of that county in the house can be cited to substantiate the claim of his opponents.

"I am for good roads. No one can prove the contrary," he said, "but I believe that the people themselves must be the ones to vote indebtedness upon themselves for construction of the roads, and I am unalterably opposed to state aid because when you stop to consider what the state is, you find that it is nothing but the people themselves. The county is the unit which should determine the road question."

SUIT AT COUNCIL BLUFFS OVER ANCIENT VIOLIN

Council Bluffs, Ia., April 28.—A jury in district court today listened to the evidence and later the arguments of counsel in a case involving the sale of a violin said to have been made in Germany in 1740, almost 200 years ago, by Gallienus, in which Mrs. Lela O. Schmitt claims $1,000 from Pearl Phillips, engaged in the coal business here, for the aged instrument.

It was claimed that the instrument was in somewhat battered condition and that it required repairs at the hands of a local dealer in violins and in antiquities, which were to cost $25. Upon their completion according to the oral agreement upon which suit was brought, it was to be delivered to Phillips and the purchase prices of $1,000 paid. Dickerson, the violin expert, was on the witness stand this morning telling of the antique instrument and its condition and value. Trial of the case was started yesterday.

DUBUQUE CITIZENS STAGE BIG PEACE DEMONSTRATIONS

Dubuque, Ia., April 28.—Dubuque had a "peace" demonstration last night when 5,000 men and women, a large per cent of them Germans, paraded the streets, led by several bands. The streets in all the business portion of the city were crowded as on fair or circus day. Marchers in the parade carried banners and transparencies bearing statements of prominent men telling why America should remain at peace and why it should "give a square deal to all nations."

Bands played nothing but American airs. The marchers carried small American flags and scores of automobiles were covered with the national colors. No untoward act marked the proceedings. After the parade as many as possible crowded into the Grand opera house to hear a peace address by Patrick O'Donnell, of Chicago. His contention was that the result of the present war hinges on which country can cripple the resources of the other, and America has won its wars by crippling the resources of its adversaries. President Wilson is determined Germany shall not thus handicap England.

Resolutions were adopted and forwarded by wire to the president and the Iowa representatives in congress.

John T. Adams, national republican committeeman, rode in an automobile in the parade and sat on the platform.

MISSOURI RIVER SWALLOWS FARM NEAR MONDAMIN

Mondamin, Ia., April 28.—Serious losses are again occurring near here as a result of the inroads of the Missouri river. Last year L. S. Taylor, of Lincoln, Neb., purchased a fine river botton farm. Yesterday Mr. Taylor was here trying to sell the buildings on the place. All that is left of the farm is about 10 acres and unless the buildings are moved quickly they, too, will have been swallowed up.

R. H. Weldon's fine farm, much of which was taken last year, is now nearly all gone and he has been compelled to move and is now living in town. His farm buildings are again in danger of going. These losses represent thousands of dollars.

ARGUMENTS FILED IN MULCT APPEAL CASE

Liquor Forces Claim Title of Law Defective—Supplement Not Approved

Des Moines, Ia., April 27.—Written arguments attacking the validity of the mulct repeal law, which closed Iowa saloons January 1, 1916, were filed in the supreme court yesterday by attorneys for the wets in three test cases appealed from Davenport. The department of justice has 30 days to file the written arguments for the state, and the case will be argued orally next week before the high court at a full bench hearing.

Bollinger & Block and Carl H. Lambach are the attorneys for the liquor forces in the Davenport cases. They assert that the state applied to the district court for permanent injunctions against two saloons which sold liquor January 1, 1916, as a basis of testing the mulct repeal law. The lower court upheld the validity of the measure in question and granted the injunctions. From this decision they were appealed.

The liquor forces in the written arguments, assert the mulct repeal law is null and void for the reason that its subject had not been expressed in its title, that the law is void as far as Davenport liquor dealers are concerned for a period of five years from and after the date of the finding sufficient of the general statement of consent for the reason that such act, if enforced in Davenport, would be an unlawful impairment of the accrued and vested right of said city to levy and collect the regular additional mulct taxes during the five-year period, also that the law was not by specific reference or special provision contained therein made applicable to cities under special charter."

The attorneys attack the validity of the supplement to the code, 1913, claiming it was never approved by the legislature or the code commission. They say that the mulct repeal law was passed when the supplement was yet uncompleted, and therefore nothing in it could be repealed, for it was not yet in official existence. They declare that every law must have a time of going into effect, but that the supplement to the code, 1913 did not have a definite date. The first volumes of the supplement which were delivered were without an index.

DUBLIN UPRISING LONG PLANNED BY REBEL CHIEFTAIN

Began Preparations For Revolt When the Conscription Talk First Started In Great Britain.

CLAIM 200,000 ARMED MEN

Revolution Was Not Planned in America Leaders Assert—London Is Silent About Late Developments

NO NEWS FROM IRELAND

Up to a late hour [illegible] noon no dispatches [illegible] the situation in Ireland [illegible] reached this country [illegible] don. There has been [illegible] mation from any source which [illegible] er matters in Ireland [illegible] standstill or if [illegible] turbances have occurred.

New York, April 29.—Capt. Patrick Wallace, commander of a Connemara brigade of the Irish volunteers who is now in New York, is authority for the statement that the present situation in Ireland was not fostered in Germany nor in America.

"The plans of the Irish volunteers," he said, "have been ready ever since the first talk of conscription was heard in Ireland. At the time of the revolt there were 3,000 fully armed and fully trained volunteers in Dublin. Out through the country there were 60,000. With the neutral bodies there are today 200,000 Irish volunteers who when the real test comes will take the field against the English."

An opposite view is expressed by the Marquis of Aberdeen, for nine years viceroy of Ireland.

Lord Aberdeen, who is now in New York, said that while he did not underestimate the seriousness of the situation, he was, nevertheless convinced that the outbreak would be of short duration.

CASEMENT FORESAW IRISH REPUBLIC THROUGH EFFORT

New York, April 29.—In a [illegible] given out by Sir Roger Casement [illegible] Berlin St. Patrick's day, he sa[illegible]

"This war will result in [illegible] about the freedom of the little green isle, and, by the blessing of God, the freedom for which so many Irishmen have sacrificed their lives and [illegible] will not be given to us by the [illegible] empires gallantly resisting the onslaughts of the British forces and those who have joined Great Britain in trying to destroy its greatest commercial rival, without at least [illegible] represented on the firing line [illegible] Irishmen shooting as their [illegible] did—not with the 'redcoats,' but at them.

"In spite of Great Britain's [illegible] of the seas, the black shame will never be on the Irish race that it was [illegible] the result of a world war, without striking one blow against its eternal oppressor. Today my prayer is [illegible] one that millions of Irishmen have breathed "in the long night of the tyrant's sin," many of them on the scaffold or when in extremis in the hulks or in a convict settlement—for love of their native land. My prayer is not "God save Ireland," but God bless the Irish republic soon to be born, a worthy and loyal friend to the greater republic across the sea that has been a haven of rest to so many of Erin's persecuted sons and daughters."

GERMANS DOUBT SUCCESS OF SINN FEIN UPRISING

London, April 28.—"The Cologne Gazette appears to expect no success from the Sinn Fein revolt in Ireland," Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent telegraphs. It cautions its readers not to overestimate the effect which the disturbances will have on the political and military situation in England and points out the strength of the British forces in Ireland.

The Gazette continues:

"One must ask, however, at a moment when a solution is being sought of the tense situation between the United States and Germany, what impression news of the disturbances in Dublin will have on millions of Irishmen in North America. We must wait to see what attitude they will take toward President Wilson's demands and how far their influence extends on the parties that must reckon with this factor in the elections."

DIRECT DISPATCHES ABOUT IRELAND ARE FORBIDDEN

London, April 27, (delayed).—The German press has not been permitted to comment on Sir Roger Casement's incident, but prints telegrams from Dutch papers with regard to the trouble in Ireland, says the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company at Amsterdam.

"The Cologne Volks Zeitung is quoted by the correspondent as saying that the situation in Ireland must be watched by Germany, especially in view of the present American crisis. Had the adventure succeeded, declares the newspaper, it would have had immense influence on feeling in America towards Germany, but as things have happened, it will do little good."

[illegible] April 29.—Just as the allies [ar]e preparing for the greatest drive [of t]he war, the Germans appear to [hav]e [assu]med the initiative again, and [illegible] immediate prospects of a [illegible] on the front held by the [illegible] forces. Recently it was [illegible] that about 40 German divi- [illegible] massed along this line. This [illegible] total of about 800,000 German [illegible]. The British probably have [illegible] that number on this line [illegible] for some time have been [illegible] for the greatest offensive [the] world has ever seen.

Signs of Coming Offensive.

The English have taken over [Fr]ench front down to the point near- [est] Paris where the line turns east, [abo]ut 150 miles of the western battle [fro]nt.

[Gen]eral Joffre believes the war will [be] [dec]ided in France and Belgium. He [ha]s believed it since the fall of 1914 [an]d he has allowed no development to [dete]r him from his conception of the [nece]ssities in the great conflict.

He further believes that only a drive [on a] scale never before attempted by [ma]n can break the German defense. [The] offensives by the allies last spring [an]d last fall, when they were begun [wi]th great hopes, have served to teach [Jof]fre just what a stupendous effort will [be] required to crush the foe. He has [ta]ken them as lessons well worth the [co]st.

[N]ew York Police Expect to Make Arrests Soon—"Badger Game" Profitable

[New] York, April [illegible]—A number of [arr]ests are expected here soon in a [cam]paign to break up gangs of [illegible] who have been preying [on] wealthy visitors. Police Commis- [sio]ner [Woods] is said today that his in- [ve]stigation had been proceeding for [sev]eral months and action might be [ex]pected in the near future.

A rich harvest reaped by the black- [mai]lers is attributed to recent prosper- [o]us times which has brought thousands [o]f well-to-do business men to New [Y]ork. The typical blackmailing gang [i]s described as including two men and [t]wo women. The women make the ac- [q]uaintance of prosperous victims and [t]he men pose as detective and lawyer. After a conference with the military and civil authorities in the customs house General Obregon met the news- papermen but he added but little to the information already given out on his journey north. The minister of war said he did not care to talk about [the] conference. Asked what he would [do] in case the American troops were kept in Mexico General Obregon re- plied through an interpreter:

General Obregon in reply to a ques- tion said that he thought the defacto government had sufficient troops to take care of Villa and his bands with- out aid from the United States.

"General Obregon, do you think Villa is dead?"

"I do not believe Villa is dead," was the quick reply, "but I am positive that he is wounded, and suffers for lack of medical attention and therefore, his small chance to be personally active again in any campaigns."

COMPULSION BILL IS PUT ON SHELF

Withdrawal of Measure In Parliament Believed to Have Precipitated New British Cabinet Crisis.

London, April 29.—The morning newspapers all speak of the situation, which has arisen in parliament through the unfavorable reception of the with- drawal of the government's military service bill as a new political crisis. The Daily News lobby correspondent says:

"The incident shows it is useless for sections of the ministers to agree on a compromise if they have not secured the consent of their respective sup- porters. The cabinet was deluded by the secret sessions and assumed that because the plan was not upset then it would afterwards receive the assent of the public. The secret sessions are now condemned even by their authors as absurd and not to be repeated. The alleged compromise obviously satisfies nobody and the cabinet had to with- draw the bill, or invite immediate de- feat which would have meant its de- parture from office."

The Daily News notes that the na- tionalist party has decided to withdraw the support hitherto given the coalition cabinet and will hold itself hereafter free to act independently as its own policy dictates.

London, April 28.—A bill providing for extension of military service was introduced in the house of commons yesterday, but [illegible] opposition that it was withdrawn.

Walter Hume Long, president of the [local government] board placed the bill be- fore the house saying it was the in- tention of the government to enlist ev- ery unmarried man between the ages of 18 and 41. It is understood the bill embodying aspects of proposals out- lined in the report of the secret session at which recruiting was taken up, had been approved by the ministry and the army council.

The measure met with severe crit- icism from all sections of the house. Premier Asquith announced that in view of this feeling the government would not press it.

Compulsory military service for sin- gle men was provided for in a bill passed in January. The application of the measure has been limited, however, by the existence of many classes of ex- emptions.

SEA STRIKE AVERTED BY INCREASED WAGES

San Francisco, Cal., April 28.—The threatened strike of the members of the sailors, firemen's and cooks and wait- ers' union, employed on vessels in the Pacific coastwise service, has been averted by the steamship company of- ficials, who granted the employes' wage increase demands and compromising the questions concerning the working conditions, it became known here to- day. Wednesday the employers voted to increase the men's wages and last night the settlement of the other issues was reached.

HUGHES SUPPORTERS HAVE COIN APLENTY

Fund Being Used In Oregon Campaign—Burton Also Has Plenty of Money.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—Hughes leaders not only have entered his name in Oregon, but are spending a lot of money, according to information which has come to the Cummins headquar- ters. The Oregon fight will be be- tween Cummins, Hughes and Burton. The Ohio man's backers are active. Cummins' Oregon campaign will be handicapped by lack of funds against organizations for Hughes and Burton which seem willing and able to spend.

Senator Cummins has consented to go to Oregon personally and make sev- eral speeches. Former Representative Prouty, of Des Moines, will go also. Ef- forts are being made to get Senator Borah to speak. Senator Kenyon may also go if the river and harbor bill does not interfere. The Oregon primaries, will be May 19.

Nature of Proposals Not Disclosed—Gerard Visit Is Good Omen—Berlin Stock Exchange Normal.

[illegible] German embassy to- [illegible] German will attempt to [illegible] demands for the [illegible] abandonment of its present [prac]tice in submarine warfare. The [na]ture of the proposal was not dis- closed.

[illegible] whether the suggestions [illegible] to his government at the [illegible] of the foreign office have [bee]n adopted.

A visit of Ambassador Gerard to Emperor William was a topic of broad interest in official and diplomatic quar- ters.

Berlin, April 27 (via London April 29).—James W. Gerard, the American ambassador and Joseph C. Grew, sec- retary of the American embassy, left Berlin tonight for German army head- quarters for an audience with Em- peror William.

Although no information has been given out regarding the purpose of Am- bassador Gerard's journey, it is evi- dent that Emperor William wishes a thorough personal talk with him in or- der to obtain a better view of the American view on the submarine is- sue. The train will reach its destina- tion at 7 p. m. tomorrow (Friday) and Ambassador Gerard expects to return on Sunday.

The invitation to visit the German headquarters was brought to the am- bassador personally by Foreign Minis- ter Von Jagow.

The invitation is regarded in finan- cial circles as a good omen. Neverthe- less, experienced observers consider the situation very serious and believe that the mere fact of the ambassador's meeting with the emperor and his ad- visers is of less importance than what was done at the conference at German headquarters.

The ultimate decision at Washing- ton is held to be quite incalculable un- til it is known how far Germany meets American wishes.

The news that Ambassador Gerard was going to the headquarters was known at noon today, but the censors, for some mysterious reason, refused to allow cablegrams to be sent an- nouncing that fact until tonight, just as they had refused to pass dispatches with news that the American note had been handed to the foreign office, until the next day.

Bourse Is Normal.

The Berlin stock exchange, the prin- cipal [illegible] index to popular expec- tation on the German-American situ- ation continues to improve in tone. The market was characterized in today's reports as virtually normal again.

[illegible]

The German newspapers generally seem to have exhausted the topic of American relations pending new de- velopments.

The Tages Zieuting is the only Ber- lin Journal to return to the attack, it containing a vigorous polemic against granting concessions to the United States.

Vice Admiral Von Cappell the naval officer who succeeded Admiral Von Tirpitz last month as minister of the navy, left Berlin on Wednesday to con- fer with Emperor William at the Ger- man army headquarters.

SWISS ARE ANGERED OVER GERMAN RAIDS

Press Roused By Thirteenth Violation of Neutrality By Kaiser's Birdmen.

Berne, April 28, (delayed).—The f[light] of a German aeroplane over Swiss ter- ritory near the region of the Porentruy yesterday morning, occurring so soon after a previous similar flight over the same territory, has provoked the strongest indignation in Switzerland. This is reflected in all sections of the press.

The semiofficial Bund says the time has come to demand from Germany something more than expressions of re- gret or excuses. The moderate Jour- nal De Geneve points out that this is the 13th incident of the kind and that the German minister gave the most solemn assurances last August that there would be no further violation and added that German aviators were or- dered to keep three miles from the Swiss frontier, yet the raids have been even more frequent since then than be- fore.

The newspaper describes the flight over Switzerland as an insulting dis- regard of federal authority.

The previous flight over Porentruy, alluded to, took place on March 31 when two aeroplanes dropped five bombs on that town, causing some damage to property. Later it was stated that the German government apologized for the attack.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much, also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to keep her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Four Inch Tires

HERE is another Overland Model. A brand new car at a brand new price Many people prefer a car with the advantages of the larger and higher priced cars but that is smaller, lighter and more economical to run.

Model 75 is a comfortable, family car with virtually all the advantages of the very large cars at a price which is well within your reach.

The body is the latest full streamline design with a one-piece cowl.

It is handsomely finished in solid black with bright nickel and polished aluminum fittings.

Five adults can ride comfortably.

The tires are four inch all around because we believe in the advantage of large tires. They insure greater mileage and comfort than can be obtained from the smaller size used on other cars of similar specifications.

The motor is four-cylinder, long stroke bloc type, having a 3⅛-inch bore and 5-inch stroke. Horsepower is 20-25 It is of the most modern design.

It has high-tension magneto ignition. This is the kind used on the most expensive cars.

The electric starting and lighting system is one of the most efficient on the market. It is of the two-unit type.

The electric switches are conveniently located on the steering column This is the same arrangement used on the highest priced cars.

It has the easy working Overland clutch which any woman can operate The pedals are adjustable for reach. The steering wheel is large and turns easily The brakes are large and powerful

The rear springs are the famous cantilever type The cars probably the easiest riding and most shock absorbing springs ever designed. With these springs riding comfort is insured.

It has a one-man mohair top.

In short, there is everything that makes this car up-to-date and comparable with many cars costing considerably more money.

You will be delighted when you see it And when you ride in it you'll know instantly that this is your ideal of a modern automobile at your idea of a moderate price.

DRINK HOT WATER DIETING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you are troubled with a bad taste, bad breath, coated tongue, if you have indigestion, if what you eat sours and ferments and forms gas and acid in stomach, if you have constipation, if you can't get feeling just right, begin to-morrow morning to practice the following: Before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and thus purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing regularly and you will be surprised that so many troubles will vanish. Many times a sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath are caused entirely from stomach disorders.

The action of hot water and Bisurated Magnesia on the stomach, liver and bowels is simply wonderful. Hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach liver and bowels. Men and women who are chronically constipated, bilious, have headache, backache, stomach disorders or sluggish bowels should begin their bathing by drinking a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia before breakfast. They are assured it will become a real habit with many, as it is very pleasant to take, and cheap. Ask your druggist for a quarter pound of Bisurated Magnesia (powder or crystals) and use as directed.

DISEASE LURKS IN SACKS USED FOR IMPORTATION OF POTATOES TO U. S.

By Ralph A Collins in the Washington Times

Special warning against the use of second hand potato sacks and a full explanation of the conditions under which foreign potatoes can be admitted to the United States under the quarantine action taken by the federal horticultural board are given in an official statement from the department of agriculture.

The potato situation with conflicting statement of famine and plenty have to a great extent left the public mind in chaos Importers many potato men and foreign growers proclaimed an impending famine. This was denied by the department Then the horticultural board despite all protests extended the potato quarantine to Canada and other countries not previously involved

At the same time regulations were prescribed for the admission of potatoes from disease free districts and countries. It is made plain today that districts that are disease free must quarantine against the diseased area

American Crop Would Receive Injury

Potato wart and other diseases are highly contagious and without proper protection it is declared by the government experts the American potato crop will receive permanent injury Those opposing quarantine still maintain that losses will ensue but experts say it is better to have future crops than to utterly destroy American independence in this crop by letting in destructive disease that would bring practically a permanent blight

The warning issued today is to American growers, and aimed at sacks from Great Britain or continental Europe Unless these sacks are sterilized it is declared, they will carry potato contagion

"The reason for this" the warning says "is that recent inspections have furnished ample evidence of the presence of a number of the most serious potato diseases among importations of that staple from Europe These include the late blight disease, silver scurf both dry and soft rots common scab, and the powdery scab.

"The germs of these diseases the specialists find may be and undoubtedly are, carried in the sacks in which potatoes have been imported from Europe. The sacks, therefore, provide a source of infection to American grown potatoes packed in them

Big Trade in Second-Hand Sacks.

"It appears there is a considerable trade in such second-hand foreign potato sacks between dealers located chiefly at the Atlantic ports of entry to the United States and especially in New York, and potato growers of the eastern states.

"In some instances, entire shipments from the great potato districts of Maine to New York city have been made in foreign, second-hand sacks

'Even though none of the imported potatoes themselves were used for seed purposes, which is not the case these diseases would none the less surely but more insidiously, be introduced and spread through this traffic in second-hand potato sacks as now conducted

"Farmers should require dealers to guarantee that the sacks have been sterilized Purchasers of seed potatoes should specify that the seed came in new sacks or sterilized second-hand sacks. Dealers can sterilize these sacks before offering them for sale by placing the empty sacks in tight containers in which live steam should be injected for about an hour Purchasers of secondhand sacks can protect themselves by following the same procedure or by boiling them for two or three hours in any available vessel Unless these precautions are taken the use of new sacks exclusively is recommended

Importers Must Get Permits.

The quarantine order against potatoes extended to them the nursery stock regulations of the plant quarantine act and provided that no potatoes could be imported until the importers had secured permits from the federal horticultural board, similar to those now issued to importers of nursery stock The regulations provide that

"Potatoes to be admitted must be certified by the government of the country of origin to be free from dangerous diseases and insect pests covered by the quarantine, and must have been grown in a district free from the wart disease and the powdery scab. The new regulations define the exact conditions under which such disease-free potatoes will be admitted

The regulations, in general, besides prescribing the exact forms of notifying the government of shipments, provide for the admission under the inspection system, of potatoes from all countries not under quarantine. Such countries must, however, maintain effective quarantines of their own against infected countries, that is, countries remaining under quarantine by the United States

The regulations also provide for the lifting of the quarantine as to any countries covered by the quarantine upon the presentation of satisfactory evidence to the secretary of agriculture that such country, or well-defined district thereof, is free from injurious potato diseases and insect pests, and, after the quarantine has been thus lifted, potatoes will be admitted from such country or district in accordance with the regulations governing entry of potatoes from countries not now under quarantine. The countries now thus quarantined are Newfoundland, the islands of St Pierre and Miquelon, Great Britain including England, Scotland and Wales Ireland, Continental Europe and the Dominion of Canada It is expected that from some of these at least it will be possible in the near future to lift the quarantine and permit the entry of potatoes therefrom under the conditions prescribed in the regulations.

WHO IS PRESIDENT OF SWITZERLAND?

Albert Bigelow Paine in Harper's Magazine.

Switzerland is a republic that runs with the exactness of a Swiss watch, its machinery as hermetically concealed I had heard that the Swiss republic set the pattern of government for the world, and I was anxious to know something of its methods and personnel I was sorry that I was so ignorant I didn't even know the name of the Swiss president, and for a week was ashamed to confess it I was hoping I might see it in one of the French papers I puzzled over every evening But at the end of the week I timidly and apologetically inquired of our friendly landlord as to the name of the Swiss president

But then came a shock Our landlord grew confused, blushed, and confessed that he didn't know it either' He had known it he said of course, but it had slipped his mind Slipped his mind' Think of the name of Roosevelt or Wilson or Taft slipping the mind of anybody in America and a landlord' I asked the men who sold me cigars. He had forgotten too I asked the apothecary but got no information I was not so timid after that I asked a fellow passenger—guest, I mean—an American, but of long Swiss residence and got this story I believe most of it he said

When I came to Switzerland and found out what a wonderful little country it was its government so economical so free from party corruption and spoils, from graft and politics, so different from the home life of our own dear Columbia, I thought 'The man at the head of this thing must be a master hand, I'll find out his name' So I picked out a bright looking subject, and asked, What is the name of the Swiss president"

He tried to pretend he didn't understand my French, but he did, for I can tear the language off all right—learned it studying art in Paris. When I pinned him down he said he knew the name well enough, parfaitement, but couldn't think of it at that moment.

"That was a surprise, but I asked the next man He couldn't think of it either Then I asked a police officer. Of course he knew it all right 'Oh, our, certainment, mais', then he scratched his head and scowled, but he couldn't dig up that name He was just a plain liar—tout simplement—I the others I asked every man I met, but somehow it seemed to stick there. Not a man in Vevey or Montreux could tell me the name of the Swiss president. It was the same in Fribourg, the same even in Berne, the capital I had about given it up when one evening there in Berne I noticed a sturdy man with an honest face approaching He looked intelligent, too, and as a last resort I asked, 'Told you, by any chance, tell me the name of the Swiss president?"

"The effect was startling. He seized me by the arm and, after looking up and down the street, leaned forward and whispered in my ear

"Mon Dieu' c'est moi I am the Swiss president, but—oh non, don't tell any one I am the only man in Switzerland who knows it"

'You see," my friend continued, "he is elected privately, no torchlight campaigns, no scandal, and only for a year.

He is only a sort of chairman, though, of course, his work is important, and the present able incumbent has been elected a number of times. His name is—is—is— Ah, yes, that's my tram. So sorry to have to hurry away—see you tonight at dinner."

GENERAL HENRI PETAIN ADVANCED DURING WAR

Paris — Gen Henri Petain, the defender of Verdun, is typical of the modern French soldier. He is just 60 He received his commission as second lieutenant in 1878, and became a captain in 1890, and a colonel in 1900. He was a colonel when the war began and was going to retire

General Petain first distinguished himself during the retreat from Charleroi in the early days of the war. He became bridadier general and general of division, and rose rapidly to his present position

He is a curiously modest man and hates being photographed He is immensely popular with his men whom he treats as though they were his own children General Petain is very methodical and weighs his food every day, saying that it is as necessary for officers to be in perfect condition as for racehorses. Keeping in condition is his pet mania. He was turned out of a flat which he occupied once because he insisted on taking half an hour's exercise with a skipping rope after his bath each morning.

The result is that General Petain at 60 is as active as the youngest lieutenant in the French army Quite recently in Champagne he covered four miles at the double at the head of a company, and he prides himself on the ease with which he undergoes the same hardships and the same hard work as any man with him

The general does not believe much in red tape, always wanting to get the most work done in the quickest way To an officer who asked him to give him a post on the staff General Petain said, laughingly I don't need staff officers The men I want are fellows who can win three-mile races afoot and ride motorcycles over rough ground" There is a legend in the Verdun army that General Petain lived and slept on the carriage of a machine gun during the first 10 days of the German offensive late last February

Dislike.

Engelbert Pernerstorfer is the vice president of the Austrian house of delegates He has written an article published in the Berliner Tageblatt and the New York Times It should have wide and thoughtful reading both in Germany and America. This it doubtless will have, since it appears in two journals commanding both large circulations and intellectual constituencies

In examining the political psychology of the German people Herr Pernerstorfer quotes Hugo Preuss's "The German People and Politics," noting a fundamental divergence between German psychology and the psychology of others. Here he finds an explanation of the revulsion of others against Germany A critical examination discloses "certain grave German defects.' The'r casting off is essential to the restoration of a lasting European peace The realization of this "is of supreme importance alike to the future of the German empire and the future of European civilization"

Germany is supposed to be hated because of Prussian militarism, says Herr Pernerstorfer, and yet, of the three great military states, Russia, France, and Germany, Germany occupies the third place as far as the cost of armament is concerned (Just as if the cost of armament made militarism')

However this may be, he concludes that Prussian militarism is a pretext, and that the key to an understanding of the contrast between Germany and western Europe is in the difference in internal politics And here he finds the lesson to be learned by the central empires from the war

The chief difference in the internal politics of the central powers, on the one hand, and western Europe, on the other, is found in the subjection of the German peoples to what they call the "Obrigkeit"—that is to say, the superior authorities—as contrasted with a genuine constitutionalism and parliamentary form of government in England and France, forms which, as this writer says, "alone insure the participation of all sections of the people" He proceeds:

To be sure, it may be asked, 'What do you want of England and what of France" In the one the nobility rules, in the other, finance. Is not the rule of "enlightened absolutism' to be preferred?"

Yes and no The rule of an enlightened, honest, and statesmanlike monarch is certainly of greater advantage than the rule of a nobility greedy for power or of a financial clique greedy for money. But even if the enlightened absolutism possessed the very greatest advantages, we have, as matter of fact, now outgrown it. We will tolerate it no longer, not even in its half-constitutional, weakened form. Civilized peoples desire a free path for all their members. * * *

"Even an opponent of Prussian Junkerdom can admit its services, * * * but it is a depressing feeling that it has the privilege of ruling the German people. Even to an opponent of the social democracy * * * it must be humiliating to think how it was treated by the German government

"The majority of the German people consists by no means of conservative elements. Nevertheless, it has endured being ruled conservatively * * * So are we in Austria. But among us the omnipotence of the 'Obrigkeit' is restricted by reason of numerous strong national movements frequently directed against one another."

The conclusion of the whole matter is that men of progress in other countries see in Germany the embodiment of a principle which is inimical to the spirit of progress. They remember the incentive to their own progress that came from France, they remember—to use Herr Pernerstorfer's words—the "ancient fame of England as the home of parliamentary self-government and personal freedom." They also recall the fact (to use his phraseology again) that "until the very recent past Russian czarism had no stronger friend than the German "Obrigkeit"

That, concludes this Austrian writer, and not because of Prussian militarism, is why Germany is disliked. She must carry out internal political reforms if she would conquer this aversion Farmer Books vs. American Book Co. Books.

From Collier's.

"The schools don't educate country boys to till the soil They don't even teach them to look on farming as a dignified business" A farmer is quoted as saying this in Ewing Galloway's article, "Stay on the Land," printed on page 22 of this issue. It is a damaging statement, but we believe the farmer who made it knew only too well what he was talking about. One of Mr Galloway's points is that the text books used in most country schools are not the right kind of text books. The problems in the country school arithmetics are problems about imports and the stock market instead of hogs and cattle and corn, the question is not the one of the number of bushels of wheat a farmer can tease out of a given number of acres, but some matter that concerns city people and clerks who draw a salary and wear made to order clothes and live indoor lives. There is a great deal of dead wood in the school books used by country schools and a correspondingly large opportunity for the text book author who, knowing country life as well as his specialty, will write country life text books. Such text books will teach the three R's all the better because they deal with familiar terms and they will tend to make more first rate farmers out of farmers' sons.

An Impression of Real Toil.

From the Washington Star

"Why don't you quit work and go fishing?"

"I tried that once," replied Mr Resagin 'If getting up at 5 o clock in the morning and traveling out to a fishing place and falling into a boat and maybe out of it, and sitting in suspense by the hour in order to find two-ounce fish are what you call rest and recreation, give me the work"

A LAND PROBLEM AHEAD

(FROM THE PEORIA JOURNAL.)

The Newspaper Syndicate Journal calls attention to the fact that Uncle Sam's opening of a 1,000 acre tract in the North Platte irrigation district for settlement practically winds up the "free land distribution of the nation It adds

"Free or cheap land has been the American safety valve A population training for self government has had its own remedy to go west and grow up with the country With the government reduced to advertising an opening of forty three farms, the safety valve may be considered forever closed The expansive energy formerly exerted outward must hereafter work itself out inwardly Increasing land speculation, with rapidly rising prices of land and proportionately increasing dissatisfaction among the landless would seem inevitable The tone of our politics and the intensity of our social problems cannot but be vitally changed under the stress of dealing internally with a social pressure which hitherto has had the wilderness to vent itself upon

"'Land hunger' will soon become a reality in this rapidly growing country and the constant pressure of population, increasingly higher than the ratio of production, is bound to bring us face to face with economic problems that we have heretofore considered remote. The far-sighted statesman and publicist must devote his thought earnestly to the consideration of these questions if we are to escape the extremes which curse the older nations of the world'

In the above will be found one of the reasons that the Canadian Government is offering 160 acres of land free to the actual settler. There is no dearth of homesteads of this size, and the land is of the highest quality, being such as produces yields of from 30 to 60 bushels of wheat per acre, while oats run from fifty to over hundred bushels per acre It is not only a matter of free grants, but in Western Canada are also to be had other lands at prices ranging from $12 to $30 per acre, the difference in price being largely a matter of location and distance from railway If one takes into consideration the scarcity of free grant lands in the United States it is not difficult to understand why there has been most material advances in the price of farm lands.

A few years ago, land that now sells for two hundred dollars an acre in Iowa, could have been bought for seventy-five dollars an acre or less. The increased price is warranted by the increased value of the product raised on these farms The lands that today can be had in Western Canada at the low prices quoted will in a less time than that taken for the Iowa lands to increase, have a proportionate increase In Nebraska the lands that sold for sixteen to twenty dollars per acre seven years ago, find a market at one hundred and seventy-five dollars an acre, for the same reason given for the increase in Iowa lands. Values in these two States, as well as in others that might be mentioned, show that Western Canada lands are going at a song at their present prices. In many cases in Western Canada today, there are American settlers who realize this, and are placing a value of sixty and seventy dollars an acre on their improved farms, but would sell only because they can purchase unimproved land at such a low price that in another few years they would have equally as good farms as they left or such as their friends have in the United States

The worth of the crops grown in Western Canada is of such magnitude that those who have settled there are very glad the land not be sold as land Any Canadian Government Agent will be glad to send you information as to where you can buy Advertisement Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio.—"I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."—Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

"Ideal" Lawnmower Grinders

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT that owing to a Lawnmowers peculian shape it is next to impossible to sharpen the blades with a file; and many a first-class mower has been ruined in the attempt. Resort has been made to emery sticks and emery dust and while this method is a cheap one it is not desirable as the clearance of the cutting blade is reduced, making more surface in contact with the lower bar. As the edges become dull the mower has to be adjusted very close so that it TEARS the grass INSTEAD OF SHEARING IT, at the same time making it run harder than ever. With my machine your old mower will be made to cut as well as a new one.

I solicit a share of your work.

Commercial League To Wake Up The Old Town Again

Klemme will be right up and coming this summer if the Commercial League knows anything about it. At the meeting last Friday evening new officers were elected as follows. C W Wiles, President, Dr. W F. Missman, Vice President, M. M. Magner, Secretary and F. A. Arnold, Treasurer. The treasurer was notified to collect all dues at once and he has already commenced the task and has informed the writer that the members are shelling out very gracefully. The League also promised to support the band and hire a cornetist during the concert work this season and funds to take care of that matter are being solicited. The matter of opening up a couple of roads that would bring more trade to the town was also discussed and the matter is being looked into.

At a special meeting held Tuesday evening, the question of observing Memorial Day was sanctioned and a committee composed of A. D. Gimer, Joe Harlan and Wm. Trafford were named to look after the details of arranging the program, ect., which will be announced later, Another movi has been started that will mean a ball game every Thursday evening commencing at 6:30 which will give the boys ample time to finish the game before the concert commences.

With a ball game and band concert every Thursday evening during the playing season should make Klemme a lively place and we are sure to entertain some large crowds this season if everyone will put their shoulders to the wheel and push. Of course there are some knockers but the boosters are in the majority.

HELP YOUR BOY IN CONTEST

That a little co-operation in helping his son to enter the acre corn contest may serve as a stimilus to greater things than the mere winning of a prize is demonstrated by the case of Roy Simons, Sioux County, now a student at Iowa State college.

Roy won a township prize of a free trip to the Ames winter short course in 1915 in the acre corn contest. Roy's father was in hearty spmpathy with his son's entering the contest. He rented him an acre of his best land for $5.00. Roy did all the work. He raised 67 bu. of corn on the acre at a cost of 20¢ a bu. The total cost to raise the crop was $13 40; gross returns, $48 32; net returns, $34.60.

During the contest Roy became interested in agriculture. His trip to the short course increased that interest. In 1915 he therefore came as a student to Iowa State College He is now making enviable record in all his class room work.

Father's co-operation inhelping him enter the acre corn contest did it.

Special Election Next Monday

Remember that next Monday is the time that the voters of our little city will decide whether they wish better electric light service or not. Some of our citizens have been worrying for fear that the company would not try to get in here with the high tension for eighteen months at least but according to one of the representatives of the company they will be in here before snow flies They have also just purchased the electric light plant at Garner and that makes it all the more incentive for them to get in here as soon as possible. Another reason they will be in here so ner than they first expected is that they have already made arrangements for the purchase of the material for the extension of the line.

The chief complaint however is the high minimum rate for power service but as this is the same rate they are giving everywhere and the present plant would not be able to grant power service, where are you going to better your condition? Remember to go to the polls Monday and if you wish to be progsessive, vote "yes".

Charles City Man Beats "Jawn D."

The automobile owner can stop worrying about the high cost of gasoline, if the claims of C. W. Elstun, 707 Victor Bldg., distributor for the Western Auto Appliance company of Charles City, Ia., are true, says the Kansas City Post.

Mr. Elstun stopped his Ford in front of the Post yesterday afternoon and a curious crowd gathered, He removed the front seat cushions and disclosed two tanks.

The small one, which held a gallon contained gasoline, The other contained ten gallons of kerosene. He then opened the hood of the engine and showed the carburetor and manifold which had been attached in place of the old manifold,

"Now watch," he said as he jumped into the car and pressed a small lever. The engine started and burning gasoline could be smelled. After about twenty seconds he pulled the first lever back and pressed another one. The engine continued, purring, but the smell changed to kerosene.

Then he drove for an hour. He took the Ninth street hill on high, all the time burning kerosene. He says he uses the gasoline only to start with.

The carburetor was manufactered about three years ago. Mr. Elstun says, but gasoline was so cheap no one would interest themselves in it. When gasoline began to soar a company was organized.

Mr. Elstun claims that he derives more mileage, power and less carbon from one gallon of the heaviest grade kerosene than can be gotten out of a gallon of the best grade gasoline. He says the carburetor has been tested in all kinds of weather and altitudes.

Many attempts have been made to substitute kerosene for gasoline, but never before has anyone been able to heat the oil so as to combust it into the proper gas. Many of the carburetors have already been put in large firms in Kansas City, and are turning out on their cars within a few days.

The Light house Service Bulletin publishes a compilation of the number of hours of fog or thick weather observed a year at 508 fog signal stations during the period of 1887 to 1915. As such stations are maintained in all coastal regions of the country, including the Great Lakes which are subject to fog their records are a valuable indication of the extent of this danger to navigation. The highest annual averages is 2,601 hours a year at Petit Manan Me. while the highest record for an individual year and place is 2,734 hours in 1907 at Seguin Me. or about 30 per cent of the entire year. Calumet Harbor near Chicago had 2,269 hours of fog in 1913. This and other lake stations are affected somewhat by smoke. On the Pacific coast the highest annual average is 1,337 hours, at Point Reyes but in the year 1915 there were 2,145 hours of fog at San Francisco light.

THREE GIRLS DROWN DURING PICNIC PARTY OF HAWARDEN PUPILS

Boat Goes Over Dam With Teacher and Five Students —Taree of Party Rescued.

Hawarden Ia. May 13. Edna Boreman Neva Johnson and Marjorie Fairbrother local high school girls were drowned in the Big Sioux river near here Thursday when a small boat in which were were riding was swept over a dam. Miss Boreman and Miss Johnson were members of this year's graduating class. Miss Fairbrother was a member of the class of 17.

The tragedy occurred at a picnic party arranged by a number of high school pupils and teachers. Members of the party embarked in boats to cross the river to the picnic grounds. This crossing was made a short distance above the dam.

In the last boat to embark were the three girls who lost their lives. Miss Elizabeth McCartney instructor in music and Benita Sidewell and Alma McLaughlin pupils. Through unskillful handling of the boat it drifted down into the dam below which was a fairly heavy fall over which the water dropped with a rush and roar.

Just as the boat was going over the dam Misses Sidewell and McLaughlin jumped from the boat and held to the dam where they were rescued. Miss McCartney formerly a resident of Morningside clung to the capsized boat and was brought safely to shore. The three other occupants of the boat were swept into the deep water below the dam.

Their bodies were recovered within 20 minutes and physicians summoned to the scene made heroic efforts at resuscitation but without success.

WOMAN ASKS $25,000 IN ACTION FOR HEART BALM

Des Moines, Ia., May 13.—Heart balm to the amount of $25,000 is asked by Carrie Shuber, a widow, in a suit for breach of promise, filed in district court against John Bruenig, a wealthy retired farmer, formerly of Rhodes, Ia., but now of Des Moines.

The action of Mrs. Shuber follows Bruenig's marriage to Miss Viola Golden which took place a week ago last Saturday.

Mrs. Shuber, according to her friends will base her claim that Bruenig intended to marry her on numerous letters he wrote to her during a courtship that covered a period of two years. Some of these letters are couched in the most endearing terms, calling Mrs. Shuber "sweetheart" and "honey." In many of the epistles Bruenig also is declared to have referred to plans for the future Mrs. Bruenig.

YOUTHFUL EMBEZZLER IS ADMITTED TO PAROLE

Dubuque Ia. May 13. Fred Somers the seventeen-year-old Dubuque boy who confessed embezzling approximately $6,000 from the Illinois Central railroad while cashier of that concerns freight house in this city and who was later found guilty of embezzlement and sentenced to a term not to exceed five years in the penitentiary, yesterday received notice from the state parole board that he had been put on parole.

Somers was released from custody by Sheriff Dunn. The parole comes as the result of a petition signed by several hundred Dubuque merchants asking that the lad be given his liberty on parole. Somers was captured a few months ago by local detectives when he returned to his home in this city to see his mother. The spectacular return attempt to escape and ultimate capture received much news comment.

GIRL BURNS TO DEATH IN TRYING TO START FIRE

Moorhead Ia. May 13.—Rosie Mudra, aged 13, was burned to death at the home of her uncle near here Thursday night. The child was alone in the house and started to build a fire. Though she denied it, her uncle believes she used kerosene to start the fire, and the fact that the empty can was found on its side in a corner of the room strengthens his idea. When her dress took fire the girl ran into the yard, where a farm hand put out the flames, but not until she had been fatally burned. After a night of suffering, she died early Friday morning.

Miss Mudra's father is farming in Canada at the present time and her mother is in Cherokee. Her uncle, Thomas Machovec, was taking care of her.

The steering column on the machine broke, and the four people in the mayor's car found themselves floundering in the water.

The mayor and a man in the front seat were forced to dive into the water, while those in the rear seat were able to crawl out to dry land. The members of the council who were in cars following the mayor's, lent aid and the danger of a serious catastrophe was avoided.

IOWA CITY—Iowa State Homeopathic association yesterday afternoon adopted the report of the legislative committee condemning the state board of education for sending crippled children under the Perkins law exclusively to an allopathic hospital. RIGHT TO MINE SHOT CAUSES COURT FIGHT

Sifting Sands on Grounds of Gun Club Develops Into Profitable Line.

Council Bluffs, Ia. May 13.—Since the war has so greatly increased the price of all munitions, "placer mining" for the lead that has been fired for many years upon the old grounds of the Omaha Gun club along the sandy beach of the Iowa shore of the Missouri river has become so profitable that a case involving "mining" rights has just been decided in the Council Bluffs courts.

Literally millions of bird shot have been fired at the gun club grounds, that were used for so many years, and two men not long ago entered into an oral partnership to "work" the sands for the old shot. Sieves were used, and it is said that the two men were able to glean 125 pounds a day while they were working—and the lead shot is understood to have brought them some $9 a hunderweight.

But prosperity proved their undoing and they fell out. they couldn't get along together and so James C. Brock, who is caretaker of the grounds, and who raised a little garden and some potatoes on some of the club's land notified W. H. Bell his partner in the "mining" operations that the deal was off. But Bell couldn't see it that way, and went to Judge Capell of the superior court for an injunction to prevent Brock from "firing" him, and thus separating him from his profits in the old lead.

Judge Capell had to cogitate quite a while, for it isn't very often that matters of mining law are presented in his court, but he finally ruled that Bell should continue to work in the garden and the potato patch, and that Brock should continue to sift the sands for old shot, each one keeping track of his operations, for a final settlement of the partnership at the end of the season.

ALLEN'S REPLY FAILS TO MEET COSSON'S CHALLENGE

Des Moines, Ia. May 13.—Senator Joseph H. Allen, republican candidate for governor, fell down in the attempt to meet Attorney General Cosson's challenge for proof that Cosson made a "deal" two years ago to support Governor Clarke as a condition that Clarke, in turn would support Cosson in 1916. All that Senator Allen could produce along this line was the claim that persons had told him—names not stated—that they were tied to Cosson. Mr. Cosson does not deny that he had planned for some time to be a candidate for governor in 1916 and that he secured such advance pledges and assurances as he could obtain for his candidacy—but not having any reference to Governor Clarke's candidacy in 1914.

"The same gentlemen's agreement, made in confidence that binds these men to support Mr. Cosson prevents me from disclosing their identity, said Allen. "This information was given me in confidence but it is information the people have a right to know and which I have no right to withhold, whatever my personal views in the case might be."

Allen also stated the editorial writer of the Marshalltown Times-Republican had told him he had promised Cosson his support two years ago.

The senator fired several broadsides at the attorney general accusing him of attempting to block the passage of the mulct law repeal bill of claiming credit for certain laws of which H. W. Byers claimed the authorship, and of attempting to place himself in the eyes of the republican voters as the only available candidate to defend and maintain the legislation of the last assembly, in which Cosson took no part.

IOWA INVENTOR MAKES GASOLINE FROM KEROSENE

Clinton Ia. May 13.—A gasoline substitute, invented by Max Fairchild of this city, is meeting with favor in the eyes of various oil producing companies, according to an announcement here today. Fairchild said he had received an offer of $200,000 from one firm and $250,000 from another for his invention.

The substitute is prepared according to its inventor, through the addition of simple ingredients to ordinary kerosene. The ingredients, it is said, are domestic and easily obtainable making it possible to manufacture the substitute at a cost of about 1 cent per gallon in addition to the cost of the kerosene.

Highly explosive in a gasoline engine cylinder, where it is said to demonstrate a higher power than ordinary gasoline, the substitute according to the claims of the inventor, is "fool proof" and can be used with safety in gasoline stoves, blow torches etc. Another claim is that the substitute is devoid of carbon deposits and emits no poisonous fumes.

NEW NATIONAL BANK IS ORGANIZED AT WHITING

The application has been approved by the comptroller of the currency. The organizers have bought the lot on which the Commercial house now stands, and a fine new brick building will be erected just as soon as the old hotel building can be removed. The bank will open for business in temporary quarters in about 10 days. The organizers are Lyman Whittier, J. W. Beggs, O. G. Litchenberg E. A. Smith and Will Boyd, who will be the directors. NAME NOT DIVULGED BY WOUNDED ROBBER

Young Man Caught In Burglary Attempt Claims to Come From Good Family.

Goldfield, Ia. May 12.—A man, who refuses to give his name, was seriously if not fatally shot here while attempting to rob the C. B. James mercantile store of this place. About three weeks ago Mr. James noticed the loss of considerable number of shoes from the shoe department. A week later more shoes were missing and two days later more merchandise was taken. The led the local authorities to believe the work was that of local talent, and they decided to set a watch on the building.

One man, who was posted immediately across the street from the store, called to him to stop, and when he refused, opened fire with a shotgun the first shot striking him in the calves of the legs and inflicting severe wounds. He continued to run however, and three more shots were fired at him, several of the shot striking about the head and shoulders and even penetrating the flesh of the arm and hand. He was taken to Clarion where he is lodged in jail and where his case will be disposed of at the present term of the district court.

He is a young man about 28 years old, and claims to come from a good home, and his one desire now seems to be to keep the news of his doings away from the home folks. That he is an old hand at the business appears from the fact that he carried a complete kit of tools and that he is wise to the trades crooks and turns.

ASK BRITAIN TO LIFT HOSPITAL SUPPLY BA

U. S. to Act For Red Cross— Supplies For Germany Are Held Up

Washington, May 13.—T[illegible] government is preparing [illegible] Great Britain against its [illegible] fusing to allow the shipm[illegible] of hospital supplies by the American Red Cross to Germany and her allies. Secretary Lansing received a [illegible] from former President T[illegible] of the central committee of the Red Cross, urging such action. It learned that the matter would be taken up with the British government in the near future.

Mr. Taft's letter reveals [illegible] time that Great Britain [illegible] declined to give permissions of supplies to the American hospitals, except when intended for hospital units. This exception, he wrote, was worthless. Because of funds, the Red Cross has not maintained no units in the belligerent countries since last October.

The Red Cross considers [illegible] of the British government [illegible] of the Geneva convention. The United States and all the belligerents are signatories to it, that the American government has the right to insist on observance of the treaty. Mr. Taft expresses the belief that the British position was based on an erroneous belief that the powers had failed to [illegible] reciprocal course in the trade articles for the sick and wounded.

GREAT ORE FIELD GOAL OF GERMANS

Teutons Continue Battle Largely to Prevent French Recapturing Iron Mines of Briey Valley.

VITAL TO THEIR SUCCESS

"Have Shot Their Bolt," Comment In Paris — Terrific Struggle For Dead Man's Hill Continues.

Paris, May 13.—Two attempts by the Germans last night to recapture positions on the western slope of Dead Man hill, taken by the French on May 9, were frustrated by the French artillery fire. Artillery is active about the Avocourt wood and the bombardment in the Douaumont-Vaux section continues, according to the official report today.

Senator Berenger, writing today in Matin, says that the key to the whole lines is the possession of the Briey valley in Verdun and in Metz.

Ore Fields Valuable.

"Since the war begun" says Senator Berenger, "France, having lost the Briey basin, has been obliged to import almost all the iron required from England and America, while Germany having occupied the whole Briey valley, is able to add 21,000,000 tons to her own annual output. This explains the assiduity of the Germans around Verdun. They want to capture the pass so as to effectually prevent the French from attacking Metz.

"In a confidential memorandum addressed to Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg on conditions of future peace before the German Industrial association on May 20, 1915, the following passage occurred:

"'If the production of iron and steel had not doubled since August 1914, the continuation of the war would have been impossible. The Briey region now produces 60 to 80 per cent of our iron and steel and, if that production was hampered, the war would be practically lost.'"

"Have Shot Their Bolt."

The battle of Verdun appears to have had a great moral effect in France. It has turned attention from irritating discussions over details of the conduct of the war and has cut short an incipient revival of partisan spirit in parliament and in the press, which had been favored by relative stagnation at the front. Also it seems to have diminished the number of pessimists and hence increased France's confidence in the final outcome.

"They have shot their bolt" is a frequent comment heard in places where two months ago there were nervous complaints as to the prolongation of hostilities. "They can do no more than they have done, which is far from enough to shake the French army."

Today the cafe conversations are all about some exploit around Verdun and what will happen to the Germans if they persist in their effort to take the ancient stronghold.

There is also less discussion of the high cost of living than two months ago, although there has been no appreciable easing of prices. This, too, is accounted for by the heroic resistance of the army.

SEND SERBS TO FRONT VIA GREECE OR FIGHT

Berlin, May 12, (by wireless to Sayville).—The entente powers have decided to resort to force, if necessary, to transport the Serbian troops at Corfu across Greek territory to the Saloniki front, the Overseas News agency says.

"The Russians believe Greece is actuated by fear of Germany. The entente powers have decided to employ force, being prompted by desire to determine definitely the policy of Greece."

Resentful Spirit Sweeps Ireland Over Executions Bringing Serious Crisis

Reaction of Sympathy For Hapless Victims of Martial Law Moves Emotional Race to Extent Hard to Gauge—Parliament Warned of General Uprising.

ASQUITH IN DUBLIN TO LIFT MILITARY RULE

Dublin (via London, 6 15 p m), May 12 James Connolly and John McDermott, were shot this morning for complicity in the rebellion

London, May 12 A Central News dispatch from Dublin says that a court martial is trying today the officer believed to have been responsible for the putting to death of F Sheehy Skeffington the Irish editor who is said to have been executed without sanction of the military authorities

London, May 13 Growing resentment over the execution of Irish rebels by the British military authorities is sweeping Ireland causing a new and admittedly dangerous outbreak in the Irish situation A feature of the crisis is the hapless position of the Irish leaders of the abortive uprising as revealed by the emotional race to the extent which it is hard to gauge

Premier Asquith personally has stepped into the breach he held two years ago at the time of the threatened Ulster revolt He has gone to Dublin where it is believed one of the first things he will do will be to lift the martial law The prime minister's political forces that of conciliation and it is believed he now has a problem confronting him that would [illegible] its utmost capacity Many of the Irish [illegible] particularly the liberal organs [illegible] upon the Irish factions to seize the present opportunity for settling their long standing differences

Talk of Disarming All Irish.

The Marquess of Lansdowne intimated to the House of Lords that the disarmament of Ireland will be undertaken This would mean the disarmament of Ulster and nationalist volunteers and whether that can be done depends on Sir Edward Carson and John Redmond more than on any other individuals The house of commons without investigating Mr Dillon's motion demand that the government should immediately declare its intention The house of lords quite without dissent [illegible] with the government's [illegible] Ireland

Dillon Warns Britain.

John Dillon, one of the most respected of the nationalists but often one of the bitterest antagonists of British rule, attacked the government in the house of commons in a speech which for bitter denunciation has not been surpassed at Westminster since Parnell's day

Mr Dillon said that the fact that nine out of 10 people in Ireland were on the side of the government was due to the life work of the nationalists, and now the present rule was "washing out that life work in a sea of blood" Out of the whole of Ireland, Mr. Dillon continued, there were only four or five spots where there was insurrection, yet the whole country was under martial law, and there was absolutely no trace of the civil administration, The Irish people, he declared, would refuse to accept the well known high character of General Maxwell as the sole guarantee of their liberties, and if the military rule was to be continued, the government had better get ready 100,000 men to garrison the country

If the British government had not been so dense, said Mr. Dillon, that they could have had many of the rebels fighting for them in the British army—men who were misled into rebellion, but of whose courage he was proud

The statement brought forth cries of "shame"

Men arrested continued Mr Dillon, had been threatened with death and actually placed against a wall in order to persuade them to become informers.

ASQUITH IN DUBLIN TO ABOLISH MILITARY RULE

Dublin, (via London), May 12—Premier Asquith arrived in Dublin today and was taken in an automobile to the vice regal lodge. The premier's program for the day was first a conference with departmental chiefs and afterward consultation with General Maxwell in regard to the military situation, which is well in hand.

It is reported that in all likelihood a proclamation will be issued shortly abolishing martial law, the provisions of which have been greatly modified in the last few days.

The situation in some parts of the provinces is said to be still rather disturbed, and it is likely that military control will continue in these districts for some time longer

Premier Asquith intended also to meet several civilian deputations so as to learn at first hand their ideas concerning the reconstruction of the destroyed portions of Dublin and perhaps to formulate a plan for compensation There is relief apparent among the population at the promised cessation of executions which were beginning to cause considerable agitation.

RESOLUTION IN CONGRESS.

GERMAN BACKDOWN IS HELD COMPLETE

Sussex Admission Accentuates Collapse, Say French—Hollweg Impressed With Fear of Break.

Paris May 13 The official admission that a German submarine torpedoed the Sussex is widely commented upon in the press which considers that the admission exonerates Germany's Chancellor Bethmann Hollweg President Wilson's resolute attitude

The Petit Parisien says that an examination of the comments of the German press shows that it is dominated by the feeling that Germany has undergone one of the gravest diplomatic checks in her history and that she dare not answer back to Washington as she would like

There is considerable skepticism about the punishment of the commander of the submarine Marcel Hulin says

We are curious to know and perhaps the American government will show the same curiosity as to what sort of punishment has been chosen for the commander of the submarine Has not Von Capelle promoted Lieutenant Otto Steinbrink the commander of the U 53 which [illegible] and was the submarine which torpedoed the Sussex"

Berlin (via London) May 12 So long as the United States really takes steps to force Great Britain to observe the rules and obligations of international law and treaties it is immaterial whether the action is due to Germany's expectation that this will help or whether it is done independently of any German wish or request The main thing is that it is done

This is the general summing up of the press comments here of Secretary Lansing's explanation of the American answer to the German note

London May 12 What purports to be a summary of the speech of Dr von Bethmann-Hollweg the German imperial chancellor at the secret sitting of the general committee of the reichstag on May 5 concerning Germany's reply to America is published by the wireless press under a Berne date The wireless press states that the following remarks by the premier may be accepted as unquestionably authentic

"A great mistake has been committed in overstating the value of the submarine campaign against England Our naval experts no longer believe in the probability of reducing England to starvation and ruin by submarines, even if the war lasts another two years. It is true that these instruments can inflict a frightful amount of damage, but this damage would be insufficient to outweigh the danger to ourselves of America's hostility.

"It is folly to underestimate the consequences of a conflict with America, nor should we risk only America's enmity Our information leads us to believe that other neutrals might follow America's lead

"The imperial government has weighed every factor and is convinced of the necessity of avoiding a breach with Ame

TELLS OF BRANDEIS' PART IN BIG MERGER

Employed to Assist In Putting Through Merger of Drug Concerns.

Washington, May 12—Louis K. Liggett of Boston, a director of the United Drug company, was the first witness called today before the Senate judiciary committee at the reopened hearing on the nomination of Louis D. Brandeis to the supreme court. The committee is looking into any connection Mr Brandeis may have had as a lawyer in a merger between the United Drug Co and the Riker-Hegeman stores.

Last October Mr Liggett testified, George W. Anderson, United States attorney at Boston, began to investigate the merger and Liggett, with his counsel Mr Snow went to Anderson's office to lay their hands on the table."

Mr Liggett testified that Snow, wishing to get the view of some one who had represented other interests, consulted Mr Brandeis, and that the two lawyers rendered an opinion favorable to the merger The opinion was put into the record with a report of Mr Anderson to the attorney general

Senator Borah brought out by a question that the employment of Mr. Brandeis resulted in no change in the merger plans Frederick E Snow, counsel for Mr Liggett next took the stand and gave testimony the same as his client

Mr Snow said he and Mr Brandeis did not succeed in convincing Mr Anderson that the merger—particularly the United Drug company—was not a violation of the law "Mr. Brandeis tried to convince me that my notion of what the supreme court had decided and what the corporation was proposing to do was wrong," Mr. Anderson, who testified next, explained. "We talked rather of what the decisions are rather than what they ought to be."

Commissioner Harlan, of the Interstate Commerce commission, who appeared before the subcommittee to explain the employment of Mr. Brandeis in the 5 per cent advance rate case, testified no was sure he favored the view of the commission in saying Mr. Brandeis' services in that case were eminently satisfactory. He said he was not employed to represent the shippers or the railroads, but the public.

NEW TROOP DISPOSITIONS ARE UNDER WAY

Washington Government Making Arrangements For Possible Emergencies, But Administration Takes Optimistic View of Situation, Trusting to Troops to Clean Up Northern Mexico While Negotiations With First Chief Are Dragged Out Indefinitely.

Washington, May 12.—The state department received word late today that General Trevino had ordered 1,500 Carranza cavalry and infantry toward the border to pursue the bandits responsible for the recent raids at Glenn Springs and Boquillis, Tex.

Washington, May 13.—Secretary Baker announced, after today's cabinet meeting, that no change in the Mexican policy had been decided upon. No new orders for military organizations to go to the border were in contemplation, he said, and indicated that no general intervention in Mexico was being thought of at present.

General Scott's report, which was in amplification of the official statement issued by the conferees at El Paso last night, was transmitted to Secretary Lansing and also was considered at the cabinet meeting. Its contents were not disclosed, but there were indications of an unwritten agreement having been formulated to cover cooperative action along the border.

It was suggested that General Carranza, faced by the political situation in Mexico, was unwilling to make any written agreement to which his opponents could point as being a surrender of sovereign rights.

Under that theory, General Obregon it is understood, has given assurances that every possible means will be employed by this government to aid in the speedy extermination of the bandits while the formal diplomatic discussion of the withdrawal suggestion proceeds. It is possible that neither side will endeavor to force the negotiations while the disturbed condition along the border continue.

Before going to the cabinet meeting Secretary Baker said no steps to send either national guardsmen or regulars to the border were in immediate contemplation. It was made plain, however, that should General Funston again find his border guard too thin to protect American towns and ranches, there would be no hesitation in calling out more state troops.

General Funston returns to San Antonio with his original orders altered in no way He has full authority to dispose his men, either in Mexico or along the border.

Eliseo Arredondo, General Carranza's ambassador, said diplomatic negotiations would not be resumed until he had been instructed.

Preparations are being made for eventualities. The army is greatly in need of cavalry, and the guard cavalry troops may be called out soon The First Illinois regiment of guard cavalry, for which General Funston has asked, is reported ready to entrain within 24 hours, and the war department has its eye on the guard cavalry of Iowa.

Upon receiving word today from Maj Gen. Hugh L. Scott, that the border conferences with General Obregon had been closed without agreement, Secretary Baker announced that he had directed General Scott to return to Washington and General Funston to return to his headquarters at San Antonio, Tex.

Now Up to Carranza.

Renewed indications were given that the administration has no intention of withdrawing American troops until it is definitely established that the danger of further border raids has been removed. The president will take no further step until General Scott returns from the border. The administration considers the next move up to General Carranza.

Secretary Baker laid before the cabinet the report of General Scott and said that for the present he considered there were enough American troops along the border to handle the situation.

Secretary Baker left immediately after the cabinet meeting for visit to Atlantic City and Newark, N. J President Wilson plans to leave tonight on the Mayflower for a week end trip down the Potomac.

PEACE SENTIMENT ONLY IN CENTRAL NATIONS. HE SAYS

New York, May 13.—Samuel S. McClure, the publisher, who arrived from Copenhagen last night on the steamer Oscar II, said that he found a sentiment for peace only in Germany and Austria.

"I have visited all the belligerent nations and did not find a suggestion of peace anywhere except in those two countries, where people desire it for commercial reasons only," said Mr McClure. "By that I mean they wish to resume their business relations with other nations, not that they fear defeat.

"The English, French, Russians, Belgians, Italians, Germans, Austrians, Hungarians, Bulgarians and Turks are all confident of victory for their respective armies and determined to fight to the end."

POSSE CAPTURES GANG OF BANDITS

Mexican Murderers Overhauled on Way to Cross Border—One of Gang Killed In Gun Fight.

Brownsville, Tex., May 12.—Mexicans who killed Curtis Bayles near Mercedes last night, were surrounded today One of them was killed and the other two captured, according to a report received at Fort Brown, Tex. The two captives are being held at military headquarters at Progreso, the report said. The three men are supposed to have been attempting to enter Mexico.

Curtis Bayles, 21 years old, a farmer, was attacked by Mexican bandits near Mercedes. Bayles was struck four times by bullets. As the firing started he shouted to his father in the house to bring a gun. Before the elder Bayles could reach the scene the Mexicans had disappeared and the son was dying. It has not been established whether the Mexicans came from the Mexican side.

After the shooting they rode away. United States soldiers and a posse searched for them all night. Two Mexicans were arrested on suspicion.

CHICAGO SWAMPED BY CONVENTION DEMANDS

Hotel Facilities Exhausted and Private Houses Are Renting For $100 Per Day.

Chicago, May 13.—The demand for accommodations during convention week, beginning June 7, it was learned today, has so exhausted the supply of rooms in Chicago hotels that many visitors will live in private homes, in some cases entire houses being rented to care for parties from other cities.

The first person to take this step to secure accommodations was John Wanamaker of New York and Philadelphia, who has taken a house of 14 rooms on Michigan boulevard for himself and party Others immediately followed suit and it is said that the rental in some cases amounts to more than $100 a day. William F. Stone, sergeantat-arms of the republican national convention established headquarters in the coliseum annex today.

Headquarters for the progressive national convention will be opened here in a day or two it is said, with F. P. Corrick, of Omaha, state chairman for Nebraska, in charge.

LEHIGH MUST GIVE UP ITS STEAMSHIP LINES

Philadelphia, May 12.—The United States district court here today dismissed the bill of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company, which sought to restrain the Interstate Commerce commission from enforcing its order divorcing the railroad from its interests in steamship lines on the great lakes.

The railroad had been granted a temporary injunction restraining the commission from enforcing the order against the Lehigh Valley, continuing its interest in the Lehigh Valley Transportation company. Today's decision was on the question of making the injunction permanent.

The commission had kept strictly within the powers conferred by congress the court said.

The railroad had attacked a paragraph in the Panama canal act which empowers the commission to permit operation of an existing specified service if it was not against the public interest. The attack was made on the ground that congress should have enacted standards to which the commission should conform and that the subject should not have been turned over to the arbitrary action of the commission.

The court disagreed with this contention and said congress had done all that was reasonably necessary.

NEGRO KILLS OFFICER AND WOMAN; GETS AWAY

Leavenworth, Kan., May 13.—Sergt. James C. Jackson and Miss Ernestine Brown, 22 years old, were killed and an unidentified woman was severely wounded this morning by William White, a negro, who had purchased his release from the army mounted service school at Fort Leavenworth, near here, yesterday. White escaped across the Missouri river in a row boat

Mexicans Begin Redispositions Of Troops To Support Pershing

El Paso, Tex., May 13.—Juan Amador, subsecretary of foreign affairs of the defacto government, who participated in the conference with General Obregon, called on General Scott today and reiterated to him assurances that such troop dispositions as were necessary to restore and maintain order along the northern frontier already had been ordered

General Obregon, who will remain for a few days at Chihuahua, has directed General Trevino to send into the states of Chihuahua and Coahuila 10,000 men These forces will be taken from Torreon, San Pedro and other points in the southern part of Coahuila, Trevino's headquarters will be in Chihuahua City, Chihuahua.

Immediate occupation of the district about Parral has been ordered, and what the Mexicans regard as an adequate force will be dispatched to the Big Bend country and every effort made to run down the bandits and rescue J. J. Deemer, who was captured in the Glenn Springs and Boquillas raids, he said.

General Scott previously had assured General Obregon and Mr. Amador, that the withdrawal of the American troops from the district below Namiquipa had already begun and Amador announced that this district would be controlled without loss of time by the Mexican forces.

Amador is Confident.

Mr. Amador expected to leave tonight for Mexico City, where he will have an important role as subsecretary of foreign affairs in the negotiations that have reverted to the foreign officers of the two governments. To newspaper men he insisted that he had no doubt of an amicable adjustment at an early date. He explained that the questions involved in the protocol governing the mutual agreement for the crossing of troops into one and the other countries must be the basis of these negotiations, although the withdrawal of the American troops stipulated in Carranza's note of April 12, must also be considered.

Mr. Amador did not regard this, however, as an insurmountable obstacle to a successful conclusion of the diplomatic negotiations about to be resumed at Washington.

Mr. Amador made it clear that Generals Scott and Funston had reiterated the assertions of the administration that it was not the intention of the United States government to keep the troops in Mexico indefinitely and that, therefore, he did not attach so much importance to this as had been given to it in some quarters.

"And you may be certain," said Mr. Amador, "that the danger of a conflict between Mexican troops and American soldiers pending these negotiations does not exist."

Responsibles In Line.

Mr. Amador emphasized the word, 'troops," explaining that it was quite possible, and to be expected, that any irresponsible band of armed men might attack American troops at any time, but that General Obregon, General Trevino and other high officers of Carranza's army have such control over their men that a movement by government forces against the Americans was out of the question.

General Obregon's army in Sonora will remain there for the present, according to Mr. Amador, although he said that a request would probably be made later for the passage of a portion of the troops from Sonora eastward, either through American territory or through the American line of communication.

At present, he said, neither General Scott nor General Obregon regarded it wise, however, to send the Mexican troops across the American lines, not because we fear that our troops would cause a conflict," said Mr. Amador, "so much as we fear that they might be attacked by your troops."

At this, Mr Amador turned his head and smiled at General Scott

Secretary of War Baker today sent to Generals Scott and Funston congratulatory telegrams on the manner in which they had conducted the negotiations wi[illegible] the Mexican conferees.

ALLIES SINK SHIP WITHOUT WARNING

Austrian Passenger Vessel Is Torpedoed—French Report Sinking of Munitions Laden Transport.

Berlin, (by wireless to Sayville), May 13.—The Austro-Hungarian passenger steamer Dubrovnik has been torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in the Adriatic," says an Overseas News agency announcement today.

"The Dubrovnik was not armed and was torpedoed without warning whatever."

A Paris news agency dispatch May 10 told of the sinking by a French submarine in the lower Adriatic of "an enemy transport laden with war material."

The Dubrovnik was a vessel of 4,235 tons gross, built in New Castle, in 1912. Marine registers reported her last at Constantinople.

APOSTOLIC CREED MAY BE ORDERED CHANGED

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., May 12.—Representatives of four nations participated in a meeting today held in connection with the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at which short reports on the work in foreign fields were given. Native workers from Korea, Japan, India, Denmark, Uruguay and Mexico, reported that despite the war, progress had been made in church activities during the last four years.

Among the speakers was Dr. Mary Stone, a Chinese woman physician, who is in charge of the Methodist hospital in Kiukung, China.

A proposal to amend the apostals' creed by substituting the words "Church Universal" for "Holy Catholic Church" caused a debate in which proponents of the change asserted that the meaning of the phrase was misunderstood by young persons and by foreign converts to Methodism. The determination of the matter was left to the board of bishops A special committee was appointed to consider the possibility of combining the Epworth league and the Sunday school activities

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

AUTOMOBILE DEMAND WILL EXCEED SUPPLY

Toledo, Ohio. "Unless I am greatly mistaken, the demand for automobiles this summer will be far in excess of the supply, notwithstanding the fact that this year's production of motor cars will be the largest in the history of the industry."

The above statement was made by John N Willys, president of the Willys Overland Company, who has just returned to Toledo from his winter home in Pasadena, Cal. Mr Willys spent several weeks on the coast and although he went there ostensibly for a rest he could not resist the temptation of investigating business conditions at first hand.

"My reason for predicting a shortage of cars this year is based on information that I have been able to gather from dealers and from my own personal observations of conditions as they exist in the west," stated Mr Willys. "Everywhere I could see evidences of increased wealth of prosperity and to the fact that prosperity and it this prosperity is indicative of conditions throughout the country my advice to prospective car buyers is to shop early. I firmly believe that the rush for cars this summer will surpass that of the last three years combined.

"Without exception, every one of the Overland and Willys Knight dealers that I interviewed had the same story to tell. Business had been good, in fact they claimed it had been better due largely to the general wave of prosperity and to the fact that manufacturers have catered to a larger market by bringing lighter, more economical and lower priced cars of which the Overland Model 75 is another example.

"When I explained to them that the factory was shipping on an average of over 800 cars a day, which is three times the number shipped at this time a year ago, they had to admit that we were doing our share toward meeting the emergency.

"People in all walks of life seem to have awakened to the necessity of the motor car. Business men have found it a necessary adjunct in their different lines of endeavor and no other vehicle of transportation affords as much pleasure and enjoyment for the whole family as does the smooth running, distance defying automobile.

"I believe this combination of necessity and all-around pleasure-giving qualities is chiefly responsible for the present day demand for automobiles. Even though money is plentiful and reports show the country to be in a wonderfully prosperous condition, I do not believe the vast number of cars now being sold would be impossible had it not been for the public awakening to the fact that they needed them instead of wanted them."

GIRL ATTEMPTS TO COMMIT SUICIDE

Last Thursday afternoon Miss Tillie Olson, residing in the south-east part of Britt, attempted to commit suicide by jumping in front of a moving freight train.

She was walking along the tracks east of town when a freight train approached. They signaled for her and she stepped off the track, but just as the train got to her she leaped in front of it. The pilot struck her and threw her several feet. The train was stopped and the crew picked her up and placed her in the way car and she was hurried to the depot where Dr. Brewster was called. She was terribly bruised about the head and body, although both shoes were torn from her feet, they were uninjured.

It was a miraculous escape.

Miss Olson has been suffering from a mental malady for some time past and this attributed as the cause for this rash act. On Monday she had so far recovered from the shock as to be able to be taken to Garner when the was examined by the board of insanity commissioners as to her mental condition.

Several people witnessed the accident and all state that it was an intencional act and the train crew were in no wise to blame.—Britt Tribune.

There will be a basket social at the schoolhouse in District No. 2, Avery township, Friday evening, May 19. Ladies please bring baskets.

COSSON LEADS FOR GOVERNOR

Political Forecasters Say He Is the Strongest Candidate.

EXPECTED TO WIN JUNE 5

Enemies of Constitutional Amendment Get Behind Lieutenant Governor—Efforts Made to Turn Wet Democrats to Republicans.

Des Moines, Ia (Special)—The contest for the nomination of governor on the republican ticket is causing much concern not only to the temperance people of the state but also to the republican leaders. The temperance forces feel that if Meredith is nominated by the democrats and Cosson by the republicans the temperance issue will be settled and the campaign will be waged largely along national lines.

Republican leaders are pointing out that the attitude of the democratic party on the liquor question since the election of Horace Boies has prevented the election of a democratic governor since that time.

The Party Danger.

With Meredith coming out on a dry platform they fear that there is great danger of the republican party passing into the control of the liquor forces of the state. Reports come from all over Iowa that an organized democratic effort of great proportions is being carried out to vote wet democrats in the republican primary.

It is well known that the liquor interests are backing Mr. Harding and the temperance forces are backing Attorney General Cosson. While there are other dry candidates Cosson is looked upon as the man that can save the cause of temperance and good government. He has a much wider acquaintance and stands out pre-eminent over any man in the state in the matter of law enforcement.

Governor Controls Agents.

It is known that the governor has the appointment and control of the special agents and that law enforcement during the early stages of prohibition is the one important thing to make prohibition a success.

The fight is settling down to a contest between the temperance and liquor forces of the state with the liquor forces of all parties backing Lieutenant Governor Harding and the temperance people putting their faith in George Cosson.

The Road Question.

An effort was made to prejudice the farmers on the road question against Cosson, but his statements that he was opposed to forcing paved roads upon the farmers quickly put an end to these false charges. Cosson recognizes that conditions are different in different parts of the state and that no hard and fast rule can be fixed for each community. He believes in giving each community the privilege of spending its own revenues in the most advantageous way consistent with local conditions and the necessities of the case.

Farmers Are Aroused.

The increased activity of the liquor forces and the constant changing of party affiliation by wet democrats in order to vote in a republican primary has aroused the farmers to the importance of the situation and many of them who were counted for Harding are now lining up behind Cosson.

The farmer is anxious to have as good a road as he can afford without the cost becoming burdensome, but he wants the road to lead him to the market, to his town, and the school and not to the door of a saloon.

The republican party has always been the party of temperance, morality, progress and economy. The republican leaders feel that it would be suicide for the party to now change its attitude on the temperance question and become the party of the liquor forces and adopt a do-nothing policy.

It is recognized that there should be no doubt either as to the republican platform or as to the republican candidate upon the temperance question or any moral issue. As this is becoming more and more recognized, Cosson's strength is rapidly increasing.

Fly Poison Kills More Children Than All Other Poisons Combined

For Safety's Sake, Use

Is there in your home, anywhere within baby's reach, a saucer of arsenic poisoned paper floating in water, or a can with a sweetened poisoned wick?

During 1915, 26 cases of fly poisoning were reported from 11 states; in 1914, 46 cases from 14 states. Fly poison kills more children than all other poisons combined.

Yet fly poison still is left unguarded except in the homes where mothers have learned that the safe, sure, non-poisonous, efficient fly catcher and destroyer is

TANGLEFOOT

The Journal of the Michigan State Medical Society comments thus in a recent issue:

"Symptoms of arsenical poisoning are very similar to those of cholera infantum, until by a number of cases of cholera infantum were found of arsenical poisoning but lately it has been attributed to cholera infantum.

"We repeat, arsenical fly destroying devices are dangerous and should be abolished. Health officials should become aroused to prevent further loss of life from their source. Our Michigan Legislature this last session, passed a law regulating the sale of poisonous fly papers."

Confirmed Pessimist.

The convicted murderer's lawyer whispered to his client what he thought would be good news.

"It seemed a cinch that you would get life imprisonment," he said, "but I can tell from the judge's look that he is going to turn you off with twenty years."

"That may seem nice to you," replied the prisoner, "but I used to be a life insurance actuary and for a man of my age twenty years figures out about seven years longer than life imprisonment. I always get the worst of it."

Very Sudden

It was the last half of the fourth inning and the home team had three men on bases and nobody out. The next man up was the best batter on the team, if not in the entire league. He advanced to the plate, swung three times and, wearing a confident smile, walked back. The stands were in an uproar of excitement.

Several of the rooters leaped for joy, and a general shout of delight went up.

The visiting pitcher had struck out the next three batters.

He was a widow and had six children.

Cheap

"Is gardening cheap to save me going to the market and have fresh vegetables in summer and all it costs me [illegible]?"

"Yes, but you're paying a man to spade the garden and look after it for you."

"That all right. It's worth what I pay him to get out of doing the work myself."

MEAL-TIME CONSCIENCE.
What Do the Children Drink?

There are times when mother or other feeds the youngsters something that they know children should not have. Perhaps it is some rich dessert but more often it is tea or coffee.

It is better to have some delicious hot food drink that you can take yourself and feed to your children, conscious that it will help and strengthen but never hurt them.

A Yorkstate lady says: "I used coffee many years in spite of the conviction that it injured my nervous system and produced my nervous headaches. While visiting a friend I was served with Postum and I determined to get a package and try it myself. The result was all that could be desired—a delicious, finely flavored richly colored beverage. Since I quit coffee, Postum has worked wonders for me.

"My husband, who had suffered from kidney trouble when drinking coffee, quit the coffee and took up Postum with me and since drinking Postum he has felt stronger and better, with no indication of kidney trouble.

"You may be sure I find it a great comfort to have a warm drink at meals that I can give my children, with a clear conscience that it will help and not hurt them as coffee or tea would."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c pkgs.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both forms are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

CHAPTER XIII (Continued) 5

He moved away. When he had gone, Buck swung from his horse.

"I'm sure I don't know why I stayed here with you," observed Jess.

"P'raps you is better at addin' than subtractin'," Buck ventured.

"P'raps," assented Jess. "It'd be hard to add to your nerve, Buck, an' seems 'tain't possible to lessen it. I don't know why I'm talkin' to you at all."

"It might be easier to say how," he answered, his laugh amused.

Jess turned to Perry Green's horse, giving her companion no reply beyond the protest of her back.

Day was breaking now. Over the wide plain an exquisite, tender gray was stealing, soft and cool. The dampness of dew made the parched earth fresh and sweet. The silence was that of the still sea at ebb.

The subtle influence of the primal hour struck a sudden seriousness in the young cowpuncher's heart. His eyes rested on the girl before him, and the bitterness that had been his died in the onrush of his love. He strode over to her, standing beside her, his arm outstretched along the neck of the horse she was fondling.

"Jess," he asked, with a vibrant tenderness in his rich voice, "why does we keep on scrappin' so when there ain't a thing I could do in this world I wouldn't do to make you happy?" You knows I love you, Jess. You knows your love would make me the happiest man on earth. Does you have to scorn me so, Jess Kilrain?"

Jess spoke so softly that her voice was scarce above a murmur.

"I don't scorn you, Buck, but I ain't no love for you—or for any man." She looked at him with a quick fearlessness. "We scrap," she said, "for the same reason cats hisses when it touches water. You make me mad plumb through, Buck, with your self-assurance."

He smiled sadly.

"My self-assurance! Why, it's all bluff, Jess. How can I be self-assured when I know I ain't got a leg to stan' on? Course I ain't a catterpiller!"

"You can sting like one," said the girl, her lips quivering between a smile and tears.

"An' you couldn't love me if you was to try, Jess?"

"I couldn't try. I don't want to try. Don't talk to me of love. I ain't no use for any man."

It might not have been wise, but it was characteristic of Buck to say:

"Then I'm goin' to make you come to have use for me, Jess. There ain't no soil so poor an' measly you can't make love grow in it."

Jess laughed strangely. It was not an angry laugh, and she turned her eyes away to the eastern horizon, flushed now to a delicate pink and rose where the unseen sun was heralding its coming.

CHAPTER XIV

PENT-UP WATERS.

[illegible] of Worthing's party in arriving for Kilrain had discountenanced the initial step upon hearing Perry Green's [illegible]. Jess decided that she would herself ride over near the dam that day and report how the situation lay.

"If I'm seen [illegible] father," she had said, "I won't do no harm where they would suspect any of the boys. If no one's there I can see just as well as a man. I don't believe they're ready to turn the water in through the upper locks yet, though course now they'll guard the work well. So much for not bein' warned by me bout that slippery eel, Grange."

But to the girl's surprise, when she had drawn near the new dam, riding always in the sheltering woods along the river bank, there was no sign of any work going on. The stone and concrete wall blocking the river's course lay unguarded. The water pent up beyond trickling around one corner of its base in an improvised channel.

There were no workmen visible.

They had not been able to mislead Jess as to the object of the expedition, her warning had prohibited, and now her suspicions stirred. Had Cardross, informed by the man Grange and unaware of that fact being suspected, determined to play into Worthing's hands by the semblance of ignorance, while in reality he only waited to entrap the men of the Loop?

Jess had developed a profound distrust of Blass Cardross.

She hitched her horse in the chaparral, and went boldly out into the river bed. She could vault the little stream of water that ran close beside one bank. Going up to the dam, she walked about it, finally climbing up one side until she stood upon its top, looking down into the big basin.

Across its dry surface she could see the comparative abundance of water.

At that moment Blass Cardross climbed up on the dam upon which Jess stood and came slowly toward her.

They had not met since that eventful evening in the Skunk Hollow, and the girl somewhat startled and annoyed to be found where she was by Cardross now, nevertheless quickly mastered her discomfiture. Cardross was the more ill at ease of the two, and the very fact lent a certain gravity to the occasion. He looked at her in silence.

"I didn't expect to find you here," said Jess, "or I wouldn't 'a' come."

"It is a funny place to meet again, Jess."

He spoke with evident nervousness. The weeks had not left him without his own suffering.

"Funny! You call this a funny place, Blass Cardross? Does you know what your funny place is doin' for thousands of poor dumb brutes—drivin' 'em to their slow death for want of that water your funny work here keeps away from em—keeps away there in abundance? If that's your idea of fun I hope you can laugh hearty over it."

So unexpected by him had come her vehement outburst that Cardross for the instant had nothing to say. His face clouded painfully.

"You wouldn't have talked that way to me once," he muttered, unthinking.

Jess laughed, a ringing contempt for them both in the sound.

"You're dead right there!" she cried, her voice quivering. "There was a time, Blass Cardross, when I was plumb fool enough to take you for a man. I was even drunk enough with my folly to love you. How you must 'a' laughed at me for that! Dreamin' of bein' your wife! Askin' you to make me so! How patient you was with me not to let the cat out of the bag afore she jumped out!

"It don't matter now," she went on, catching her breath. "I've looked at my face so often in that muddy water that I've learned to know it, Blass Cardross. I've been wantin' to tell you this watin' to tell you that the hurt is gone though a hate that sometimes makes me afraid of myself grows an' mean a man you really was, an' I see, grows. I come here today to see how."

She swept her arm toward the pent-up waters, scorn unutterable blazing in her dark eyes.

He moved closer to her, a glowing anger in his face.

"Is that all you came here today to see Jess Kilrain? Have you no fear of me that you come here saying these things to me? You have played me with your tongue. No man would have dared to say the half of what you have said to me. We are alone here on my place. What if I made you sorry for those words?"

She sprang back on the narrow ledge of the dam.

"What!" For the first touch of your hand upon me I'll lay your face open with this quirt. Earle Worthing ain't here to knock you down. Just try me—if I ain't a man!"

"And then," he cried, beside himself with rage at her taunt, "I'd kill you, Jess Kilrain!"

"Would you?" P'raps you would an' j'raps you wouldn't. Try it, if you dare!"

Cardross sprang toward her to be met by the stinging lash of the quirt under which the livid welt leaped like a furrow across the dark skin.

"Curse you!" he cried. "That blow will cost you yourself, Jess Kilrain!"

Then his arms closed about her.

Wild with her fear and anger, Jess struggled, careless if she went over the edge of the wall herself so long as she drew Cardross with her. Near it they came more than once, but by some chance escaped, and the girl began to weaken in the unequal combat, sick to the soul with the dread and the horror of what she fought.

Out of the chaparral behind them there came the crack of a pistol.

Cardross, back toward the basin of the dam, staggered under the impact of a blow unseen and unheard, his hold upon the girl loosening. Soundlessly he reeled backward, toppled over the edge, his body rolling over and over like a bag of sand down the slanting wall to the basin below where it lay face up-gazing and very still.

In dazed horror Jess turned from the sight at the sound of running steps beside her.

CHAPTER XV

FATE.

When the men rode back at dinner time along the home trail Buck let his horse drop behind the others, turning aside to a bunch of cattle strayed to a hollow at one side, and when his companions had ridden on, scarce mindful of his action he struck off south along the line of the river woods.

It occurred to him to give a casual inspection to Cardross' actions that day upon the dam. If anything were needed to whet his indignation sharper against Blass Cardross it would have been amply supplied by his recent ministrations to the suffering cattle of the loop.

He had long been angry with Blass Cardross.

He had always distrusted him. That Cardross had trifled with Jess Kilrain he suspected. That he had caused her suffering he knew. But if it had all come to an end now, and Jess were free, Buck could find it in his heart to forget Cardross.

He was thinking of him then however, he he rode slowly through the woods, for the heat of the day shut out beyond the grateful shade.

High in the tree tops above him crows cawed noisily, their voices softened into music by the heavy somnolence of the day. Quail whistled on the plains. The strident rasping of innumerable locusts vibrated on the still air, and mere specks upon the blue sky circled the watchful turkey buzzards.

Buck rode on a ridge above that which Jess had followed, and thus became after a time within partial view of the dam without having noticed the girl's pony, tied in the woods below him.

He hitched his own horse, and not unmindful of caution climbed down the slope to the lower level, though still keeping the river bed some distance below. On a slight projection he halted, turning his gaze down upon the dam.

At the sight of Jess Kilrain standing there talking with Cardross the life fairly went out of Buck's veins.

She had lied to him, then, after all! She had come here seeking her lover! Perhaps she had come to warn him! So great was the shock to Buck, so stunning the shock of his sudden disillusion that he hung there incapable too of any shade of reasoning, seeing merely with his physical eye the material fact before him.

Even the cautious action of the girl as she stepped away from Cardross, angry threat did not serve to illumine Buck's stupor of surprise, but when he saw her arm reach out and the leaping lash of the quirt take Cardross across the face the young cow puncher straightened his lithe body with a cry short and sharp, and suddenly comprehending.

Before he could move further, Cardross had grappled with Jess Kilrain.

The danger of that struggle horrified Buck. On the edge of a wall that, on the side nearer him, fell sheer 30 feet to a mass of jagged rock and stone the man and woman reeled perilously. Buck dare not call out to them lest it be to hasten their threatened danger.

He could not hope to reach them in saving time. But one thing remained to do.

His nerves steadied miraculously. Revolver in hand Buck waited—waited until in the rapid twisting of those bodies that of the man for an instant stood side toward him and inclined somewhat away from that of the girl.

Buck fired.

Cardross reeled and, as though pushed backward, toppled out of sight.

Thereafter it had taken Buck but an instant to reach Jess Kilrain's side.

Blass Cardross was quite dead.

Buck knew that he would be, for it was seldom, indeed, that his aim ever missed, and there had been no mercy in his soul when he had taken aim. Neither had those words he had once uttered to Martin Kilrain, as it had turned out with ominous prophecy, been vain words. He had done as he had sworn he would do!

Over Cardross' dead body Jess and the young cow puncher looked at each other. Wide eyed terror now was on the girl's face. A grim seriousness set the strong jaws of the man.

Slowly Jess spoke.

"He threatened to kill me, Buck! Remember that. He threatened to kill me! I believe in another minute he'd 'a done it. See here!"

She turned her chin upward. On the slender whiteness of her throat the livid print of relentless fingers gave a ghastly corroboration.

"He was mad!" she sobbed dryly. "He must 'a' been mad!"

Buck shivered.

"He was bad!" he muttered. "I ain't sorry I killed him!"

He stooped and took up the body of Blass Cardross, carrying it to a little tool shed near. There he laid it down out of the fiery heat of the sun. Against the wall rested Cardross' rifle and a book he had been reading when Jess Kilrain had come upon the dam. Buck pointed to them in silence, turning to Jess in the doorway.

"There was murder in his heart today," he said, after a moment. "Come, Jess! I've work to do while I'm free to do it. You must ride back home alone."

CHAPTER XVI

THE TWIST OF CIRCUMSTANCE.

For some minutes after Jess had reluctantly left him, obdurate, indeed, to her importunities, Buck stood thinking.

"I reckon I'm the special agent of Providence for the job," he said quietly to himself. "I always wondered how it'd feel to know you was at the end of your rope. It sure must put a premium on wickedness."

Yet he had no sense of doing any wrong thing in what he now set about doing. Neither did Buck's conscience trouble him for what he had done.

He made for the little metal house some distance off where he knew Cardross' men had stored their explosives, hesitated not an instant to break open the lock with the heavy crowbar he had found in the tool shed, and thereafter went about his task with a coolness and thoroughness which he meant should not miscarry.

He laid his mines, using such purposed openings as he found in the masonry of the dam, trusting to heavy charges to do the work effectually.

He set the alarm with which Cardross' battery was furnished, and then going for his horse, Buck rode upstream and waited. He could only trust that no one would approach the dam from the Loop direction during the few intervening minutes.

The shock of the ensuing explosion shattered the glass in windows miles away.

It almost knocked down the horse upon which Buck sat waiting in a growing uneasiness lest after all he had not builded well. And it did more than that. It shattered the retaining locks behind which Raccoon river was pent up, and the released water went roaring down over the shattered dam overflowing the natural bed of the stream and tearing through the underbrush in a wild sweep of gleaming, rushing devastation.

Buck, sitting his horse, laughed grimly.

"Now," he soliloquized with a humor that might have sounded ghastly had any been there to hear it, "if my life goes out at the end of a rope I'll know I've done more damage than killin' one worthless coyote."

He rode for miles before the freshet he had loosened spending itself gradually gave him the desired opportunity to cross over and find his horse for home, for he had waited on the wrong side of the destruction he had wrought.

And so when he at last sober and somewhat weary, reached the stables of the Loop it was to learn from many [illegible] of Cardross' men mangled body beneath the debris.

[illegible] was at last in the [illegible] Buck thought. He [illegible] to the Skull [illegible]

[illegible] no one to go out there today, Quien sabe?" [illegible]

Skull looked [illegible] ing of [illegible] the whites of [illegible]

Another [illegible] group was [illegible] of entirely [illegible]

When he stood Buck [illegible] saddle and [illegible] horse striking [illegible] by extra [illegible] dropping the [illegible] stable. In [illegible] through the group [illegible] Jess Kilrain.

"You've [illegible] Buck [illegible] girl [illegible] If your words wasn't just chaff for the love of God keep [illegible] your head here. Don't stand here [illegible] to me. They're watching us."

Then [illegible] Buck turned and moved away.

Now, that just like Buck Brannon," exclaimed Skull Williams softly. "He had no use to love Blass Cardross, but [illegible] his teeth."

Buck was not though.

An act for which he had no sense of guilt was by force of circumstance taking on the horrid secrecy of crime. With the passing of every minute Buck felt his feet slipping deeper in the mire. He had not foreseen that his full confession would involve Jess Kilrain.

He knew the men were watching him, talking about him, and a quick intuition made him aware of what they said.

He wheeled in his tracks and came back to them.

"I'm glad Blass Cardross is dead," he cried. "He was a scoundrel an' a coward [illegible] the more so because he couldn't [illegible] been with all the good that was in him. Don't think I'm cryin' cause he's dead, Skull. I ain't."

He caught up his saddle and [illegible] and plunged through the open stable door, leaving them not a little shocked, if the truth were told.

Skull jerked his ugly head.

"An' that's Buck too," he said, more wisely than he knew. "He's plumb rotten with honesty."

"Don't talk so much, Skull Williams," came Jess Kilrain's nervous voice as she turned to leave. "You rattle like a real death's head."

In the low laughter that followed Perry Green rose and detached himself from the group. He strolled leisurely into the stable, where he stopped before Buck engaged in rubbing down his lathered accouterments. A quizzical gleam came into the big fellow's eyes.

"Buck," he asked softly, "how many sticks of dandermite would you reckon a safe an' effectual charge to blast the walls of Jerusalem the Golden, an' turn loose the River Jordan?"

Buck frowned. In spite of himself he laughed.

"I'm in the devil of a mess, Perry," he said, "but 'tain't just as you're figgerin'."

The big cowpuncher nodded. He was very grave now.

"Go slow, old man," he offered, "an' take it easy. If a skunk gits smashed 'tain't sayin' he wouldn't ha' soused you first if he'd got the chance."

In the meanwhile, Martin Kilrain was given the man, Bill Grange, his walking orders. Grange received them in sullen resentment.

"You'll live to see the day you'll be sorry you done this, Kilrain," he threatened. "You're keen enough in your sweepin' 'fore Earle Worthing's door. Don't fergit your own. I know who's put you up to this an' why she done it. An' I'll tell you another thing, Martin Kilrain. Blass Cardross ain't never blowed up his dam hisself. Your friend, Buck Brannon, done it."

CHAPTER XVII.

UNDER PRESSURE.

That night Earle Worthing was in his office.

The death of Cardross had shocked him painfully, wiping out, so far as he was concerned, all scores against his old friend. He had ridden over at once to be of any service to Nance Cardross which she might permit, which, indeed, had proved to be of no service at all.

For Nance Cardross, idolizing her brother, and in a manner attributing his death to the feud between Worthing and him, had at this juncture refused to see Worthing.

And there were haunting doubts in Worthing's own mind about the whole occurrence. Kilrain had told him of the treachery of Grange, a treachery which, at Worthing's own advice, they had agreed to overlook for the moment, not neglecting to keep the man's actions themselves under close surveillance.

Yet Grange was not to be blamed for this for all day he had been in Kilrain's sight.

Jess Kilrain had admitted to her father that she had talked with Cardross at the dam. What her story lacked in detail it was reasonable enough to believe was accounted for by the girl's horror at the subsequent event.

But Worthing, remembering how just a cause Jess had for revenge upon Cardross could not banish a sinister fear. Yet Jess could not have wrecked the dam, for she was at home when that occurred.

Worthing stopped in his restless pacing of the floor at the sound of a knock upon the door. He knew by the first glimpse of the face of the man who entered the room that he was to learn something more definite about the catastrophe.

"You, Buck!" he cried, cordially. "I'm mighty glad to see you. I am worried clear through. Sit down and help yourself."

He pushed chair and cigars to his visitor, continuing his own pacing of the room.

"I'm feared I'm goin' to have to add to your worry, Mr. Worthing."

Earle Worthing glanced around hurriedly.

"You know something about this terrible thing that has happened, Buck? Tell me what it is. I need not assure you of my discretion."

[illegible] faltering in his own manner, though kindly eyes. There was no sign of faltering in his own manner, though his usual bright face was clouded.

"I knows all about it," he said, calmly, "for I done it. I done it all!"

"You done it, you did it!" echoed Worthing. "What do you mean, Buck?"

The young fellow squared his shoulders.

"I shot Blass Cardross through his false heart," he said. "Then, thinkin' I was the least to suffer for doin' it, I blowed up the dam. I ain't sorry for either doin', Mr. Worthing, though things has messed themselves badly, an' I knows I've got to answer for 'em. That's all that troubles me," he added, "the messin'."

Worthing found his chair. His hand was trembling. He was far more disturbed than Buck.

"What did you do this thing, Buck?" he asked. "I do not mean about the dam."

"I can't tell you, sir. All I can say is, I had to be done."

The eyes of both men met. In Buck's Worthing read a calm determination that was not to be shaken. In Worthing's Buck read the slow and certain dawning of perfect comprehension.

There was a long and heavy silence. [illegible] said nothing of this to [illegible] Buck."

"Perry Green suspects somethin' of it, the least of it."

Worthing got up from his chair once more in troubled thought. He did not look at the low but steady voice of Buck Brannon.

"I come to you, Mr. Worthing, as in duty bound. We've been more like friends than rancher an' cowpuncher in the mornin'"—and Buck here rose himself—"I'm goin' into the town to give myself up. Tain't easy, I allow, but I ain't squealin', an' the law's the law."

Worthing faced about.

"And you are not going to do anything of the sort, Buck," he cried, vehemently. "The law," he laughed, a bitter derision in his voice. "Did the law do anything when I appealed to it? Does the law make men like you? I am the law on the Loop, and you stay right here."

Buck smiled. There was a warm light in the eyes he turned upon Worthing. But he shook his head.

"I couldn't live, Worthing," he said, softly, "with this thing shut up inside of me. I couldn't look a cow in the face an' feel I was a man with this had in me like a sin."

Worthing halted before his cowpuncher.

"Not for her sake, Buck," he asked, quietly repressed, "Think of that. You do not know the law you would honor. It is famed for stirring up all that happens after it has allowed it to happen. You might hold your silence, but the law would ferret things out. I myself would have to speak against him—against her. She would have to speak. Think of that—of Martin Kilrain, of me, of Cardross' sister—of Jess herself."

Buck's head drooped.

"You make a coward of me!" he cried. "Don't do that, Worthing."

"God made a man of you first," said Worthing. "You need not fear, Buck."

"It's the man I'm thinkin' of," murmured Buck, and his voice shook. "Mebbe tain't much, but it's plumb everythin' I must, Worthing. I must!"

The door was pushed gently open. Mrs. Worthing entered, starting back at sight of her son's visitor.

"I thought no one was with you, Earle. You have been a stranger, Buck, lately. Some one is here wishing to see you, Earle."

"Some one!"

"Jess Kilrain," she whispered. "Poor child!"

"Ah!" exclaimed Worthing, while Buck lifted anxious eyes.

"Show Jess in here, mother," Worthing added on a quick impulse. "You won't mind sitting alone a little longer."

He walked over to his mother and placed a hand upon her arm. Mrs. Worthing glanced at Buck. She had not needed the hint. She did not resent it. Her confidence in her son was implicit.

"Now, Buck," said Worthing, "be reasonable. This is too serious a matter for any of us to stand upon quibbles. It may not be life or death, but it is the happiness of many. Come in!" he called.

The door opened, and Jess Kilrain come into the room, stopping abruptly as her glance fell and rested upon Buck Brannon.

Worthing, going forward, closed the door behind her.

Papers Don't Develop Crime.

From the New York Sun.

The oft repeated charge that the reporting of crimes in newspapers tend to [illegible] criminality, or anti-social conduct, as experts prefer to say nowadays, is [illegible] and disposed of effectively by Dr. William Healy, director of the Psychopathic Institute of the juvenile court of Chicago, in his book, just published. The Individual Delinquent," he says plainly that [illegible] one single case has he been able to trace criminality to the reading of newspapers.

The common assumptions on the subject have only a surface plausibility. Crime, after all, is only a small element in the news. The daily paper is far from arousing attention to it, as a rule it [illegible] it with a diversity of interests which tend to minimize its influence. Whenever crime is displayed, the glamour is all taken away. The criminal invariably gets the worst of it in the newspaper story. He is a hunted wretch or a miserable prisoner. He is shown haggard and hopeless. His sufferings are recounted.

Anyway, the majority of criminal careers are begun before the newspaper reading age is reached. Actual inquiry shows that young offenders hardly ever notice anything in newspapers except comic pictures. They show no interest in newspaper reports of crime, and no trace of hero worship or romantic sentiment attached to criminality was found to exist from newspaper articles. In a word, the budding criminal is not influenced by anything in the papers, and to those of older growth the newspaper treatment of the topic must be sobering and admonitory. The only direct bad effects from newspaper reading are found in occasional [illegible] anced minds, and in such cases he [illegible] is more likely to be false self-accusation of some crime that is attracting public attention than any attempt to emulate it.

Far different is the influence of the cheap crime story on the young generation. Its pernicious influence, Dr. Healy says, can be proved in numerous cases. Along with morbid curiosity of sorts, bad literature is a fertile source of criminal inspiration. The [illegible] effect from the newspaper is [illegible] to the different treatment. Unlike the "dreadful" the crime's the thing to the newspaper the pursuit of the [illegible] story the criminal is the dominant and successful hero in the newspaper, especially is the downcast victim of his own wickedness.

Telephone Manners.

From the Washington Star.

If a person rings the front door bell he is not supposed to ask, Who are you? of the one who answers the summons. Yet that is practically what is done when a telephone caller greets the respondent "Hello" with "Who is this?" There are many little annoyances in telephone usage, but this is perhaps one of the most provoking. To be called to the phone and then asked to establish identity is calculated to unbalance the equanimity especially of a busy person.

Telephone practice is, after all, largely a matter of manners, notwithstanding the separation in distance of the persons who are talking. Probably the one who asks "Who is this?" on calling another is mentally off guard, momentarily on hearing a voice other than that which is expected, but even so the effect on the person who is called is unfortunate.

Telephone users should always bear in mind the fact that it is best to establish their own identity first of all when the connection is made, so as to leave no question as to who is speaking from the initiating end.

Silence.

I have known the silence of the stars and of the sea,
And the silence of the city when it pauses,
And the silence of a man and a maid.
And the silence for which music alone finds the word,
And the silence of the woods before the winds of spring begin
And the silence of the sick
When their eyes roam about the room.
And I ask: For the depths
Of what use is language?
A beast of the field moans a few times
When death takes its young
And we are voiceless in the presence of realities—
We cannot speak.

* * * * * * *

And there is the silence of the dead.
If we who are in life cannot speak
Of profound experiences,
Why do you marvel that the dead
Do not tell you of death?
Their silence shall be interpreted
As we approach them.

Liquor Regulation in Sweden.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

It is interesting to note that the policy of restricting the sale of alcohol which has been adopted so drastically in Russia and France, and less drastically, but still decisively, in the United Kingdom, is now to be adopted in Sweden. The Swedish government has ordered that no alcoholic drinks be served in restaurants before noon, and between then and 3 o'clock only with meals. There is still a great deal to be done, but progress during the last 18 months has been remarkable indeed.

Got Him Guessing.

BRITISH TROOPS QUELL RIOTERS IN IRELAND'S CAPITAL

British troops in Dublin during a former disturbance; James Larkin.

British troops have brought armed peace to Dublin, but rebellion still smoulders in the Irish metropolis. One of the prominent figures in the movement to put an end to British rule in Ireland is James Larkin, who is probably the best known strike leader in Great Britain.

SHIP'S FIGUREHEADS ARE PASSING

By David A Wasson in the Outlook

This utilitarian age has discarded all ship fittings not absolutely necessary, among them the storied figurehead, a bit of nautical furniture which had outlived every other

At the present time there are only three trans-Atlantic steamships besides the Imperator that carry figureheads into New York—all old and foreign built The American liners Philadelphia and New York wear the presentments of two actresses popular when the ships were built The Philadelphia's [illegible] Mary Anderson draped in flowing robe that conform to the sweep of the [illegible] New York's [illegible] she barely missed [illegible] Hamburg-American [illegible] the New York off Nantucket [illegible] The British built Oceanic recently sold to New York owners is adorned with a figurehead of Aphrodite

Today among the world's sailing vessels a few foreign ships and barks proudly wear the ancient carving but [illegible] let head a knee or bracket [illegible] the bowsprit, has superseded the greater part of them Possibly a little conventional scrollwork framing the order name relieves the bleakness of some trim fore and afters but for [illegible] is nothing whatever The Maine three master Mary B Wellington is said to [illegible] merchant windjammer on the Atlantic coast now wearing a genuine head of the olden time

Until recently warships have continued to be the most richly garnished vessels afloat. The grand old fighter Olympia which [illegible] at Manila has on its shaft stem a bronze Winged Victory holding aloft an eagle the goddess herself poised on a fanciful golden scroll work [illegible] abaft the hawse-pipes It was designed by Saint-Gaudens and cost $12,000 It was partly on this account as well as for its gallant record that the Olympia is one of the very few ships of our navy that are allowed to retain their figureheads

For these decorations on the fighters have lately fallen into disfavor The same order of the then secretary of the navy Mr Meyer, that turned all the active American warships gray and inconspicuous, deprived them of the golden figureheads that were wont to catch and reflect the sun's rays

French and British warships were shorn of their figure-heads in the 90s because it was found that they got in the way when torpedo nets were being rigged out They are still retained by the German warships which are noted for elaborate figureheads and by the Japanese fighting machines all of which wear the glorified chrysanthe-[illegible]

He Asked For "Troops."

From the Chicago Herald

General Funston has asked the war department for more troops for use in connection with the pursuit of Villa and his gang The war department has granted his request

It is worth noting that General Funston asked for troops He didn't ask for "Hay" men He didn't ask for raw recruits He didn't ask for legislation He didn't ask for a campaign to secure volunteers He didn't ask for statistics

He asked for troops because he has something important to do and he wants something to do it with effect [illegible] He asked for troops because a situation has arisen which requires prompt and decisive action He asked for troops because purely statistical military resources aren't sufficient to catch a single Mexican lurking in the mesquite to say nothing of a band of them

Some day when the problem may be infinitely larger than the comparatively small one presented by Villa and his gang—when the nation has for an enemy something more formidable than even a well-armed band of Mexicans there may come—there is sure to come just this same call for troops which Funston sent to Washington

And if the country hasn't troops real troops to send in reply instead of "Hay" men and other substitutes for effective soldiers so dear to the hearts of the advocates of unpreparedness the next message is certain to be one of shame humiliation and disaster

The Lonely Belgians.

Arthur Gleason in the Century Magazine

The Belgians are a race of children whose feelings have been hurt The pathos of an orphan asylum is unconscious

They are very lonely the loneliest men I have known Back of the fighting Frenchman you sense the gardens and fields of France the strong victorious national will In a year in two years having made his peace with honor he will return to a happiness richer than any that France has known in 50 years And the Englishman carries with him to the stresses of the first line an unbroken calm which he has inherited from 1,000 years of his island peace His little moment of pain and death can not trouble that consciousness of the eternal progress in which his people have been permitted to play a continuing part. For him the present turmoil is only a ripple in the vast sea of his racial history Back of the Tommy is his Devonshire village still secure His mother and his wife are waiting for him, unmolested as when he left them. But the Belgian, schooled in horror, faces a fuller horror yet when the guns of his friends are put on his bell towers and birthplace, held by the invaders.

"My father and mother are inside the enemy lines" said a Belgian officer to me as we were talking of the final victory That is the ever present thought of an army of boys whose parents are living in doomed houses back of the German trenches It is louder than the near guns the noise of the guns to come that will tear at Bruges and level the tower of St Nicholas That is what the future holds for the Belgian He is rich at the beginning of his loss

FLOCA'S CAFE IS MADE FAMOUS BY GREAT WAR

Saloniki—Floca's has become the social focus of the entente armies in the Balkans Some such rendezvous comes to be associated with almost every expeditionary war The bar of Shepheard's hotel in Cairo was the place through which everyone passed sooner or later in the time of the Sudan campaigns, the Rand club at Johannesburg fulfilled a similar function in South Africa Here the same unexpected greatness has been thrust upon Floca's so that its name will always remain in the memory of those told off to spend this tedious winter at Saloniki

Floca's in peace times was just a commonplace cafe, with no more than the modest distinction of being the best of such establishments in Saloniki. Here on an ordinary weekday were to be found a sprinkling of Levantine gentlemen drinking Turkish coffee while they discussed with fluent gesture the latest political rumors from Athens

Its fortunate proprietor who like so many others here is making a small fortune has to thank two of the most cherished allied institutions—the Englishman's afternoon tea and the French man's afternoon aperitif or appetizer From 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 8 o'clock, Floca's is more densely populated than any spot in Saloniki [illegible] ned with officers of the allied armies base officers, camp officers embarkation officers staff officers flying officers French, British, Serbian Greek such a varied collection of officers of every rank and corps that Floca's might be the animated fashion book of a military tailor of international clientele

But Floca's would hardly be a success in fashionable London Its interior is gloomy and often foggy Its entrance is beset by an importunate horde of ragged urchins. Its Greek waiters of sinister aspect, only condescend to serve when their attention is attracted by a series of sharp hand claps But in Saloniki men count themselves lucky to find a table free, and for those who have lived for months on a barren mountain side it is a shadowy and distant reproduction of the institutions of home.

PROPERTY MAN BECOMES AN ACTOR IN 25 MINUTES

From the Photoplay Magazine.

Honus Smith, of the Essanay studios, spent 25 years becoming one of the best theater property men in Chicago—or anywhere, for that matter He spent just 25 minutes becoming a finished moving picture character actor Director Haydon found himself "shy" a man to fill the important role of property man in "The Strange Case of Mary Page"—a property man in a road company who is given the leading part when the star jumps his contract and ditches the act.

He remembered to recollect that Honus Smith's grandfather and great-grandfather were actors of note, and without warning he ordered Smith, property man to become Smith, property man It was the first time in his life that Smith had attempted to act, but he got away with it so well that in the eighth episode of the play he shared honors with Henry B. Walthall and Edna Mayo. Now he's drawing a "regular" salary Such things happen—once in a while

The Infant Armormakers

From the St Paul Dispatch.

The infant industries of the United States need nursing.

For instance here is the Bethlehem Steel company making war materials and struggling through with net earnings of only $24,821,408 for the year This is a slight gain over the preceding year, it must be admitted, the slightness being a mere 260 per cent

And what do you think? The congress of the United States proposes to go into business for itself and make some of its own armor plate. Can anything more atrocious be imagined than a government which threatens by its competition to shave off such meager gains as those of the Bethlehem?

Indeed, it will menace an investment of $7,000,000 Mr Schwab says so. So does Senator Penrose. That is the reason why the Bethlehem and other armor plate manufacturers have joined to threaten the government with an increase of $200 a ton in the price of the material it will be obliged to purchase in order to carry out its five-year naval program. Such an increase, senators estimate, would put the government directly out of pocket some $24,000,000

But what of that? The people can pay for it without feeling it very much. And industry, capital, thrift, brains, must be given a chance. Mr Schwab boasts that he paid Arch Johnson, vice president of his company, $600,000 bonus above his salary and another assistant $1,000,000 as his share of last year's profits.

Our infant industries must not be disturbed Even if the United States government is slugged for $24,000,000 to protect $7,000,000 investments, to shield a 260 per cent annual gain and to reward "brains" with bonuses of $1,000,000, we insist our infant industries must be protected

NEW YORK REALLY IS CITY OF WONDERS

Richard Spillaine, in Commerce and Finance.

Every four years New York takes unto itself a city the size of Boston or St. Louis

New York is the largest Jewish city in the world It is the largest Irish city, there being 674,721 of Irish blood here. There are 733,533 Germans, 306,420 Austrians and 735,477 Russians.

Many Ills Imaginary.

A man went to a doctor the other day for a thorough physical examination He confessed that he had been jolted by the death of an acquaintance a few months before. He had begun to feel the same symptoms that the acquaintance had spoken of, and he had got to worrying until he was miserable.

"I've got to know the truth, doctor," he said. "I can't stand this suspense."

The doctor put him under a microscope, made all the tests the man had ever heard of and several that were unknown to him, and then pronounced the verdict "You're sound as a nut," he said "Any insurance company would be tickled to death to accept you as a risk. Go home and forget your worries. Your symptoms are all in your imagination." The man went out of the office feeling 20 years younger

An occasional physical examination is a fine thing for every person, not merely because it gives a chance to get at any trouble in its early stages before it becomes serious, but also because it very often relieves the mind of persons suffering from imaginary ailments.

The Grand Duke and Others.

From the Kansas City Star.

The Grand Duke Nicholas is exiled to the Caucasus and the world expects to hear nothing more from him. Then comes the news of the capture of Erzerum by the grand duke's forces—a victory that threatens to cut Turkey in two and that menaces Constantinople.

A couple of young surgeons get to practicing in a small town in Minnesota. A limited field, their friends might have said. But their work brings them fame and now Rochester has its patients from every part of the country.

A minister settles in Columbus, Ohio. His church isn't remarkable in any way. But as the years pass Washington Gladden, by virtue of his qualities, has the nation as his audience.

A young fellow goes to a small town in Kansas to print a newspaper. But his interests are wider than the town, and in a few years William Allen White and the Emporia Gazette are known throughout the country

Men of middle age remember that when they were younger the office of civil service commissioner seemed to rank next to that of president, because Theodore Roosevelt made it important. Then the police commissioner of New York began to show what an aggressive head of the police could do. Later the assistant secretary of the navy was the office of most far reaching influence in Washington. Few people know who have held any of these offices since Roosevelt left them. But wherever he went he found such opportunities for service that the position he was holding became distinguished.

After all, the man is the thing.

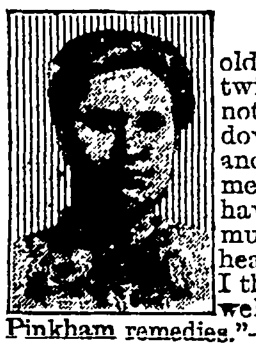
Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

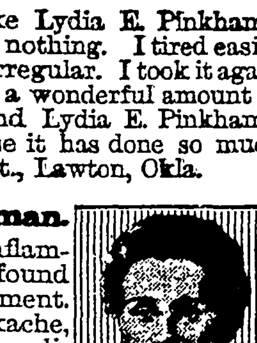


North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. Mayme Asbach, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCasland, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.



Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. Osgood, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

Loss of one or both hands, according to the National magazine, is one of the most serious afflictions that can come to an individual since it deprives him of his freedom of action and enjoyment of life, even when only one is taken, at least half of his comfort and effectiveness is gone Among many attempts to supply this loss, the latest artificial hand patented by a Chicago man, seems to possess many advantages as well as an attractive appearance and efficient mechanism.

A Famous Physician's Wonderful Discovery

After a series of careful experiments and tests at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., covering many years—Dr. Pierce, the medical director of that hospital, made announcement that he could prove that a medicine which he called "ANURIC" was the best uric acid solvent now to be had. As a remedy for those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as scalding urine, backache and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, gout, it is simply wonderful how quickly "Anuric" acts; causing the pains and stiffness rapidly to disappear.

Swollen hands, ankles, feet are due to a dropsical condition, often caused by disordered kidneys. Naturally when the kidneys are deranged the blood is filled with poisonous waste matter, which settles in the feet, ankles and wrists; or under the eyes in bag-like formations.

It is just as necessary to keep the kidneys acting properly as to keep the bowels active.

The very best possible way to take care of yourself is to take a glass of hot water before meals and an "Anuric" tablet. In this way it is readily dissolved with the food, picked up by the blood and finally reaches the kidneys, where it has a tonic effect in rebuilding those organs.

Step into the drug store and ask for a 50-cent package of "Anuric," or send Dr. Pierce 10c for trial pckg. "Anuric"—many times more potent than lithia, eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar A short trial will convince you.—Adv

Fathers should realize that the acre corn contest is a contest calling for the co-operation of "father and the boy," say the agricultural extension men at Ames. Whether a boy can enter the contest is really a matter of whether the father is interested enough to donate or rent him an acre of land that he can plant and cultivate.

This tale of a wolf and an Overland comes from sunny Texas. It happened in this fashion Mr and Mrs W J Newcomb, with a party of friends were [illegible] six miles from [illegible] red wolf running across the pasture. Mr Newcomb was driving the car and gave chase The wolf had a good start when discovered but Mr Newcomb and his Overland gained on him steadily After a run of about two miles across the prairie he came within shooting distance and letting go of his wheel took a shotgun from Mrs. Newcomb's hand and opened fire, bringing down the animal on the third shot The body of the wolf was placed on the running board and was brought to Sealy It is one of the largest wolves ever killed in that district He weighed 45 pounds and was a beautiful specimen of his kind

In the spring of the year, when land is being prepared for planting, there are frequent complaints from farmers that the drainage systems which they constructed a year or more before are not improving the land as they had expected. Perhaps the soil is just as wet as it was before installing drainage but is this a valid reason for condemning drainage? To answer this question correctly, other questions must first be answered Were the drainage improvements in the first place properly designed and constructrd? If the answer to this question is affirmative, may not some defective condition have developed in the system since construction? Have the ditches been kept open and clean or have they been permitted to cave in and deteriorate generally? Have the outlets to the tile drains been allowed to close during the winter? Have the inlets and catch basins been permitted to become choked with leaves and other dry vegetable matter of the previous season? If these conditions exist, does not the failure of the system to give the desired results lie with the farmer rather than the system?

In the spring, when the root system of the young plant is developing, it is essential that the level of the ground water be maintained at such a depth as always to permit free growth of the roots downward as well as laterally. The control of the water level is the purpose of any drainage improvement The largest returns on money invested in such improvements can be obtained only when they accomplish their real purpose

Don't Neglect Home Markets

Small town creameries which neglect the home market as an outlet for their butter and sell only to outside towns are missing a great opportunity maintains M. Mortensen, head of the dairy department at Iowa State college who says that several such Iowa creameries are doing just that thing.

Mr. Mortensen points out the advantages of selling to the home market The home market is an economical market, for butter sold at home will net a good better returns than if sold in other markets. Furthermore, the the shrinkage when dealing with a home market is negligible.

POULTRY

Health of Poultry

Grit, charcoal and grain food in addition to the regular grains will be found necessary to keep the flock in the best condition. The best poultry breeders know that the fowl on the range will probably obtain plenty of grit but they keep it before the fowls at all times as it is not expensive and they wish to be sure that every hen receives the proper amount to keep her strong and well.

Clean out the poultry house at least once a week. We have found, says a writer, that scattering a few shovelfuls of garden soil under the roosts is a first class method of managing the manure. The dropping boards are then easy to clean and the soil according to experiment station reports will fix the nitrogen in the manure and make it more valuable for spreading back on the garden. A frequent cleaning of the house results in a healthier flock as birds cannot prosper and roost in an atmosphere saturated with devitalizing gases.

The hay chaff from the barn floor should be dumped into the poultry house. The hens will like it and if you dump a few bushels on the poultry house floor in the evening you will find them scattering and singing the next morning and working up the kind of appetite which means a good feeder and a good producer.

Plan to improve your poultry plant whenever possible and you will note a general improvement in the health and appearance of your fowls The improvements may consist of larger ranges, cleaner houses, stronger and more vigorous males, plenty of dusting places and sufficient shade All of these improvements will make you a real poultry farmer and the health of your flock will in direct proportion increase your receipts from both eggs and stock.

To keep fowls healthy never feed them so-called egg foods which are only patent condiments suitable to inflame the organs and reduce the real value of the bird. Some of them may seem to stimulate the hens for a while but the stimulation is unnatural and of very temporary value Pepper is not good for poultry and also may inflame the organs. The poultry breeders who are successful stick to the balanced rations of good substantial foodstuffs and do not experiment with "patent medicines."

The open front poultry house seems like the most practical method of housing poultry that has been devised. It insures a plentiful supply of fresh air for the birds and prevents draughts. I have never seen an open front house that seemed damp if it was properly cleaned and the houses with glass windows nearly always seem damp and close. The open front house costs less money and is the only sure way of keeping the flock

TO ALL VOTERS

On the 5th day of June you will indicate by your votes your preferences for the office of Supervisor of the Third District.

As you all know, I am a candidate for that office, and I earnestly solicit your active support, even if I have not had the pleasure of personally soliciting it.

And while the whole country is discussing the subject of preparedness against war, let us of this community go a little farther and discuss the matter of prepareness for a better and more prosperous community in general.

As we love our country, so should we love the place we call home, and our friends, and our neighbors, and our people generally.

I am for preparedness in the way of law enforcement, in commercial expansion, in agriculture and intellectual development, and the judicious expenditure of county funds. I am for my country always, but I AM FOR MY HOME AND MY HOME COMMUNITY.

May I hope that I will measure up to your expectations on election day, and that you will favor me with your support?

WHY NOT TRY SOME SOY BEANS

It's not too late yet to plant soy beans. They can be sown as late as June 1, some early maturing varieties as late as June 15, and still mature a crop of hay this season.

Soy beans are recommended by the farm crops department at Iowa State College as a desirable crop on every farm. They can be fed to all live stock, are well adapted to Iowa conditions, are excellent soil improvers and are particularly advised where clover or alfalfa fails.

A good corn soil prepared as for corn is best. Sow at rate of three pecks an acre with a grain drill, stopping every other cup. This leaves rows 12 to 16 inches apart. Seeded thus, they can be cultivated a few times by harrowing accross rows before plants are 8 in. high. Do this when in the middle of the day.

Another method, recommended for weedy land, is to sow beans 1 to 2 in. apart in the row with a corn planter, either spacing rows 3 ft. apart or straddling the first planting, which doubles the number of rows. By this method they can be cultivated thruout season with a 2 horse cultivator.

Medium early varieties, as Medium Green, Medium Early Yellow, Guelph and Roosevelt, have by test been proven best for Iowa. Pekin and Wilson are good, but late.

Harvest for hay when pods are well formed. If permitted to ripen, the stems get coarse, many leaves shatter and much seed is lost in handling. Yields of approximately 2 tons per acre can be expected under average conditions.

RAISE SEED—DON'T BUY

"Stake off a seed plot now."

A farm seed plot is the safest solution to good seed assurance next year, especially for small grains, says the farm crops department at Iowa State college.

To get pure oat seed, stake off a small section of the field when the crop starts to head out. Locate in a place free from weeds, where the crop is vigorous, but not rank. Go thru the plot a few times while crop is in head and before it starts to ripen and pull out every plant of barley. If the oat is an early variety, pull out every plant of late oats. Cut and thresh this section separately and fan the seed thoroly. This gives pure seed for a good sized field next year. The second year there will be as much pure seed as is needed.

Barley fields can be treated in the same way. Stake a plot and remove all two-row barley from the field of the six-row variety. Bearded and beardless wheat can be separated similarly. If the crop is badly mixed, it it is best to gather a few sheaves of heads typical of variety and hand thresh them to insure pure seed.

"7 Cairn Brothers" COMING

The scenes of "In Oklohoma" are laid in the far west where, according to early history, strange people coming from everywhere, joined forces, and soon lost their names, there they struggled, laughed, worked and loved, of one thing only were they certain—they lived.

A powerful play with a strong cast at the Big Tent Theatre, Klemme, Tuesday, June 13.

VOTE FOR RULE

The formal announcement of A. L. Rule of Mason City, as a republican candidate for state senator from the 43rd senatorial district, composed of Cerro Gordo, Franklin and Hancock counties, will be found in this paper It is Cerro Gordo county's turn to furnish the candidate and the writer is more than pleased to have an opportunity to vote for Mr. Rule who we know to be fitted in every way for the place. If elected he will fill the position with credit to himself and make a record that will please the people of the district. He is level headed conservative and clean. We notice by last Thursday's Register and Leader that Dr. Steinhart of Mason City, has also filed nomination papers as a republican candidate for state senator. The doctor was a "progressive candidate four years ago at the general election against Senator T. J B. Robinson and received 800 votes in the district as against Mr. Robinson's 5,500. Dr. Stinehart is noted for being a "wobbler" politically and his candidacy on any old ticket is considered a huge joke by the voters of his home county. Mr. Rule is entitled to and will receive the republican nomination for senator at the June primary.—Franklin County Recorder.

Married Tuesday, May 30

The marriage of Dr. Lucy Bowman of this city and Dr. R. J. Garner of Belmond took place Tuesday at noon, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. S. Koster in Vincent. The affair was a quiet one and only the immediate relatives were present. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dale of the First Methodist church of Vincent. The bride wore a pretty gown of white Net. Dr. and Mrs. Garner will make their home in Ft. Dodge at 416 N. 10th St. They will both continue in the practise of Chiropractic under the name of Garner & Garner.—Fort Dodge Messenger.

The above explains the reason why Dr. Garner failed in his appearance here this week. He has made a number of friends during his visits to our little city who extend their hearty congratulations. He has decided to locate at Fort Dodge and will practice his profession there with his wife who also is a chiropractor. His practice here and at Belmond will be looked after by Mr. Hawkins of Indianapolis. He is a pleasant gentleman to meet and we beleive will enjoy a lucrative practice.

California has made a law requiring headlights to be permanently dimmed on state or public highways, and prescribes that the center rays must not strike the ground farther than 75 feet in front of the automobile A correspondent of that state tells how he has arranged his lights, as follows. The lower part of the headlight is covered with "lamp frosting" up to the level of the center of the electric globe, and this cuts out the rays that shine upward, and only permits the free passage of the downward directed rays from the upper half of the reflector The lamp must be properly focussed, and the lamp itself is tilted slightly downward if necessary This arrangement gives the full power of the light on the road, but does not dazzzle approaching drivers. This method of dimming is directly contrary to the usual practice, in which the upper half of the lamp glass is frosted, but it obviates excessive tilting of the lamp, and the results are stated to be superior

Basing his estimate on the death rates of the union army in the civil war, the German army in the Franco-Prussian war, the British army in the Anglo-Boer war, and the Japanese army in the Russo-Japanese war, Edward Bunnell Phelps, editor of the American Underwriter says that the loss by death in the present war will be 540 000 if the average number of men engaged during the year amounts to 6,000,000, which is something more than the total annual death rate for the entire adult male population of the United States But this does not prove that the life of a soldier is much more certain than that of a civilian under certain conditions Thus Mr Phelps finds from the American experience table of mortality that a soldier's chances of living through a year of the war are greater than those of a civilian for living from the age of 25 to the age of 26 from 36 to 41 from 35 to 45 from 40 to 44, from 49 to 52, from 50 to 56 from 55 to 60, or from 60 to 63 years

Some years ago the United States bureau of plant industry began an investigation of the problem of utilizing the waste and surplus products of American farms as a source for the manufacture of denatured alcohol. Dr. Edward Kremers, of the University of Wisconsin was sent abroad as a special agent to study the development of this product especially in Germany, and his report has just been published as Bulletin 182 of the United States department of agriculture German agriculturists have developed a great deal of interest in the growing industrial use of farm products, and are becoming [illegible]

The size of a seed as a factor in plant production is the subject of a report by M. L. There is, on the whole a decided advantage in using large and heavy seed Thus sweet peas from such seed were earlier in blooming bore more and finer blossoms and were generally more thrifty

IOWA STATE NEWS.

SAID BEER SOLD OVER BARS AT DAVENPORT

Davenport, Ia., May 27.—Following reports that beer is being retailed by over a dozen of the old saloons that were supposed to have gone out of business the first of the year, County Attorney Henry Jebens has sent out letters of warning to over a score of supposed soft drink shops and restaurants, warning them that the first formal complaint against them will be followed by injunction proceedings.

So quietly has the beer trade been carried on that few persons outside a small select trade knew of it.

Some of the former saloonkeepers believe that they will be allowed to go back to the old trade soon, as the word has been passed around that "it is all fixed" up and nothing is to be said about the traffic if it is on the quiet. The county attorney says these men have a big surprise coming if they persist in their idea. He says prosecution will be commenced at the first formal complaint.

One of the former saloonkeepers is said to have thrown down the bars of secrecy and to have commenced serving as in the old days before Iowa went dry With a county election coming on the traffic promises to assume serious proportions

TECHNICAL TROUBLES WITH FORT DODGE BOND ISSUES

Fort Dodge, Ia. May 27.—Two bond issues amounting to $170 000 in all, recently voted in Fort Dodge are not working out smoothly Because of a technical error made by the school board in advertising the school bonds for three instead of four weeks, the election has been declared invalid and plans are being made to hold another election soon under the direction of the George M. Beightol company, of Davenport, whose bid of $1.841 for the $70,000 bonds gives them the privilege of supervision. A petition asking for the election is already being circulated. This coming election will be the third held within a year for the object of erecting new schools in the city.

It has also developed that the $100,000 bonds voted for the building of a power dam on the upper Des Moines above Fort Dodge, will not suffice for the project, as the lowest bids for machinery and construction total $108,000. The present high price of steel and construction materials is given as the reason The city commissioners and the consulting engineers who originally made the specifications, are consulting with the various companies which entered bids and are trying to find a way of reducing the cost of the dam

Other Relatives Contend Deed Given George Brett By His Father Was In Trust.

Emmetsburg, Ia., May 27.—Attorney E. A. Morling of Emmetsburg has arrived home from Los Angeles, Cal., where he and Attorney T. G. McDermott of Mason City spent seven weeks taking depositions and securing evidence for the trial of a case against George Brett, former mayor of Mason City for the recovery of title to property valued at $1,000,000.

The holdings consist of 5,000 acres of valuable farm lands in Michigan, Wisconsin, California and other securities valued at $250,000.

Mr. Brett was for 40 years manager of the estate of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Brett, formerly of Cerro Gordo county, who have been living at Los Angeles during the past eight years.

Several years ago the father, who is now 92 years old, and the mother, who is 89 years old, gave their son, George who was managing their affairs, a deed to their property. A brother, A H. Brett, other relatives and the parents now claim the deed was merely given in trust to George so that the work of handling the properties might be made easier for him. It now turns out that the instrument given was a warranty deed.

CEDAR RAPIDS OFFICIALS VERY MUCH RESTRAINED

Cedar Rapids, Ia., May 27.—The city council has been enjoined again.

Monday it was restrained by F H. Shaver and his friends from "backing up."

Tuesday it was restrained by Charley Huston and his friends from going ahead.

To make it complete John Fuchs sought to get out a third injunction restraining the city council from standing still and then the poor rabbits would have to get off the earth.

The main allegations of the petition filed in the district court by Mr Huston, and his friends are that the members of the city council exceeded their authority in passing the resolution approving the action of the river front improvement commission.

It is averred that the proposed improvements will mar the beauty of the concrete bridges and create serious flood dangers.

It is alleged that there has been discrimination shown between property owners.

SAYS HAIL CONCERNS WORK EXTRAVAGANTLY

Iowa Insurance Commissioner Cites Comparison With Other Mutuals.

Des Moines, Ia., May 25.—Many mutual hail insurance associations of Iowa are scored by Emory H. English, state insurance commissioner, in his annual report issued yesterday, for gross extravagance, collection of excess assessments, and payment of excessive salaries to officers.

Eliminating the losses, the commissioner declares that the expense of the hail insurance associations is seven times greater than the expense of the mutual fire associations of this state, and that the salaries are five times greater. The expense of operating the hail associations exceeds the protection furnished, he says, and only a few of the mutual hail associations are operated economically.

To support the statement that many of the hail associations are grossly extravagant, the state commissioner presented the following table in which the two classes of associations are almost identical in their operation:

Items of cost per $1,000 of insurance written for five years, January 1, 1910, to December 31, 1914

	State mutual fire ass'ns.	State mutual hail ass'ns.
Commissions and field expense	$1.59	$13.32
Salaries of officers and clerks	1.03	5.35
Other expenses	.46	2.20
Retained for future losses and expenses	.35	2.06
Net cost per $1,000 of insurance	3.43	23.11
Losses paid	3.06	14.20
Gross cost per $1,000 of insurance	7.09	37.31

LANSING NAILS TALK OF HIS RESIGNATION

Returns to Work After Illness —Says Story Is Not True.

Washington, May 27—Secretary Lansing attended the cabinet meeting today, after having been confined to his home by an attack of indigestion for nearly a week. The secretary said he had been able to do little work during his illness, the effects of which he still showed when he arrived at the White House. The state department made this statement regarding published reports that Secretary Lansing was contemplating resigning from the cabinet because of differences with President Wilson.

This story is part of a propaganda, the deliberate purpose of which is to create an appearance of dissension in the government which does not exist. It was sent to Berlin by wireless in press dispatches. It was picked up in transit in an allied country and subsequently published here. In that way the state department became cognizant of the story and instructions were sent to Berlin to watch out for it.

Apparently the persons responsible found out we were prepared for the story, because it never [illegible] published in Germany. The directors of this propaganda have now taken advantage of Secretary Lansing's illness to put out the story again.

CATHOLIC CLERGYMEN DENY MAYOR MITCHEL CHARGES

New York, May 26—Roman Catholic clergymen whose telephone wires were tapped during the investigation of charitable institutions took the witness stand today before the executive committee headed by State Senator George F Thompson and flatly denied the charges of Mayor Mitchel that they were involved in a conspiracy to discredit the city administration through attacks upon the department of charities They made the counter allegation that the mayor played a prominent part in a conspiracy designed to discredit the administration of Catholic orphanages The priests stated that after discovering their telephones had been tapped they deliberately planned to trap the mayor by prearranged conversations and that they were successful in their purpose

Faulty Reports.

While admitting certain parts of the overheard conversations which were read to the committee yesterday by Mayor Mitchel the witnesses protested that his account of these talks was in the main inaccurate They contended that the language used much of which was ungrammatical was not theirs

Whatever was said in conversations about spiriting witnesses out of the city to prevent them from appearing before the charities investigating committee, was deliberately planned to delude the mayor and his assistants with the end in view of proving that their telephones had been tapped, they declared The clergymen contended that all they sought for the institutions in which they were interested was "a square deal," which had not been given them.

"Farm Out" Children.

The witnesses who appeared yesterday were Monsignor John J Dunn, Monsignor Luke J Evers, the Rev William B. Farrell and the Rev Joseph P Dineen

In reply to a question early in the examination, Monsignor Dunn arraigned what he called "the charity trust."

"It's one and only aim," he declared, "is the secularizing of all institutions."

The witness declared that the charities department had a plan to "farm out" to 22,000 families the 22,000 children who were in institutions in this city

"We want religious influence surrounding our children Monsignor Dunn said and the Catholic church never will permit its children to be taken away from it

PEACE LEAGUE IN MEET, HEARS TAFT

About 2,000 Persons Present at Gathering—Would Compel Submission of All Disputes.

Washington, D. C., May 27.—American advocates of an international federation to curtail war after the present European struggle, met here today for the first assembly of the new league to enforce peace William H. Taft, president of the league, and Newton D Baker, secretary of war, were on the day's program, and President Wilson's address at the closing session tomorrow night will be a significant utterance it is thought About 2,000 persons, including presidents of universities, railroads, commercial, labor and farm organizations attended the meeting Speakers only referred incidentally to methods of ending the present war, since the league's program includes only the minimizing of future conflicts over questions which might be adjudicated by an international court. All urged that the United States become a party to the suggested agreement. They pointed out that war might not be abolished, but it would be curtailed for the international league would allow combat only if the courts' decree were not accepted by any nation.

Edward A. Feline, Boston merchant, declared European nations at the end of the present war would be favorable to the league to enforce peace.

Other speakers on today's program were Oscar S Straus, New York, member of The Hague court; Hamilton Holt, of New York, editor of the Independent; Prof George Grafton Wilson, of Harvard; Talcott Williams, director of Columbia University School of Journalism; John Bates Clark, of New York, director of a department in the Carnegie endowment for international peace;; Samuel Gompers president of the American Federation of Labor, and Oliver Wilson, president of the national grange.

Mr Taft's address was closely confined to the technical legal questions involved in joinder by the United States in such an international tribunal. He denied that such action would curtail the power and authority of either the president or congress by limiting the constitutional discretion of the latter body to declare war.

Mr Taft explained that the league's platform proposes compulsory submission to the world court of all international disputes not settled by diplomatic negotiaion

The object of the League to Enforce Peace is not to urge President Wilson to take steps to stop the present war, former President Taft, president of the league declared.

"We are not here," said Taft, "to urge the present administration to take steps to stop the present war. Not that we are not hopeful that such steps may be taken, but we believe that a definite purpose, a purpose with limitations for an association like this, is much more likely to be realized than a general platform for the benefit of humanity."

The league hoped, Mr. Taft said, for a world agreement on a method to make war less probable.

NORWAY ADOPTS PLAN TO AID MAIL SERVICE

Will Enter Kirkwall Voluntarily For Inspection, and Save Time.

Christiania, Thursday, May 25. (via London,) May 27.—The Norwegian American line has decided to have all its steamships which sail between America and Norway enter Kirkwall voluntarily for inspection of their mails in order to avoid complications arising from attempts to evade the British authorities by taking the more northerly course.

The company has purchased a tramp steamer of 1,800 tons to bring American coal to Norway for its vessels, so that they will be less dependent on English bunkers.

The steamer Bergensfjord which sailed from New York May 13 for Bergen has arrived safely by way of Kirkwall, where all its mail was removed and detained by the British authorities

NATION INDORSES MILITARY PLANS

Referendum Among Commercial Organizations Shows Practically No Opposition to Program.

Washington, May 27.—Advanced preparedness steps, including universal military training, a building program that would restore the nation to second place among the world's naval powers, and an army increase that would meet the recommendations of the general staff, have been indorsed by overwhelming majorities in a referendum just completed among commercial organizations throughout the country holding membership in the chamber of commerce of the United States

The referendum, which officials of the chamber declared last night had furnished the first authoritative index to preparedness sentiment among business men, brought out the largest vote yet recorded in the series of canvasses made by the organization of public questions. Member bodies in 43 states and in Alaska, the Philippines and Hawaii, participated. On the broad question of general preparedness, 970 organizations voted favorably and only eight negatively. The vote for universal military training was 889 to 56. The navy increases proposed in the query submitted were indorsed, 952 to 10, and the army increase, 946 to 21.

Create a Council.

A proposal to create a council of national defense to aid in developing the army and navy along the lines of a continuous policy and to act in an advisory capacity with the president and congress, was indorsed, 912 to 46. A correlative proposal for a staff of industrial mobilization, to aid the defense council by insuring effective availability of the nation's economic resources, was given 925 favorable votes, to 47 against it.

Creation of a general staff of the navy was indorsed, 946 to 19, while 960 votes were recorded in favor of additional officers of the regular army and an officers' reserve corps, and only nine against, by a vote of 935 to 29 the members approved a proposal for an adequate munitions reserve. Under another plan, indorsed 940 to 26, the purchase of munitions in war time would be fixed by a prearranged agreement between manufacturers and the government.

The referendum was based on the recommendations of a special committee, of which Bascom Little, of Cleveland, is chairman. In announcing the result last night, officials of the chamber said they would consider themselves bound by it to work for a national defense system framed along the lines indicated.

Baton Rouge, La.—Adjutant General McNeese and A. D. Stewart, a prominent New Orleans hotel man, each paid a $150 fine in city court yesterday for their prearranged fist fight on the capitol lawn Wednesday, which they designated as "an affair of honor." Judge Odom, in imposing the fines, said: "Personally, I approve of this method of settling a difficulty between gentlemen, but it is against the law and I will have to fine you."

Chicago—There will be fewer delegates' seats contested in the republican national convention, which meets in the coliseum June 7, than in any national convention of the party in 20 years. Only 53 contests have been filed with Secretary Reynolds, of the republican national committee.

WAITE, ON STAND, TELLS HIS STORY TO AVOID CHAIR

New York Dentist, Accused of Murdering His Wealthy Fatherinlaw, Offers Insanity Plea.

WAS THIEF IN BOYHOOD

Stole From School Companions, Was Cruel to Animals and Had Made Plans For Wholesale Murder.

New York, May 27—Could a sane man commit the series of crimes confessed by Arthur Warren Waite. This question confronted the jury today in the Peck murder case. The young witness left the witness stand last night after five hours and 45 minutes crowded with horrors unparalleled in the history of New York criminal trials. Every detail of his story was noted by the alienist engaged by the defense for use in framing the hypothetical question they will be called to answer before Waite's attorneys ask the jury to decide whether he was mentally responsible when he killed his fatherinlaw, John W. Peck.

Waite's testimony left the prosecution's attorneys today nothing more to do toward proving that he committed murder Their problem was to show that a monster of crime such as the defendant confessed himself might, have been mentally normal and therefore a fit subject for the electric chair.

Counsel for the defense said today they had few if any more questions to ask their client. It was expected that the alienists would take the stand soon after the state finished cross examination of the defendant.

Waite told of a long career of crime. He described minutely how he gave his victims arsenic, powdered glass, chloroform, disease germs and over doses of medicine, how he burned fly paper and gave the residue which he had read contained arsenic to Mr. Peck, how he generated chlorine gas in the fatherinlaw's room to make his throat more sensitive to the germ cultures, how he dampened the sheets in his bed and drove him in a swift automobile with open windows and raised the windows of his room in mid winter in an unsuccessful effort to give him pneumonia.

NAVY OFFICER KILLED IN ELECTRIC STATION

Night Watchman Says It Was Suicide—Claimed to Be Inspector.

Sag Harbor, R. I., May 26.—Lieut. Clarence Alvin Richards, commander of the United States destroyer Fanning, was killed by an electric shock in the station of the Sag Harbor Light & Power company here today. Harry D. Christian, night watchman at the station, said it appeared to him that the lieutenant deliberately committed suicide by taking hold of two heavily charged wires

The Fanning was one of a fleet of war vessels which has been maneuvering in Gardiner's bay. The vessels were under orders to leave for Newport at 3 a. m. Why Lieutenant Richards was ashore after the sailing orders were issued is unknown.

Christian said the lieutenant came to the power station two hours before the fleet was to sail and said he was a government inspector. He pushed Christian aside and, walking into the station, picked up two wires, receiving the shock which killed nim

Lieutenant Richards was appointed to the navy from Kansas and was 34 years old.

Negotiations for the exportation of the drug from Germany were conducted through the state department and Emperor William is reported to have issued a special order directing the shipment.

"The Woman in the Case."

From Life

Jack Borroughs's dog broke from him and made a sudden dive down the first opening. The usual clear whistle made no impression. "Jim" was off. Jack quickly followed, and to his relief saw a big Irishman patting "Jim's" head; "Jim", with unmistakable signs of delight, jumping up and down and rubbing against the man.

That started the strange friendship between Jack Borroughs, lawyer, sportsman, and Dennis O'Sullivan.

Dennis lived in the last house on "Grasshopper Hill." It was a little less ramshackle, a little more independent looking than the rest of the row that faced on a small bluff above the railroad tracks, and its garden bloomed like a rose. Dennis himself was large, burly, rather red faced but with the twinkling blue eyes and the genial courtesy of the true son of Erin.

Later Dennis brought out to the almost palatial suburban home of Jack Burroughs rare bulbs and old fashioned flowers, Jack got Dennis to help him in making his own garden beautiful.

As the war dragged its fearful way along they, strange to say, never even mentioned it, until one day in June suddenly Jack said "Dennis, I have written to a cousin in England to know if it's possible for me to get a commission in the English army."

Dennis looked up from the border he was working and demanded

"For why and I should like to know?"

"Well, Dennis, you see my great grandfather was an Irish patriot, and came over here during Emmet's rebellion, but now Ireland needs me, and I'm going"

"From what part of the ould country was your grandfather?"

"Oh, from near Lough Neagh"

"Are ye maning County Antrim, Misther Burroughs?"

"Sure, Dennis"

"Then I'm yer boy, and will go with ye"

Jack was rather startled, but on second thought he decided to take the risk

"Dennis, will you sign the pledge if I take you"

Dennis's blue eyes twinkled, and with a comical smile he lifted his cap from his fiery head and said, "Shure, yer honour"

Both gardens bloomed gaily in the June sunshine, both men talked and worked and planned in secret for their swift going At last the letter came.

Jack, as gay as a boy went first to Dennis "Come out to the house tonight, Dennis and we will make our final arrangement"

"Ye can count on me, and I will be that grateful to ye for the whole o' me life"

With his letter held high, Jack with "Jim" at his heels, gaily waved it to a sweet girl that he caught a glimpse of on a neighboring porch

"Can I come in, Eleanor?" he called

The blue eyes gave him welcome He sat on the lower step and, leaning against the post looked up at the girl

"Eleanor, I am off to the war!"

The smile froze on the sweet lips the slender strong hand clenched but the girls voice was quiet as she answered

"I fully understand, Jack"

Then he carefully explained how his cousins in England, with the same strain of Irish blood in their veins were fighting—nay, some dying on the battlefields in France, and called come to him and he must go

He stood tall and straight his gray eyes flashing those eyes she so loved—his head thrown back Ah! The girl felt he would lead his men even into death He gave his warm, merry smile, surely she would understand

"Sit down, Jack, dear Yes, I understand," she smiled into those gray eyes, but you do not understand No wait, please—you are an American Jack, first, last and all the time, and now soon, only too soon, your country might need all such men as you. You cannot desert your country now! You cannot, cannot, Jack, dear!"

And Jack understood.

How to tell Dennis, how to break the news to him what was he to say?

As later he saw the big man walking slowly up the path Dennis touched his cap to Jack.

"Will ye pardon me pipe, Misther Burroughs, being that low in me mind I cannot spake without it?"

Jack smiled

"I am a bit low meself, Dennis"

"Well, I had best out with it like a man, Misther Burroughs I went to spake to me Nora, and she said, 'Dennis O'Sullivan, have ye lost the little bits o' wits ye be blessed with? Not one foot do ye stir from your own country. Did ye not become me an American citizen this five years back?' And shure, Misther Burroughs, 'twas true the word she spake!'"

And Ingenious

Bing—"I understand that Shmelts is lazy"

Biff—"Lazy! You bet! Why, when he spanks his child he lays a carpet over the kid, so that he can do two jobs at once!"

A Powerful Bird

"No," said Mrs. Viddles, authoritatively, "the turkey is not appropriate for Christmas. The turkey is the Thanksgiving bird. At Christmas time the goose or young pig is the proper thing."

"I would consider the matter very carefully before I invested in a goose," observed Viddles. "Whenever I feel that I would like to invest in a goose I remember the experience of poor, dear, old Mutsky two years ago.

"A goose my dear, is mostly feathers. Mrs. Mutsky reminded Mutsky of that fact when he first proposed goose for the Christmas dinner. He wouldn't listen to her. He made up his mind to have one, and he did. He bargained with a farmer to bring it in alive as he said he would pick the feathers off it himself.

"Poor, dear, old Mutsky allowed himself lots of time, but not time enough. He told me afterward that there were nine barrels of feathers on that goose They were light and airy feathers and as soon as they were plucked they soared in the air. People in the neighborhood thought it was snowing But there were feathers still left on the goose after old Mutsky had worked hard harvesting them for eight hours

"He finally gave up and sent the piece de resistance into the kitchen with plenty of feathers still ungarnered He had an awful backache.

"And that wasn't all. When the goose was brought onto the table there wasn't a knife on the place that could scratch the hide of it. So Mutsky gathered up all the knives and took them down into the basement, got out his tools and proceeded to sharpon them before making another attack.

"It so happened that Mutsky had had trouble with his neighbor the day before on account of their different opinions about the war——"

"There wasn't any war two years ago Christmas!" snickered Mrs. Viddles

"Well-er-I allude to the Mexican war," explained Viddles "As I was saying they had a misunderstanding or two and when the neighbors happened to glance thru Mutsky's basement window saw him sharpening all those knives so intently, he thought there was about to be an uprising or a massacre Christmas day became a day of horror to that neighbor of Mutsky's

But altho Mutsky sharpened these knives to a razor like fitness, they made no more impression on the goose than water would have made on its back if it had been alive and well"

Hints.

"The magazines are full of Christmas hints" remarked the opulent woman patient

"Yes, they are," remarked the trained nurse "But for my part I prefer to publish my own hints. My two nieces purpose to have their pictures taken and give them away for Christmas presents It seems to me that it is as well send a person one of your own poetry for a present as a photograph of your self

"So when I heard the girls threatening to give me photographs I told them I didn't want anything to stand on a mantlepiece I told them, too, that no one who sent me things to stand on a mantel would get any earrings or ornaments of any kind from me I said that all photos were excess baggage and that people who distributed them were vain enough without any encouragement in the shape of gewgaws for their hair and necks

"The people who get jewelry from me I am sure, will be the one who give me sensible things I have it fixed with the jeweler on the corner and he knows what to do as soon as I phone him

"I have needed a new black silk petticoat for a long time' I said, 'and they are on sale at Stillings' now for $3.75 I always need stockings, size 7 And next summer I will need a couple of light weight union suits, size 6, and you can get them at Dippy's for $1.25 He is having a sale now. And I need about six nurse's aprons'

"The only way you can get what you want is to let your wants be known If you want a rocking chair say so If you don't say so again There is no need of getting what you don't want at Christmas time.

"I hated to be rough, but I would get photographs for Christmas sure, if I hadn't rebelled at the prospect. It was a severe blow to the girls, they did so want to have their pictures taken"

"Then why not give them photographs of themselves for your gift to them?" asked the opulent woman patient. "Let your nieces get their pictures taken and keep them all themselves. You could give them a half dozen apiece for about $18."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is manufactured by F. J. URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

JUICES OF THE STOMACH.

The work of the stomach is twofold. It breaks up the food by moistening it as it rolls it over and around. It secretes juice, which is one of the agents of digestion.

Birds, having no teeth, must use their stomachs to break up their food. In consequence, the stomach of a bird, called its gizzard, has a very thick, heavy muscular wall and a lining like the skin on the palm of a man's hand.

The human animal in theory breaks up his food with his teeth and does not swallow the mass until it has been thoroughly ground up and mixed with saliva; but there still remains for the stomach to digest a fair amount of mixing. Therefore the stomach has a fairly thick muscular wall, not to be compared with that of a gizzard. CHAPTER I [illegible] was [illegible] an inherited fighting [illegible] unswerving intensity [illegible] kill. He was the last of the Duanes, [illegible] of Texas. But [illegible] dead father, nor [illegible] mother who [illegible] circle who [illegible] had brought to [illegible] realization of [illegible] in his blood [illegible] a hundredfold [illegible] strange emo[illegible] free acts had [illegible] full of [illegible] notches filled in the bulge of the ivory handle. This gun was the one his father had fired twice after being shot through the heart, and his hand had stiffened so tightly upon it in the death-grip that his fingers had to be pried open. It had never been drawn upon any man since it had come into Duane's possession. But the cold bright polish of the weapon showed how it had been used. Duane could draw it with inconceivable rapidity, and at 20 feet he could split a card pointing edgewise toward him.

Duane wished to avoid meeting his mother. Fortunately, as he thought, she was away from home. He went out and down the path toward the gate. The air was full of the fragrance of blossoms and the melody of birds. Outside in the road a neighbor woman stood talking to a countryman in a wagon, they spoke to him, and he heard but did not reply. Then he began to stride down the road toward the town.

Wellston was a small town, but important in that unsettled part of the great state because it was the trading-center of several hundred miles of territory. On the main street there were perhaps fifty buildings, some brick, some frame, mostly adobe, and one-third of the lot, and by far the most prosperous, were saloons. From the road Duane turned into this street. It was a wide thoroughfare lined by hitching-rails and saddled horses and vehicles of various kinds. Duane's eye ranged down the street, taking in all at a glance, particularly persons moving leisurely up and down. Not a cowboy was in sight. Duane slackened his stride, and by the time he reached Sol White's place, which was the first saloon, he was walking slowly. Several people spoke to him and turned to look back after they had passed. He paused at the door of White's saloon, took a sharp survey of the interior, then stepped inside.

The saloon was large and cool, full of men and noise and smoke. The noise ceased upon his entrance, and the silence ensuing presently broke to the clink of Mexican silver dollars at a monte table. Sol White, who was behind the bar, straightened up when he saw Duane, then, without speaking, he bent over to rinse a glass. All eyes except those of the Mexican gamblers were turned upon Duane, and these glances were keen speculative questioning. These men knew Bain was looking for trouble, they probably had heard his boasts. But what did Duane intend to do? Several of the cowboys and rangers present exchanged glances. Duane had been weighed by unerring Texas instinct, by men who all packed guns. The boy was the son of his father. Whereupon they greeted him and returned to their drinks and cards.

Sol White stood with his big red hands on the bar; he was a tall, raw-boned Texan with a long mustache waxed to sharp points.

"Howdy, Buck," was his greeting to Duane. He spoke carelessly and averted his dark gaze for an instant.

"Howdy, Sol," replied Duane, slowly. "Say, Sol, I hear there's a gent in town looking for me bad."

"Reckon there is, Buck," replied White. "He came in heah about an hour ago. Shore he was some riled an' cavortin' for gore. Told me confidential a certain party had given you a white silk scarf an' he was hell-bent on wearin' it home spotted red."

"Anybody with him?" queried Duane.

"Burt an' Sam Dutcalt an' a little cowpuncher I never seen before. They all was coaxin' him to leave town. But he's looked on the flowin' glass, Buck, an' he's heah for keeps."

"Why doesn't Sheriff Oaks lock him up if he's that bad?"

"Oake went away with the rangers. There's been another raid at Flesher's ranch. The King Fisher gang, likely. An' so the town's shore wide open."

Duane stalked outdoors and faced down the street. He walked the whole length of the long block meeting many people—farmers, ranchers, clerks, merchants, Mexicans, cowboys, and women. It was a singular fact that when he turned to retrace his steps the street was almost empty. He had not returned a hundred yards on his way when the street was wholly deserted. A few heads protruded from doors and around corners. That main street of Wellston saw some such situation every few days. If it was an instinct for Texans to fight, it was also instinctive for them to sense with remarkable quickness the signs of a coming gun-play. Rumor could not fly so swiftly. In less than ten minutes everybody who had been on the street or in the shops knew that Buck Duane had come forth to meet his enemy.

Duane walked on. When he came to within 50 paces of a saloon he swerved into the middle of the street, stood there for a moment, then went ahead and back to the sidewalk. He passed on in this way the length of the block. Sol White was standing in the door of his saloon.

"Buck, I'm a-tippin' you off," he said, quick and low voiced. "Call Bain's over at Everall's. If he's a-huntin' you bad, as he brags, he'll show there."

Duane crossed the street and started down. Notwithstanding White's statement Duane was wary and slow at every door. Nothing happened, and he traversed almost the whole length of the block without seeing a person. Everall's place was on the corner.

Duane knew himself to be cold, steady. He was conscious of a strange fury that made him want to leap ahead. He seemed to long for this encounter more than anything he had ever wanted. But, vivid as were his sensations, he felt as if in a dream.

Before he reached Everall's he heard loud voices, one of which was raised high. Then the short door swung outward as if impelled by a vigorous hand. A bow legged cowboy wearing wooly chaps burst out upon the sidewalk. At sight of Duane he seemed to bound into the air, and he uttered a savage roar.

Duane stopped in his tracks at the outer edge of the sidewalk, perhaps a dozen rods from Everall's door.

If Bain was drunk he did not show it in his movement. He swaggered forward, rapidly closing up the gap. Red, sweaty, dishevelled, and hatless, his face distorted and expressive of the most malignant intent, he was a wild and sinister figure. He had already killed a man, and this showed in his demeanor. His hands were extended before him, the right hand a little lower than the left. At every step he bellowed his rancor in speech mostly curses. Gradually he slowed his walk, then halted. A good 25 paces separated the men.

"Won't nothin' make you draw, you ——!" he shouted, fiercely.

"I'm waitin' on you, Cal," replied Duane.

Bain's right hand stiffened—moved. Duane threw his gun as a boy throws a ball underhand—a draw his father had taught him. He pulled twice, his shots almost as one. Bain's big Colt boomed while it was pointed downward and he was falling. His bullet scattered dust and gravel at Duane's feet. He fell loosely, without contortion.

In a flash all was reality for Duane. He went forward and held his gun ready for the slightest movement on the part of Bain. But Bain lay upon his back, and all that moved were his breast and his eyes. How strangely the red had left his face—and also the distortion! The devil that had showed in Bain was gone. He was sober and conscious. He tried to speak, but failed. His eyes expressed something pitifully human. They changed—rolled—set blankly.

Duane drew a deep breath and sheathed his gun. He felt calm and cold, glad the fray was over. One violent expression burst from him. "The fool!"

When he looked up there were men around him.

"Plumb center," said one.

Another, a cowboy who evidently had just left the gaming table, leaned down and pulled open Bain's shirt. He had the ace of spades in his hand. He laid it on Bain's breast, and the black figure on the card covered the two bullet holes just over Bain's heart.

Duane wheeled and hurried away. He heard another man say:

"Reckon Cal got what he deserved. Buck Duane's first gun play. Like father like son!"

CHAPTER II

A thought kept repeating itself to Duane, and it was that he might have spared himself concern through his imagining how awful it would be to kill a man. He had no such feeling now. He had rid the community of a drunken, bragging, quarrelsome cowboy.

When he came to the gate of his home and saw his uncle there with a mettlesome horse saddled, with canteen, rope and bags all in place, a subtle shock pervaded his spirit. It had slipped his mind—the consequence of his act. But the sight of the horse and the look of his uncle recalled the fact that he must now become a fugitive. An unreasonable anger took hold of him.

"The d—d fool!" he exclaimed hotly. "Meeting Bain wasn't much. Uncle Jim. He dusted my boots, that's all. And for that I've got to go on the dodge."

"Son, you killed him—then?" asked the uncle, huskily.

"Yes. I stood over him—watched him die. I did as I would have been done by."

"I knew it. Long ago I saw it comin'. But now we can't stop to cry over spilt blood. You've got to leave town an' this part of the country."

"Mother!" exclaimed Duane.

"She's away from home. You can't wait. I'll break it to her—what she always feared."

Suddenly Duane sat down and covered his face with his hands.

"My God! Uncle, what have I done?" His broad shoulders shook.

"Listen, son, an' remember what I say," replied the older man, earnestly. "Don't ever forget. You're not to blame. I'm glad to see you take it this way. Because maybe you'll never grow hard an' callous. You're not to blame. This is Texas. You're your father's son. These are wild times. The law as the rangers are laying it down now can't change life all in a minute. Even your mother, who's a good, true woman, had had her share in making you what you are this moment. For she was one of the pioneers, the fightin' pioneers of this state. Those years of wild times before you was born developed in her instinct to fight to save her life, her children an' that instinct has cropped out in you. It will be many years before it dies out of the boys born in Texas."

"I'm a murderer," said Duane, shuddering.

"No, son, you're not. An' you never will be. But you've got to be an outlaw till time makes it safe for you to come home."

"An outlaw?"

"I said it. If we had money an' influence we'd risk a trial. But we've neither. An' I reckon the scaffold or jail is no place for Buckley Duane. Strike for the wild country 'an wherever you go an' whatever you do—be a man. Live honestly, if that's possible. If it isn't, be as honest as you can. If you have to herd with outlaws try not to become bad. There are outlaws who're not all bad—many who have been driven to the river by such a deal as this you had. When you get among these men avoid brawls. Don't drink, don't gamble. I needn't tell you what to do if it comes to gun play as likely it will. You can't come home. When this thing is lived down if that time ever comes, I'll get word into the unsettled country. It'll reach you some day. That's all. Remember, be a man. Goodby."

Duane, with blurred sight and contracting throat, gripped his uncle's hand and bade him a wordless farewell. Then he leaped astride the black and rode out of town.

As swiftly as was consistent with a care for his steed Duane put a distance of 15 or 18 miles behind him. With that he slowed up, and the matter of riding did not require all his faculties. He passed several ranches and was seen by men. This did not suit him, and he took an old trail across country. It was a flat region with a poor growth of mesquite and prickly pear cactus. Occasionally he caught a glimpse of low hills in the distance. He had hunted often in that section, and knew where to find grass and water. When he reached his higher ground he did not, however, halt at the first favorable camping spot, but went on and on. Once he came out upon the brow of a hill and saw a considerable stretch of country beneath him. It had the gray sameness characterizing all that he had traversed. He seemed to want to see wide spaces—to get a glimpse of the great wilderness lying somewhere beyond to the southwest. It was sunset when he decided to camp at a likely spot he came across. He led the horse to water, and then began searching through the shallow valley for a suitable place to camp. He passed by old camp sites that he well remembered. These, however, did not strike his fancy this time, and the significance of the change in him did not occur at the moment. At last he found a secluded spot, under cover of thick mesquites and oaks, at a goodly distance from the old trail. He took saddle and pack off the horse. He looked among his effects for a hobble, and, finding that his uncle had failed to put one in, he suddenly remembered that he seldom used a hobble, and never on his horse. He cut a few feet off the end of his lasso and used that. The horse, unused to such hampering of his free movements, had to be driven out upon the grass.

Duane made a small fire, prepared and ate his supper. This done, ending the work of that day, he sat down and filled his pipe. Twilight had waned into dusk. A few wan stars had just begun to show and brighten. Above, the low continuous hum of insects sounded the evening carol of robins. Presently the birds ceased their singing and then the quiet was more noticeable. When night set in and the place seemed all the more isolated and lonely for that. Duane had a sense of relief.

It dawned upon him all at once that he was nervous, watchful, sleepless. The fact caused him surprise, and he began to think back, to take note of his late actions and their motives. The change one day had wrought amazed him. He who had always been free, easy, happy, especially when out alone in the open, had become in a few short hours grim and serious preoccupied. The silence that had once been sweet now meant nothing to him except a medium whereby he might the better hear the sounds of pursuit. The loneliness, the right, the wild that had always been beautiful to him, now only conveyed a sense of safety for the present. He watched, he listened, he thought. He felt tired yet had no inclination to rest. He intended to be off by dawn, heading toward the southwest. Had he a destination? It was vague as his knowledge of that great waste of mesquite and rock bordering the Rio Grande. Somewhere out there was a refuge. For he was a fugitive from justice, an outlaw.

This being an outlaw then meant eternal vigilance. No home, no rest, no sleep, no content, no life worth the living. He must be a lone wolf or he must herd among men obnoxious to him. If he worked for an honest living he still must hide his identity and take risks of detection. If he did not work on some distant outlying ranch, how was he to live? The idea of stealing was repugnant to him. The future seemed gray and somber enough. And he was 23 years old.

Why had this hard life been imposed upon him?

The bitter question seemed to start a strange iciness that stole along his veins. What was wrong with him? He stirred the few sticks of mesquite into a last flickering blaze. He was cold, and for some reason he wanted some light. The black circle of darkness weighed down upon him, closed in around him. Suddenly he sat bolt upright and then froze in that position. He had heard a step. It was behind him—no—on the other side. Some one was there. He forced his hand down to his gun and the touch of cold steel was another icy shock. Then he waited. But all was silent—silent as only a wilderness arroyo can be with its low murmuring of wind in the mesquite. Had he heard a step? He began to breathe again.

But what was the matter with the light of his camp fire? It had taken on a strange green luster and seemed to be waving off into the other shadows. Duane heard no step, saw no movement nevertheless, there was another present at that camp fire vigil. Duane saw him. He lay there in the middle of the green brightness, prostrate, motionless, dying Cal Bain. His features were wonderfully distinct, clearer than any cameo, more sharply outlined than those of any picture. It was a hard face softening at the threshold of eternity. The red tan of sun, the coarse signs of drunkenness, the ferocity and [illegible] characteristics of Bain were no longer there. This face represented a different Bain, showed all that was human in him fading, fading as swiftly as it blanched white. The lips wanted to speak, but had not the power. The eyes held an agony of thought. They revealed what might have been possible for this man if he lived—that he saw his mistake too late. Then they rolled, set blankly, and closed in death.

That haunting visitation left Duane sitting there in a cold sweat, a remorse gnawing at his vitals, realizing the curse that was on him. He divined that never would he be able to keep off that phantom. He remembered how his father had been eternally pursued by the furies of accusing guilt, how he had never been able to forget in work or in sleep those men he had killed.

The hour was late when Duane's mind let him sleep and then dreams troubled him. In the morning he bestirred himself so early that in the gray gloom he had difficulty in finding his horse. Day had just broken when he struck the old trail again.

He rode hard all morning and halted in a shady spot to rest and graze his horse. In the afternoon he took to the trail at an easy trot. The country grew wilder. Bald, rugged mountains broke the level of the monotonous horizon. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon he came to a little river which marked the boundary line of his hunting territory.

The decision he made to travel up stream for a while was owing to two facts—the river was high with quicksand bars on each side, and he felt reluctant to cross into that region where his presence alone meant that he was a marked man. The bottom lands through which the river wound to the southwest were more inviting than the barrens he had traversed. The rest of that day he rode leisurely up stream. At sunset he penetrated the brakes of willow and cottonwood to spend the night. It seemed to him that in this lonely cover he would feel easy and content. But he did not. Every feeling, every imagining he had experienced the previous night returned somewhat more vividly and accentuated by new ones of the same intensity and color.

In this kind of travel and camping he spent three more days, during which he crossed a number of trails, and one road where cattle—stolen cattle, probably—had recently passed. This time exhausted his supply of food, except salt, pepper, coffee and sugar, of which he had a quantity. There were deer in the brakes, but, as he could not get close enough to kill them with a revolver, he had to satisfy himself with a rabbit. He knew he might as well content himself with the hard fare that assuredly would be his lot.

Somewhere up this river there was a village called Huntsville. It was distant about 100 miles from Wellston, and had a reputation throughout southwestern Texas. He had never been there. The fact was this reputation was such that honest travelers gave the town a wide berth. Duane had considerable money, for him, in his possession, and he concluded to visit Huntsville, if he could find it, and buy a stock of provisions.

Army Pistol Shoots Colors.

From the Popular Science Monthly.

A decided novelty in the way of pistols has been perfected for use by the United States signal corps for the purpose of communicating at night. Cartridges firing spurts of flame of various hues are used for ammunition, the color of the flame carrying a definite message to the distant lookout.

COUGH AND CONSUMPTION

One of the very earliest and also of the most constant systoms of consumption is cough. Cough is the [illegible] made by the muscles of respiration to relieve the nerves of the air passages of something which is irritating.

First, there is an irritation of the nerve. Usually this irritation is in the bronchial tube. It may be in the throat, the palate, the pleura, or some part more or less removed from the bronchial tubes.

If you will press with a toothpick on the floor of the outer ear can it you will cough. When the irritation of the nerve sends an alarm to the nerve center for coughing the muscles of respiration contract violently and force a column of air from the lungs through the vocal cords. If the cords are held tense a loud barking sound results. If they are relaxed the sound is slight. Theoretically; the object of the cough is to free the nerves of that which irritates them. Practically the act is a very well adapted to the work for which it was intended and consequently coughing is often ineffective.

In tuberculosis the cough begins as soon as the growth of tubercles and the secretion of the bacilli irritate the nerves of the lungs. At the beginning it is a dry, irritating, nonproductive cough. There is no sputum because there is no secretion for the lungs to bring up. Remember this: It is safe to say tuberculosis is present because the cough is dry and nonproductive. A hacking cough lasting several weeks or months is suggestive of consumption.

After a while the cough begins to bring up a little mucus. This mucus means nothing more than a simple bronchitis. Such a bronchitis may be the result of coughing. It may mean that tubercular nodules are forming in the walls of the bronchial tubes. Sometimes the microscope will show an abundance of tubercle bacilli in the clear mucous. In some cases of tuberculosis no bacilli can be found in the mucous. Later the cough becomes more productive, brings up more sputum. When this stage is reached the cough becomes less troublesome. There is not the constant tendency to it found earlier in the disease.

As the sputum increases in quantity it changes to a white, then a yellow and later grayish color. There is nothing about the color which is a sign by which diagnosis can be made. As the disease progresses and cavities are formed the amount of sputum coughed up in a day measures more than a pint. Some patients cough more in the morning. They cough until they have cleaned out their lungs. Others cough more when they first lie down. The prone position stimulates cough in them.

When a stranger visits a tubercular sanatorium he is struck by the fact that he hears nobody coughing. One of the most useful points in personal hygiene taught consumptives in sanitaria is how to cough. In the first place they are taught that coughing which fails to bring up anything irritates the vocal cords, harms the lungs tires the muscles, uses up vitality, and does no good. They are taught to discriminate between the irritation which means that there is something to be brought up and that which means a dry hack. Next they are taught that loud, violent, noisy coughing is worse than useless.

SAVING FATIGUE.

Every employer of a long established business carries on his pay roll a number of wornout employes. Some have able to give tasks which are profitable to him. Many he carries from sentiment. Many are in between these extremes. Some are used in traffic, younger men. Some hold positions which the main requisite is responsibility and dependability and which do not require much work.

If the members of this group be examined closely it will be found that they stoop their finger joints are ill, their joints creak, their wrists are shaky and they are without endurance.

Taking the group as a whole they are far from earning what they cost. A right thinking employer keeps men employ the men who have worn themselves out in his service, charging loss to the same account in which [illegible] in equipment is carried.

That some of these men are worn out is no fault of the employer. Instead of sleeping at night they have caroused they have drunk and smoked and suffered infection with venereal disease. They have not lived the life of personal hygiene nor lived in hygienic homes. Some of it is the fault of the employer.

Let us assume that the cost of worn out men is carried by industry at large part of it by the individual factories and stores. If overtured employes in the course of time become expensive for employers then employers are interested in anything which decreases fatigue.

Employers are studying the method of work of their employes with a view to eliminating the waste and thus reducing fatigue. In Providence, R. I., have a museum of fatigue. In this museum there are chairs, tables, benches, for preventing fatigue. There are motion pictures showing workmen wasting energy in doing certain jobs and other pictures showing how the same work can be done without fatigue. The use of motion pictures of men at work shows that much of the reason for being overtired at night, exhausted at the end of the day, and being "stove up," stiff in the joints prematurely, is the result of useless and unnecessary motions of the body in doing work.

The pictures show that much of the fault lies with the management. The floor boss through shop foreman to manager and owner, in that the method of the work and the arrangement of it are badly planned. Incidentally it is found that the elimination of waste motion increases the amount accomplished in a day and at the same time fatigue is lessened.

Gilbreath, in telling his story in "Fatigue Study," describes how one factory changed a certain table in such a way that men who hitherto had only assembled 18 machines in a day were able to put together 66.

Didn't Give Him a Chance.

From the Chicago Post.

A negro porter, nearly 80 years old, was arrested on some trivial charge, for which he was later discharged. It proved during the trial, that he had never been inside of a court before, and the busy events greatly dazed and embarrassed him.

As he stood up when his name was called the clerk sang forth:

"Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you shall give in this case shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?"

And the negro started back, gasped. Then he turned quickly to the bench.

"Mr. Briles," he said, for he knew him honor from boyhood in an unofficial capacity, "Ise puffectly willin' to tell de truf, but mus' I be all catched up dat way, in case I might want ter get a step or two offin' de road? Hit don't give a man no leeway, suh!"

FRANCE TO KEEP HER WAR ORPHANS, REPORT

Paris.—"France is not going to export any of its war orphans," said Monsieur Alfred Croiset, head of the faculty of letters of the Sorbonne, in explaining the participation of Americans in the work of the orphanage of the Armies, of which he is president. "I know a statement was published recently to the effect that 150,000 American families had offered to adopt orphans of the war. The number was a little exaggerated, and word adoption used in its general sense was misleading. Orphans of the war, so far as is possible, are to remain in their families, especially when the mother is living. Where there are no immediate relatives to care for them they are to be placed in other French families and ultimately will be cared for by the state until their majority. Some of them are available for adoption under the common acceptation of the term.

"Most of the Americans who have expressed the desire to participate in this work understand this point quite well, in fact, in our correspondence the majority of the letters from the United States express the desire that the children which they agree to support should remain in their families. The supposition that there are 150,000 American families wanting to take care of orphans arise no doubt from the fact that we were asked by Americans as to about how many war orphans there were needing assistance, and we put the number at 150,000. This, of course, does not comprise all of the war orphans. They were estimated recently in a debate in the senate by Senator Jenouvrier at 500,000 which, of course, in lucky but orphans by a great proportion of these will never become the objects of charity and the exact number may never be precisely determined.

"Committees have been organized in a great many American cities to receive propositions of families, not to adopt orphans, but to support them in their own surroundings for a period of two years, which is supposed will go beyond the end of the war and carry them to the time when the measures taken by the government for the care of orphans become effective. All the people in France connected with this movement have been deeply touched by the generous ardor of Americans in this work. We have received many thousands of letters the number is increasing every day from families who want to enter into direct communication with orphans and start correspondence with them so as to follow them until such time as they need no further help.

"The plan of the orphanage of the Army is to bring these children up without making them feel that they are objects of charity, while at the same time saving them from the [illegible] except when that [illegible] We support them [illegible] contributions [illegible] books, pencils [illegible] and heating [illegible] are added [illegible] pills of the [illegible] about 40 cents [illegible] and the [illegible] tribute the [illegible] an expedient [illegible] these [illegible] charge."

The Jitney Fraud

[illegible] made its [illegible] as an [illegible] its success [illegible] that the way [illegible] a short time [illegible] boasted of its [illegible] expected in due [illegible] barons to their [illegible] those who [illegible] were the [illegible] They began to talk [illegible] fares, maintain [illegible] and means by which [illegible] keep the profits of [illegible] within the bounds of [illegible]

But last year their [illegible] began to dawn on the [illegible] that their success was [illegible] several factors which [illegible] could not control. A second [illegible] mobile, for instance, has a way of wearing out about the time it has earned its cost and kept its owner [illegible] sengers about the streets for a [illegible] each. This tendency became so evident last year that it could almost be called a law. It came, also, as a surprise, both to the traction magnates, who are answerable to the public, and to the free lance jitney operators. Now, according to the retrenchment notices, the jitney is to have its last chance. It will stand or fall this spring.

They point to several instances where storms and floods threw traction systems out of order and forced cities to depend for transportation upon the jitneys and the jitney operators promptly increased fares to an exorbitant price and incurred the wrath of the citizens. Furthermore, the jitneys broke down. The question now is whether the jitneys will blossom again with the spring. Many traction officials contend that the jitney has already proved itself a flybynight competitor, but others are waiting to see how the supply of secondhand automobiles holds out.

The Quick Wit of Mansfield.

From the New York Telegraph.

Now that Arnold Daly is reviving "Beau Brummel," various anecdotes of the late Richard Mansfield, who created the title role, are being revived. W. J. Ferguson, who acted the valet in the original production and who is now one of the pirates in "Treasure Island," has remembered one.

In the character of the valet it was Ferguson's place to hand the Beau his gloves, his stick and finally his hat. Upon the opening night he proffered the hat to Mansfield, turning the wrong way around. Had the Beau put on the hat in the way it was handed to him and strolled down Piccadilly or Bond street, the faux pas might have created a scandal. When Ferguson discovered his error he turned pale under his make up.

Mansfield was quick to grasp the situation and, with one of his most courtly bows, gave the hat back to the valet, so that he might turn it around, which Ferguson did with pantomimic apology.

As Mansfield put on the hat and passed out the door, he whispered to Ferguson: "That's a good piece of business, keep it in."

Plenty Left.

From the Saturday Evening Post.

When Oscar Hammerstein was building his London opera house a head carpenter came to him one day with the information that a mechanic had just had two fingers cut off by a circular saw.

"Don't bother me!" shouted Hammerstein. "Don't bother me! Hasn't he eight fingers left?"

Birds have flown into favor in all sorts of ways this season, and the handkerchiefs on which little birds are embroidered are especially pretty.

WE MUST WRESTLE.

Carlyle.

Cease to brag to me of America, and its model institutions and constitutions. America, too, will have to strain its energies, crack its sinews, and all but break its heart as the rest of us have had to do, in thousandfold wrestle with the pythons and mud demons before it can become a habitation for the gods.

And here the plains, when she had gained them after a ride through the already shadowy woods, began to be dotted with bunches of cattle, who eyed her with a sober interest as she passed among them.

She wondered a little that at no time had she caught even a fleeting glimpse of Grange. He had not been so far ahead of her that if he had followed the direct course she was taking to reach the crossroads, she should not have seen him somewhere on the plains ahead yet, thinking he might have made his crossing somewhere else, Jess pursued her way.

It was a lonely way now, less familiar to her and broken by frequent little spurs of chaparral that lay like the rock promontories in a sea's vast sweep mysterious, low lines of hazy gray and green.

In the scant buffalo grass she started many a cottontail rabbits, which bounded away from under her pony's ever [illegible] nose with giant leaps. She came to a spot grim evidence of the [illegible] tol among the herds of the Loop where many bleaching bones and [illegible] hides struck a snorting distaste in her pony's nostrils.

Far beyond the dip of the prairie a [illegible] on the clear horizon, she could see the smithy at the crossroads.

Intuition told her as she drew near to it though still afar, that it was closed, as indeed, was its general state. Then a sense of annoyance at her own credulity beset her. What was wrong with the forge on the Raccoon river that it should be sending its work so far abroad? Grange had lied to her!

As [illegible] of this grew upon Jess. She could see the smithy clearly now and the dark lines of the two roads heavier than the plains themselves because of man and deserted by him. But if Grange was not there, and she saw now that he was not, where was he and for what purpose? [illegible] answer came to Jess, [illegible] of the cattle country as she was.

TO THE VOTERS OF HANCOCK COUNTY:

On the eve of the primary I wish to thank the voters of this county for the interest they are taking in my candidacy for the office of Sheriff. It has been my desire to meet you all personally and talk with you, but on account of the May term of court being on at this time, also duties of the office and bad roads, I may not be able to see you as much as I should like to have done. As you are about to select a sheriff for another term, you know whether or not I am the man for the place. You, (the voters) are the ones to make the choice. All that I have to say is, that I will devote my best efforts towards the duties of the office. I have devoted my entire time and care for the county and affairs therof. I think I can ask for another term. I would greatly appreciate your vote if you think I am deserving of it. Thanking you for the interest and encouragement you have shown in my candidacy for the office to which I am aspiring I remain,

Yours very sincerely

Much of our future success in this country depends on our ability to keep our young men on the farms and away from the cities Statistics show that the farms are gradually becoming depopulated and the cities are being overcrowded with from two to five men waiting for every job. If the young men would stick to the farms, and improve and develop the uncultivated acres. it would be only a question of time when the wealth of this country would be doubled and trebled Bright lights and white ways appeal to the young eye, but they do not feed empty stomachs The farm is a good place to be and a far better place to stay.

A picked house greeted the graduates at the opera house last Thursday evening and all left the hall after the conclusion of the program feeling amply repaid for their trouble and that all of the graduates had done exceptionally well The musical numbers on the program were also fine and much enjoyed The hall was tastily decorated in the class colors and the class motto, "Labor Conquers Everything" was in evidence. The graduates were, Blanche Bernett Liljenberg, Cora May Gates and Bessie Blanche Kraus and we join with their many friends in wishing them a bright happy and successful life in their battle with worldly things

A large crowd was here Tuesday to enjoy the Memorial exercises as outlined in the program published last week. The band music was exceptionally fine and the organization shows a marked improvement over last year and during their concert in the evening played some numbers that were strictly high class. The address by Rev. Clegg was fine and in fact so was the whole program. After the program what was supposed to be a ball game was staged between Klemme and Rowan, Klemme winning by the delicate score of 12 to 8. Klemme has the makings of a good team this year but this was their first attempt this season and went into the game without any previous practice.

Black Hawk County has figured out that it can have gravelled roads without higher taxation The board of supervisors has estimated that the total cost of bridging, permanently grading, draining and surfacing with gravel the 168 miles of the county highway system will cost $718,200. They estimate that the present levies. including the automobile fund, even though it is not increased, will be sufficient to maintain all the roads in the county highway system, pay the interest on the cost of the roads. and and in addition retire the bonds within 17 years time These results can be secured by adopting the bonding plan of anticipating the tax income that will be produced by the present levies and the automobile license fund

Don't Gorge Hens.

In feeding poultry it is never advisable to feed heavily during the early hours of the day. A hen gorged with food early in the morning, will have no incentive to exercise—will lay around the roosting quarters and take on fat In feeding for winter eggs the appetites of the hens should never be fully satisfied until just before they go to roost at night

Ordinarily, when given range hens do not roam a great distance from their roosting quarters This being true, a large flock will soon deplete the range near the poultry house of green food and insects. The small flocks on the other hand, if housed and kept on the colony plan, will be unable to deplete the range immediately surrounding their quarters of these essentials for a good egg yield.

When kept in large flocks, the house and the soil close to it must be kept clean. The droppings must be removed daily and the soil turned up frequently in order to maintain sanitary conditions. Any neglect of these duties will result in disaster. The small flock can stand much more neglect in the matter of cleanliness than the large ones, because the houses do not become so soiled and the ground is kept clean and sweet through the growth of vegetation.

It is remarkable how well a little flock of fifty or one hundred hens and pullets will pay if well attended. The housing need not be elaborate or expensive. The feed is all at hand on the average grain farm and no one need worry about proteids or ash or balanced rations. Give the hen something to balance and she will do the work for herself.

If your house is in need of repair begin early in your spare time to repair it. Patch the roof if it leaks. There are usually enough odds and ends around the farm to fix it. If it has wide cracks between the boards of the wall, set fodder around three sides of it, leave a part of the south or east side open and make a frame covered with cheese cloth or some other light material for extremely cold and stormy days. Fill in a dirt floor four or five inches higher than the surrounding yard. Clean out the old nest boxes and spray the wall and perches. You will have made a nice start toward winter eggs when these things are accomplished.

HUMOR of the DAY

An Old War Story.

As a regiment of soldiers was on the march to Gettysburg some of the soldiers stepped out of the ranks and confiscated a couple of geese, and one of the drummers unheaded his instrument and put the captured birds in the drum.

Shortly afterward the colonel rode along and, noticing the boy, said sharply:

"Why don't you beat that drum?"

"Colonel," said the drummer mysteriously, "I want to speak to you." The colonel drew still closer and, bending down his head, said "Well, what have you to say?"

The drummer whispered, "Colonel, I've got a couple of geese in here"

The colonel straightened up and gravely said: "Well, if you're sick and can't play you needn't."

The colonel had roast goose that night.

DARKEN GRAY HAIR, LOOK YOUNG, PRETTY

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens So Naturally that Nobody can tell.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart color and a youthful appearance to the hair It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

OTTOSEN AND WOODS

In reading the exchanges, we have noticed that some of the brethern have been anxious to belittle, in a way, the candidacy of Chris Ottosen for Tenth district congressman. We have known Chris Ottosen since boyhood and wish to say that such men are the ones who have been the means of bringing about the big republican majority in the Tenth district.

If Mr Ottosen is nominated he will be elected. When elected he will prove himself to be the ablest and most popular congressman since the time of Dolliver.

Our recollections are, that during the campaign of 1908, which resulted in the defeat of congressman Connor by Woods, it was understood by the voters of the district that Mr. Woods had expressed himself that no man should be a candidate for congress for more than two terms. But since that time we have had the pleasure of receiving notice of his candidacy for congress for 1910, 1912, 1914 and 1916 During these long years that he has held office, the only bill that he has introduced that might interest the district and which our attention has been called to many, many times, was the one to build a factory to make paper from corn stalks. This factory was to be located at Boone. It is our opinion that if the voters of the district consider their best interest there will be no doubt about the nomination of Chris Ottosen.—Whittemore Champion.

The above article should be heeded as every word is only too true. The voters of the Big Tenth diftrict have became so accustomed to voting for Woods that they go to the polls and cast their ballot without giving his opponent any consideration. It is not likely that Mr. Ottosen will wrest the nomination from Woods as he entered the race too late to make a very extensive campaign but when you compare the two men Ottosen stands head and shoulders over Woods, Woods is a politician but when you say that you have told everything. Do not take our word for it, look up his past history, It is about time that Woods was loosing his wire pulling and hood winking ability and the voters of this district were waking up. Vote for Ottosen and you will make no mistake.

SWALLOWS SAFETY PIN

An interesting operation was performed at the Park Hospital late Saturday afternoon, when a good sized safety pin was removed from the "tummy" of little 13-months-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smith of Meltonville. While being dressed the little fellow picked up the pin and mistaking its use, had put it in his mouth and tried to swallow it. He was immediately taken to the hospital, where an X-ray examination showed the pin lodged in the esophagus. The pin was open with the point upward. Food was given to the victim, forcing the pin into the stomach, where it was removed by a surgical operation. Both pin and baby are doing nicely. —Mason City Globe Gazette

A BRUISED BERRY

A Los Angeles comedian arranged with his grocer, named Berry, to pay quarterly, but the bookkeeper got things mixed up and sent a bill before the quarter was up. Thereupon the comedian called Berry up and handed him a rebuke in the following language: "I say, here's a pretty mull-berry, you have sent in your bill-berry before it is due berry. Your father, the elder-berry, would not have been such a goose-berry, but you need not feel blue-berry because I don't care a straw-berry, but if you come again before June-berry, I'll kick your rasp-berry until it's black-berry.

After having become a long recognized and accepted institution, the red flag of the guard at the railroad crossing has been found inadequate for the modern demands, and a movement to bring about its overthrow is well under way. In the light of recent demands and experiences, many criticisms of the railroad watchman and his red flag have developed Some times he shook it in the air to warn pedestrians and drivers of the approach of a train, and later he waved the same flag with much the same motion to beckon them to come on Then again he was lost to view at the crossing at train time. The crossing men employed on the Central railroad of New Jersey and the Long Island railroad are now supplied with metal hand signals with the word "Stop" painted on their surfaces in large letters At night a double-faced lantern is used with the same legend in red letters across the surface of the glass

IOWA MAN SEEKS TO RECOVER TWO FARMS

Was Fleeced Out of Land After High Rolling Stunt—Kept In Hiding For Time.

Harlan, Ia., May 20.—The trial has been started here, before Judge Rockafellow of a case that involves the loss of two farms and about $7,000 in cash by George Wilson, who formerly owned land in Shelby and Audubon counties

Wilson claims that he was swindled out of the land and cash in Omaha, where he went for a little recreation, and where, according to the petition on file in the case, he was frightened after having indulged in some little indiscretion

The action in this court is against "Mr and Mrs Charles M Reece, sometimes known as Mr and Mrs. C M. Reeser, of Omaha, and recites also that one James Chadwick and Edith Ball conspired with the defendants to defraud Wilson out of his farms and money

It is recited that Wilson was accused of having violated the law and that he was about to be prosecuted on a criminal charge, that two men approached him, one representing himself as the sheriff of Douglas county (Omaha), and the other the county attorney of the same county, to whom he relinquished his wealth on the promise of protection and immunity from arrest

Wilson, after his disastrous visit to Omaha, disappeared and was gone for months, and until the Reeces or Reesers, of Omaha, attempted to dispose of one of the farms formerly owned by Wilson, his disappearance was a mystery This precipitated an investigation and John Christiansen was appointed guardian for Wilson and it is in his name that this action against the Reece or Reesers was brought

It is charged in the petition that there was no money consideration in the transfer of the land but that Wilson deeded the farms through duress and threat

AUTO ORDINANCE NOT LEGAL, LAWYER SAYS

Presents Written Argument In Supreme Court Hearing on Traffic Regulations.

Des Moines, Ia., May 18.—A. D. Pugh, attorney, filed written arguments in the supreme court yesterday asking reconsideration of the Des Moines traffic ordinance which the court recently held to be valid. He asserts the measure in unconstitutional for the reason that the legislature does not permit Iowa cities to prohibit the parking of automobiles on the business streets.

"If the recent ruling of the supreme court is to stand, every city and town in the state can maintain different ordinances restricting the standing of automobiles in the streets, and the whole matter of regulation thrown into intolerable confusion," said Attorney Pugh "This is the very mischief the state statute was intended to prevent. The decision, unless changed on rehearing, will subject 150,000 car owners, paying license fees of perhaps $1,500,000 on vehicles worth perhaps $15,000,000, to innumerable prosecutions for violating a chaos of local regulations of which they can know nothing. This means intolerable interference and inconvenience for a very large section of the public, and a serious impairment of the value of their automobiles, by such interference with and restriction of their usefulness."

The argument further holds that the state legislature refused to give cities power to regulate automobiles as to their standing on the streets, for the reason that the legislature intended to establish uniform regulations throughout the state.

"The reason for this is that motor vehicles are not local in their operation, but go practically everywhere," says the attorney, "and their owners cannot inform themselves of the different regulations in every town. We submit that if the automobile owners out of pure cussedness should line up side by side and block a city street, they would be violating the provisions of the statute"

The brief complains that the Des Moines ordinance provides an automobile cannot be stopped in 21 blocks in the business district of the city unless it is in charge of some person. A person cannot stop for a few minutes, without leaving his car, to buy a newspaper or cigar, or to make an adjustment, or for any other purpose, without violating this section, the attorney asserts. He concludes by saying the supreme court in its ruling hurt more than helped the right of public travel in the highways that the decision, unless corrected, will grossly injure a large section of the public and its property and that it is the duty of the court to correct it before it becomes a final precedent

BOARD MEMBER INSPECTS STATE'S GRANITE QUARRY

Des Moines, Ia., May 19 [illegible] H McConlogue returned to Des Moines today with the report that 3,000,000 yards of Sioux Falls granite are available near the surface on the property in Lyon county purchased by the state for a quarry The state board of control hopes to be putting this stone out for road building purposes before the middle of the summer

The Rock Island railroad offered to build a sidetrack from its line to the state quarry—a distance of two and one-half miles—at a cost of $10,000 a mile providing the state will pay for it The Rock Island proposes then to buy the switch from the state by granting a lower rate on each car load of material taken out, until the reduction equals the cost of the improvement The Illinois Central representative, who visited the property with Colonel McConlogue, will submit a proposition on a switch in a few days.

"While up in that part of the state I also visited several places where machinery for rock crushing is in use," said Colonel McConlogue "We will need some machinery I do not know yet how much I visited the South Dakota state quarry at Sioux Falls, operated by prison labor, and got a line on how that state operates The material we have is the best obtainable for concrete work We also have a good sand pit on the property."

DELEGATES PERFECT PLANS TO BOOST CUMMINS' CANDIDACY

Cedar Rapids, Ia., May 18—With the stage all set for the republican state convention here Wednesday, politicians who have been attending such gatherings for many years are arriving on every train, so as to be on hand for the numerous conferences which promise to be the most important phase of the convention. Everything is cut and dried so far as national issues are concerned, the only thing lacking being the organizing of the Cummins delegation which is to go from Iowa to the national meet. The delegates at large, district committeemen and notable leaders of the party in this state will get together at a banquet in the Montrose hotel on Wednesday night after the convention has adjourned A chairman for the Iowa delegation will be named and the plan of campaign mapped out by which the Hawkeye politicians hope to romp home with the nomination for Iowa's favorite son

Candidates for state offices have engaged quarters at the Montrose to further their interests before the test of strength in the primaries June 5.

District caucuses will be held in the city auditorium at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning—an hour before the convention is to be called to order Howard J. Clark, of Des Moines, is to be temporary chairman and unless present plans are changed, Charles E. Pickett, of Waterloo, will be chosen permanent chairman.

FLAYS THE HYPHENATE

Make Believe Preparedness Cannot Be Accepted, He Tells Hearers—Goes After Pacifist Element.

Detroit, Mich., May 20 - Col Theodore Roosevelt, in an address here today, reiterated his opposition "to all kinds of hyphenated Americanism," advocated universal military service based on universal training and declared that we must abolish "pork barrel" methods in our national defense, stop talking and get down to actual business of thorough preparedness that we are "to make this nation as strong as are its convictions in reference to right and wrong."

Hundreds of school children waving American flags were among the throngs which greeted Theodore Roosevelt as the railroad station today when he arrived here to be the guest of honor at the American day celebration.

Praises Boy Scouts.

Before Colonel Roosevelt was driven to the Detroit Athletic club at the head of an automobile parade he made a short address to the boy scouts, who were lined up in front of the station He told them he believed in their organization because it taught them to fight for the truth and "not to be molly coddles."

After luncheon at the Detroit Athletic club, Colonel Roosevelt spent nearly two hours in private before he went to a local opera house to deliver an address on "Americanism and Preparedness for Peace."

Colonel Roosevelt was to make a short address to a mass meeting in Grand Circus park in the heart of the business district Before he returned to New York late this afternoon he is to make an automobile tour of the city It was announced that he expected to spend a few moments visiting Henry Ford at the latter's automobile factory

Colonel Roosevelt prefaced his speech by announcing that he had come here to Michigan because of the primary for the selection of delegates to the republican national convention Mr Ford was victorious in Glowing on his victory here [illegible] marked popular strength in Nebraska and Pennsylvania The effect of the showing has been immediately felt upon many of the politicians within and without congress."

"We, through our representatives in Washington," said Colonel Roosevelt, "have absolutely refused in the smallest degree to prepare during these month of world cataclysm We have refused to learn the smallest part of the lesson being written on the scroll of torment in Europe. We have fearlessly refused to take the smallest step either to do our duty to ourselves or to do our duty to others We have endeavored to deceive ourselves by announcing that in this policy of inaction and of failure to perform duty we are actuated by the loftiest motives. I doubt whether we have really deceived ourselves, and most certainly we have not deceived others There is not a nation in the world which believes that our course of conduct has been dictated by anything save cowardice, unworthy shrinking from risk and responsibility, and cold and selfish love of money making and of ease.

"In any serious crisis there are always men who try to carry water on both shoulders. These men try to escape the hard necessity of choice between two necessarily opposite alternatives, by trying to work up some compromise. In actual practice, the compromise usually proves to combine with exquisite nicety all the defects and none of the advantages of both courses It is true that in ordinary political matters compromise is essential. It is true that in ordinary times it is essential. But there come great crises when compromise is either impossible or fatal. This is one of those crises. There is no use in saying that we will fit ourselves to defend ourselves a little, but not much Such a position is equivalent to announcing that, if necessary, we shall hit, but that we shall only hit soft The only right principle is to prepare thoroughly or not at all. The only right principle is to avoid hitting if it is possible to do so, but never under any circumstances to hit soft. To go to war a little, but not much, is the one absolutely certain way to insure disaster To prepare a little, but not much, stands on a par with a city developing a fire department which, after a fire occurs, can put it out a little, but not much

Make Believe Preparedness.

Colonel Roosevelt declared that the Wilson administration "has taken no step for preparedness, and has done nothing efficient to sustain our national rights." Because, he said, the administration had at intervals, "ventured feebly to speak in contradiction of its non-action," the ultra-pacifists and their followers have refused it the whole hearted support. They object, Colonel Roosevelt added, "even to make believe preparedness; they insist upon even more thorough going helplessness than that which we had so amply provided at Washington."

"We must make this nation as strong as are its convictions in reference to right and wrong," declared Colonel Roosevelt. "It little matters what our ideals may be and what achievements we may hope for, if these ideals and achievements cannot be reduced to action. The events of the past, and the events of today, show that national ideals amount to nothing if the nation lacks the power to maintain them against opposition.

"Therefore, if we are to win at last those of our fellow citizens who believe in the policy of unpreparedness, that policy of national weakness and inefficiency we must have strong and well reasoned convictions and express them with strength and sincerity. A considerable part of the strength of Mr Ford in the primaries, and of the strength of the advocates of half preparedness in Washington, comes from the fact that no real alternative of policy is offered with sincerity and, fear[illegible]

AST TURNING TO ELIHU ROOT SAYS FREDERICK UPHAM

ughes May Be Compromise Choice, While Teddy Will Have But 80 Votes on First Ballot, Claim.

ALKS WITH OLD GUARD

eaders Not Yet Sure, However, They Can Put New Yorker Across—Working on Platform.

Chicago, May 20.—Preparation of e republican platform which will be ubmitted to the nation convention ext month has started, according to red W. Upham, chairman of the lol committee on arrangements for the nvention, who returned from New ork today, after a conference with hairman Hilles and other members of e national committee.

Strong planks favoring American- m, military preparedness and a tariff r the protection of American indus- ies, it is said, are among subjects eing considered.

The plank on Americanism and pre- aredness, it is declared, will be strong nough to meet every reasonable de- and of progressive republicans, ac- ording to reports received here.

Root East's Candidate.

"I talked with nearly all the 'old uard' leaders in the east and left New ork convinced that Elihu Root is the ost favored candidate for president the Atlantic states," said Mr. Up- am. "He will have a majority of the elegates from New York and the oth- eastern states on the early ballots, ut the leaders are still figuring and ave not decided whether they will be ble to nominate him.

"If Root is not nominated I think a estern man will be chosen.

80 Votes for Teddy.

"One of the most prominent mem- ers of the 'old guard' told me that he lt certain Roosevelt would not re- eive more than 80 votes on the first allot. I think Hughes has a chance o be a compromise candidate if the onvention runs more than five days.

"Nominating speeches for presiden- al candidates may be limited to 10 inutes each and seconding speeches of ve minutes for each candidate, accord- g to present plans."

Mr Upham said the local committee ad received more than 60,000 applica- ons for convention tickets.

Tickets for the convention are bring- g from $50 to $250 each.

Bull Moose Open.

O. K. Davis, secretary of the pro- ressive party committee assumed harge of the plans for the party na- onal convention to be held at the uditorium June 7.

"Our principal difficulty thus far is find seats for those who want to ttend our convention," said Secretary avis. "Most of the states have elected ouble or triple delegations while sev- al have chosen four times the number delegates fixed by the official call."

"Is Colonel Roosevelt coming to Chi- r the convention?" he was asked.

t that I know of," said Davis.

P. Corrick, progressive state an of Nebraska, said he had in- mation that the entire delegation of from Washington, at least six of the ght delegates from South Dakota to e republican national convention uld vote for Colonel Roosevelt for esident on the first ballot.

E CHANCE FOR CUMMINS.

Washington, D. C., May 19.—The New ew York Press which has been re- arded as friendly to Roosevelt, in a ading political article today points to enator Cummins as having a strong ance for the nomination. The Press oks on Cummins as likely in the long n to get support not only of progres- e republicans, but many of the old ard who are not kindly to Hughes.

ILLA OPERATING SOUTH OF PARRAL

andit Leader Said to Have Taken Former Name—Has 200 Men—One Expedition Returns.

El Paso, Tex., May 20.—Francisco illa is operating south of Parral un- er an assumed name, according to a ory current in Chihuahua and rought here today by travelers from at city. According to this story a eport had come to Parral that the andit, using the name of Augustin arcia, which he employed at times fore he became a military leader, gathered a force of 200 men in the ighborhood of Borjas. The bandits ve been committing numerous dep- ations, according to the reports.

It was said here today that Colonel ley's expeditionary column is ex- cted to reach Boquillas late Satur- afternoon unless he is advised by superiors to remain on Mexican or is reinforced with more cavalry. jor Langhorne, with the Eighth valry is trailing slowly behind Colo- Sibley and may not reach the bor- until late Sunday or early Monday rning.

It is not known what dispositions ll be made of the troops of the sec- punitive expedition in the event it deemed advisable to withdraw them American territory unless they are d for patrolling the river in the Big d country. There are still many otected points along the Rio nde in the Boquillas section where dits from Mexico could raid with alty and be safe from pursuit for y days.

Preparedness Measure Is Sticker for Republicans

What Will Platform Say? What Can It Say, In View of Division Within Party on Question? Clever Rhetorician Needed to Devise Satisfactory Plank.

Washington, May 20.—What are the republicans at Chicago going to say about preparedness and kindred issues

This is a proposition which is giving no small measure of worry to the republican leaders.

It may be easily possible to shape most of the planks in the republican platform in a fashion which will suit the different factions It is not at all inconceivable that the republicans and the bull moose will be able to agree both as to most features of the platform and as to the candidate

Admittedly, it is not easy to write a preparedness plank, or a national defense plank, which will suit the republicans who wanted the regular army fixed at a peace strength of not less than 250,000 as per the Senate army bill, and likewise, to please those republicans who think the present army is strong enough Nor is it easy to harmonize the exponents of the federal volunteer system and those who believe in reliance on the national guard

Related to the same question is the one of what is frequently termed "Americanism" One body at Chicago will insist on a strenuous declaration as to preparedness and as to "Americanism" One body, on the other hand, will advise a moderate declaration.

Just how the difficulty will be solved is something so far unsettled. It is predicted by some that a rhetorician of capacity will be called in ultimately, who will write something which all brands of republicans and those who amalgamate with them under the republican banner can accept

In any event, it is a safe prediction that it will be a good deal more difficult to prepare the republican plank on preparedness and things related thereto, in this particular year, than it will to prepare other planks, such as that on tariff, which in past years has been a subject of controversy.

NEW CRUISERS TO BE BEST ON SEAS

Battle Cruisers to Have Speed of 35 Knots and Mount 16-Inch Guns—Scouts to Have Great Range.

Washington, D. C. May 20.—Administration officials were confident today that congress would provide a satisfactory naval building program, despite the fact that the House naval committee yesterday abandoned the five year program as recommended by President Wilson and Secretary Daniels.

Announcement by Majority Leader Kitchin that he would not oppose the program as provided for in the naval appropriation bill completed by the committee yesterday is considered significant in view of the fact that he has been opposed to the administration's preparedness measures.

The Senate is expected to restore the battleships to the building program

Biggest Bill in History.

As finally agreed to, the bill authorizes the construction in 1917 of five battle cruisers as against two dreadnaughts and two battle cruisers recommended by Secretary Daniels four scout cruisers, an increase of one scout over the department's program, 10 destroyers as against 15 recommended 20 submarines, three to be 800-ton boats, compared with five fleet and 25 coast defense submersibles recommended one hospital ship, one fuel oil ship, and one ammunition ship. The gunboat recommended was stricken out and the fuel and ammunition ships were added from Secretary Daniels' program for the second year The total amount carried by the bill is $240,000,000, the largest naval appropriation ever presented to congress

The only new ship design already completed by the navy department is for the scout cruisers They will displace between 7,000 and 8,000 tons, have a maximum speed of 35 knots an hour and mount 10 6-inch long range rifles. Nothing of similar speed or radius of action is now afloat or has been proposed by any foreign designer so far as known

Cruisers Greatest Ever

The battle cruisers designs are not complete, although it has been decided that they would be 850 feet in length have a speed of 35 knots a range of action of 10,000 sea miles, a displacement of 32,000 tons and either eight or 10 of the heaviest guns afloat If 10 guns are mounted they will carry 14-inch, 50-caliber main batteries, and if eight guns are decided upon, they will carry 16-inch rifles, the heaviest ever put afloat.

Plans for the battleships which Secretary Daniels still is confident congress will provide call for 36,000-ton ships, mounting 10 16-inch rifles each, and with a speed of 21 or more knots an hour They will have 4,000 tons more displacement than ships to be laid down this year, and exceed by nearly 6,000 tons any foreign battleship built or building so far as navy designers know

The battle cruisers will cost $20,000,000, as against $18,000,000 estimated for the foreign dreadnaughts

Secretary Daniels said

"Of course, I think it would have been best if the House committee had reported the five year program, but I understand that at no time was it possible to secure the votes of a majority of the committee for this larger proposition.

Daniels Is Satisfied.

"A very considerable number of the naval officials who testified before the committee showed that they favored building battle cruisers instead of battleships for a time, owing to the pressing need of this type of ship, which represents the highest type of warship design. The opinion of the general board, however, in which I concur, was that it was probably wiser to divide our new construction of capital ships this year between dreadnaughts and battle cruisers.

"However, the need for these swift, huge, heavily gunned ships is so pressing when we consider the other great navies of the world, that I had far rather see the number I suggested increased than diminished. As I said at the time, the program I presented to congress represented a minimum and not a maximum of each type.

"I am told that the actual amount of money appropriated for this year in the bill as reported by the committee, is more than the amount recommended in my report. The big difference is that the bill covers this year only instead of committing us to a definite increase for the four years to follow So far as the other ships are concerned outside of the capital ships provided, there is no essential difference between those now in the bill and as recommended in my report for the first year

"I am sorry that the battleships were eliminated, and I would be gratified if they were restored before the bill came to the president One thing about the committee's report is extremely gratifying, and that is that the members of the committee who voted for only one battleship last year voted for five battle cruisers this year

LABOR OPPOSED TO COMPULSION PLANS

President of Mine Workers Gives Notice of Union's Beliefs on Subject of Universal Service.

New York, May 20.—Men of prominence from various parts of the country discussed here at a meeting of the academy of political science the question of compulsory and voluntary military training for national defense.

Dr Theodore A. Christen, of Cincinnati, formerly an officer in the Swiss army, declared that "the mobilization of the Swiss army in August, 1914, in its total strength of 300,000 men, or 9 per cent of the country's population which would correspond to 9,000,000 for the same proportion in this country carried through in 48 hours and was such a success that it saved Switzerland from the fate of Belgium."

Swiss preparedness," he added, "has been going since 1895 and has been no menace to Swiss liberty and individual rights."

John P White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, sent a paper which was read before the academy He dwelt upon the subject of military training from the standpoint of organized labor.

"The proposal to establish compulsory military service in this country is the saddest and most abject surrender of American ideals ever proposed in this country," declared Mr. White. "It is that because it is put forward on the ground that only through putting men in regiments and martial law and drilling them with weapons for slaughter, can we make our young men efficient and patriotic

Labor knows a better way Establish industrial freedom, abolish privilege Give the workers a voice in determining wages and conditions and with that voice a responsibility to insist that as much of those things we love shall be preserved, even in war, as can be preserved

"Let us keep up our navy. Let us keep alive among us the science of arms through the maintenance of a small expert army Let us have a thorough overhauling of our military establishment to assure ourselves that our expert military men are foresighted and abreast of developments. Let us have a plan for the quick mobilization of men and munitions and supplies

"Above all, let us regard our present military forces on a basis that will permit its enlargement if ever the need arises without endangering democratic ideals Leaving aside every other objection, labor will always fight any considerable extension of our military forces so long as the army and navy are ruled by a class and a caste."

READING SOARING; STREET IS WILD

Thousands of Shares Change Hands and Price Advances 14 Points Within 24 Hours.

New York, May 20.—The spectacular advance in shares of the Reading company was resumed with greater vigor today the common stock rising to the new high record of 106½ shortly after 11 o'clock Yesterday's final prices were 99⅜ for the common, a 7-point rise, and 51 for the second preferred.

Buying of Reading, so far as could be traced on the floor, emanated from large banking interests. Blocks of 1,000 to 3,000 shares were confidently absorbed at steady gains.

The entire railway list moved upward with Reading, notably Baltimore & Ohio and New York Central, which have large holdings of Reading shares. The Pacifics, Erie, Western Maryland, the Grangers and practically all other divisions were active and strong at gains of 1@3 points.

Total sales up to 11 o'clock amounted to 400,000, or on the basis of a 2,000,000 share day. Reading contribution to the first hour was estimated at about 30 per cent of the whole.

NORWEGIAN LOCKOUT MAY BRING TROUBLE

All Unions Affected—Government Seeks to Compel Arbitration.

Christiania, Norway, May 20.—The government is considering a bill for compulsory arbitration, in order to avert the lockout, which the Employers' association announced would be put into effect, June 3, against all union workmen. There is a grave feeling here that if the lockout is not prevented, an internal conflict will be brought about which might prove a national disaster.

VIOLENT BATTLES ON VERDUN FRONT

Germans, Sending Fresh Troops Into Fray, Attack With Two Divisions In the Avocourt Sector.

Paris, May 20.—Violent fighting on a large scale was resumed on the Verdun front last night. Two fresh divisions of German troops attacked French positions at Avocourt wood and Hill 304, west of the Meuse. The war office announces that the attacks in the main were unsuccessful, although the Germans gained a footing in a small post south of Hill 287, which lies just to the east of Avocourt wood.

The Germans attempted to recapture the small fort on the northeast slope of Hill 304, which the French took on the preceding day, but their effort failed.

Infantry fighting was confined for the most part to the sector west of the Meuse. East of the river and in the Woevre the artillery was active.

The official statement says that the troops employed by the Germans in their attacks had been sent recently to the Verdun front.

Sub-Lieutenant Navarre, one of the best known French aviators, who recently engaged in a fight with five German aeroplanes, brought down his tenth machine in an aerial combat at Dolante in the Argonne.

TAKE FRENCH TRENCHES.

Berlin, (via London, 3:05 p. m.) May 19.—French trenches on both sides of the Haucourt-Esne high road on the Verdun front west of the Meuse have been captured by the Germans, the war office announced today. Nine French officers and 120 men were taken prisoners.

HUGHES BACKFIRE ROOSEVELT PLAY?

Taft's Friends Say Roosevelt Is Playing Up His Support of Justice as Reason For His Defeat.

Washington, D. C., May 19.—Friends of former President Taft are in bad humor because of reports that progressive republicans and progressives are using the rumored support given Hughes by Taft as a reason why Hughes should not be nominated. The friends of Taft here take the view that the fine hand of some of the Roosevelt leaders is to be seen upon this political turn.

Replying to stories that the Taft support of Hughes is being used to hurt Hughes among men who were hostile to Taft in 1912, friends of the former president say it was entirely wrong to suppose Taft had endorsed Hughes, that he had not endorsed him, and that he had purposely refrained from doing so because there were several other candidates to whom he felt he owed consideration.

METHODISTS SELECT FOUR NEW BISHOPS

Three Others Yet to Be Chosen By Conference at Saratoga Springs.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., May 20.—With only three bishops of the Methodist church remaining to be elected, the general conference today resumed the balloting, which has been in progress since Tuesday.

Following closely after the election of Dr. Herbert Welch, of Delaware, Ohio, and Dr. Thomas Nicholson, of New York, last night, the announcement was made to the conference this morning that the Rev. Adna W. Leonard, of Seattle, Wash., had been chosen on the 10th ballot. He is a son of the late Rev. Adna B. Leonard, for many years prominent in Methodism. He is only 41 years old, being the third bishop of the Methodist church to be elected at so young an age.

Dr. Matt S. Hughes, of Pasadena, Cal., was elected a bishop on the 12th ballot, receiving 549 votes or four more than was necessary. He is a brother of Bishop Edwin P. Hughes, of San Francisco.

There was no choice on the 11th ballot. Rev. M. S. Hughes gained 59 votes and was within 56 of the necessary two-thirds. Before the 12th ballot was taken, Rev. Charles E. Locke, of Los Angeles, Cal., withdrew his name.

GERMANY WILL MAKE NO REPLY TO WILSON

Last Note Will Not Be Answered as Berlin Regards Matter Closed.

Washington, May 20.—Germany considering the submarine controversy with the United States closed, has determined to make no response to the last American note on the subject. Information to this effect is contained in confidential advices received here from Berlin.

It was indicated at the state department when the note was sent that the United States did not feel a reply was necessary, and that had one not been forthcoming this government would consider Germany had acquiesced.

With the apparent end of the submarine crisis and Germany's admonition to her citizens in the United States to obey local laws, German officials feel that the only remaining cause of friction is the case of Wolfe von Igel, former secretary to the recalled German military attache, arrested in New York in connection with a plot to blow up the Welland canal.

Count von Bernstorff has asked for the return of papers taken from von Igel, but the request so far has been refused by the state department.

WILSON TO START PEACE MOVE SOON

Speech Next Week Will Be Directed to Capitals of Europe—Diplomats Are Hopeful.

Washington, May 20.—All indications point that President Wilson soon will move to bring about peace in Europe. Discussion of early peace and plans to prevent war in the future was given added impetus here by the announcement at the White House that President Wilson next week will address the League to Enforce Peace, of which former President Taft is president.

Straws in the Wind.

Other straws in the wind indicating that the time soon may be opportune for President Wilson to renew his offers of mediation include

1—The German government's admonition to German citizens in America to obey American laws and to discontinue acts affecting American neutrality.

2—The exchanges of President Wilson and the vatican on the subject of peace.

3—The report that the vatican had intervened with Kaiser Wilhelm to discontinue submarine practices.

4—The mysterious mission of Armand Nazard, last French ambassador to the vatican before the concordat ended, to the pope.

5—The desperate situation of Germany in respect to food.

6—The rumor that the secretary of the Berlin embassy is en route to America with a message to President Wilson from the kaiser

7—The action of the president in agreeing to make a statement on peace at a time when it doubtless will influence the trend of thought throughout the world.

Will Speak to Europe.

Since the outbreak of the European war the president has declined many invitations to speak before peace organizations, but recently he advocated some of the things for which the League to Enforce Peace is working, including the formation of a league of nations, with a common police force to maintain peace, and the establishment of an international court of justice.

While no details of what the president will say in his address next week were disclosed, it is understood he will make a statement of the subject of peace calculated to attract diplomatic interest in European capitals. The address will be carefully thought out in advance, since the president fully realizes the significance of anything he may say on the subject at present.

Gathering All Data.

Mr. Wilson is known to be giving deep consideration to the possibility of bringing about peace and to have made a collection of every available statement on the subject made by any responsible official in the belligerent nations since the outbreak of the war. While officials realize that much of the peace discussion may be propaganda, aimed to fix the responsibility for continuing the war, they nevertheless believe it is entirely possible that the time is rapidly approaching when peace proposals may be welcomed by all the belligerents.

It is believed that the only reason the president has not repeated formally the offer of mediation, made soon after the outbreak of the war, is that he has regarded it as best to wait until there were reasonable grounds for thinking such a step would be favorably received.

CAREER WAS CHANGED BY LITTLE "WANT AD"

President of the Associated Advertising Clubs Believes In Their Efficiency.

Philadelphia, Pa. May 21.—Herbert S. Houston, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World—which will hold their great convention here June 25 to 30—is a thorough believer in newspaper "want ads," for, if it had not been for a little "want ad," he might not be presiding at this great business convention this summer.

He was working in the editorial department of a Chicago newspaper. His hours were long and his pay envelope was about as fat as a match, as was the nature of editorial department envelopes in those times. The little advertisement that so greatly influenced his career announced that a certain baking powder company wanted an advertising manager. Young Houston applied. He did not know much about advertising in those days, but he was bright, resourceful and self confident, and he obtained the position.

The exacting training of newspaper offices, which has been the foundation of so many successful careers in various lines, stood him in good stead, and he rose rapidly, now being vice president of Doubleday, Page & Co., the publishing house.

AUSTRIAN TROOPS GAIN FIVE MILES AGAINST ITALIANS

Italians, Driven Back Over Mountains 4,000 Feet High, Lose 7,300 Prisoners and 31 Cannon.

GUN FIRE OVERWHELMING

Great Strategic Points Recaptured—35 Machine Guns Taken—Losses Small Says Vienna.

Paris, May 20.—One hundred and fifty steamers have been assembled at the Hungarian seaport of Fiume to transport troops, munitions and supplies, under protection of the Austro-Hungarian fleet, to Durazzo, Albania. This information was received here in advices from Innesbruck. It is supposed here that the Austrians intend to make a strong attack on the Albanian town of Avlona, which is occupied by the Italians.

Berlin, May 18 (via London,) May 19.—The Austrian offensive south and southeast of Roverto is making progress daily. The Austrian front already has been advanced five miles in places.

These gains have been made in the face of great difficulties. The mountains are still covered with snow. The Austrians fought their way ascending and descending slopes varying in altitude as much as 4,000 feet within a mile. Dispatches from Austrian headquarters indicate the successes achieved are due to the superiority of the artillery which has such a crushing effect that it is possible to launch infantry attacks after comparatively short preparations.

Captures of men and war materials are increasing daily. The number of prisoners now exceeds 7,300. The Austrians also have taken 31 cannon and 35 machine guns. The positions captured have been in the hands of the Italians for months. They include points to which the Italians attached the greatest strategic importance.

Italians Counter Attack.

Austrian troops are continuing to advance at points on the Italian front the official statement of May 18 says, although the Italians are undertaking vigorous counter strokes.

Austrians crossed the Luan valley and captured Costabella.

Today's official Austrian report says: "Italian front: In the coastal region and on the Corinthian sector artillery operations were impeded by fog. Southeast of Monfalcone the Italians attempted to recapture positions near Nagni, which they lost recently; but they were repulsed.

"In the Col Di Lana district repeated hostile attacks were made without success. In the southern Tyrol, Austro-Hungarian troops attacked and captured the frontier ridge of Maggio, between the Astico and Leno valley, crossed the Lhan valley, southeast of Piazza, and took Costabella. They repulsed several hostile attacks south of Moschere on the Zegnatorta.

"Yesterday we captured more than 900 Italians, among whom were 12 officers, and took 18 cannon and machine guns.

Claim Losses Light.

"The official Italian report of May 16 and 17 states that the Austro-Hungarian losses in these engagements were enormous. The reports were invented in order to diminish the impression made by the Italian retreat. The losses of the enemy can be estimated only by those who hold the battlefield. The Italians are not in that position. The Austro-Hungarians, while approximating at its full value the sacrifice of every brave soldier, are able to declare that the Austro-Hungarian losses have been exceedingly small, thanks to the ability of the infantry, the powerful protection given by the artillery, and the experience in war of the commanders."

For example there fell into the hands of the Austrians on Folgaria plateau an order issued by an Italian division commander in which the plateau was characterized as a position of fundamental importance to be held at all hazards.

LIQUOR IS BIG PRIMARY ISSUE

Cosson Leads Forces of Temperance and Law Enforcement.

WETS SUPPORTING HARDING

Predicted He Will Receive Several Points Above Thirty-five Per Cent of Votes Cast—Reasons Why He Is Strong.

Des Moines, Ia. (Special.)—According to all indications on the political map, Attorney General George Cosson is the strongest candidate in the race for the republican nomination for governor of Iowa.

Indications also point to his nomination in the primaries June 5 with several points above the required thirty-five per cent

Those closely in touch with the political situation base the above statements on the following facts:

Attorney General Cosson has led the field by a great margin in every straw vote that has been taken

The most significant and most important poll of the gubernatorial contest was taken by the Des Moines Capital That newspaper polled the editors of the newspapers of Iowa. The editors were asked to name the man they believed to be the strongest in their respective communities and not vote for the candidate they favor personally unless they believed him the community favorite The editors voted in Australian ballot form so that there would be no strings to the balloting and an editor would not be required to go on public record if he did not so desire

Two hundred and forty-six editors voted Every county in the state was represented

Cosson was declared to be the strongest candidate by 109 of these editors

Allen was given first place by sixty-five editors and Harding by fifty-seven editors

Cosson received twice as many votes as either candidate and as many votes as both Harding and Allen combined

That poll means this

That the editors of the state of Iowa pred ct Cosson will win the republican nomination for governor and that he will lead the field in half of the communities of the state of Iowa.

The Capital's poll was the first poll ever taken among the editors of the state The Capital selected the editors because they are more closely in touch with the sentiment of their respective communities than any other group Political leaders attach much significance to the result of the poll

The Webster City Journal took a poll in Hamilton county on the gubernatorial situation Cosson received 168 votes, Allen 120 Harding 76 and Kuehnle 48 Cosson received more than thirty-five per cent of the votes in that poll The surprising thing is that Hamilton county is supposed to be Allen's own territory as it adjoins on his senatorial counties The vote is taken as an indication of the results in the primary June 5 in that section of the state

A poll taken in Wright county gave Cosson two to one over Allen, with Harding and Kuehnle far in the rear The poll was taken by the Times Gazette of Eagle Grove

Cosson lead by similar majorities in several other polls taken within the last few weeks

Political leaders also point to Mr Cosson's active organizations He has a club at Waterloo with more than 1,000 members He has a large Cosson-for-governor club in Polk county. Cedar Rapids and Fort Dodge have organizations with hundreds of members working for him. In addition, there are 109 other Cosson for-governor clubs throughout the state with a membership of more than 5 000 No other candidate has such active and material support

Sentiment throughout the state is becoming more and more pronounced that Mr Cosson will land the nomination at the primary

Republican leaders point out that Mr Cosson is a vote-getter His strength has been increasing daily

The last Iowa Official Register shows Cosson's proclivities as a vote-getter Cosson received more votes in 80 of the 99 counties than Harding.

Cosson ran stronger in eight of the eleven congressional districts. Cosson got more votes in every county in the Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth congressional districts with the exception of Pottawattamie county, which is wet. Cosson's total vote in the Fiftieth senatorial district—the district represented by Senator Allen—was 4,414 while Allen received only 3,983, or 431 fewer than Cosson.

Cosson got 350 more votes in Allen's own county—Pocahontas county—than Allen

These figures show that Cosson is a greater favorite than either of the other two candidates The above votes were cast in the state election when there were no republican candidates opposing any of the men

Other elements of the strength of George Cosson are pointed out as follows

Everywhere Cosson's honesty and integrity are recognized People say that if Cosson were governor they would know where to find him, that he would put the general good above any private or selfish consideration

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

CHECKMATE.

For a brief moment Jess stood looking at Buck her startled eyes unwavering Without noticing Worthing, she came farther into the room

So you wouldn't do what I asked you' she cried You wouldn't keep quiet when I asked you to'

Worthing caught the half smothered words He gave Buck no chance to reply to them

Sit down Jess

Command ring in the tones, kindly but firm Almost unconsciously Jess obeyed it Worthing drew up his own chair

Jess, he said and he looked clearly into the girl's eyes as he spoke, Buck has told me nothing of what happened to-day except what has concerned himself I know no details I do not want to know them

He paused Jess's face lowering his voice to a whisper I want silence to rest on it all as silence has rested on what has gone before

Buck had risen, and moved over to the open window, the first touch of bitterness at his fate assailing him He meant that no word of his should ever involve Jess Kilrain's name Yet her seeming mistrust of him wounded Buck in his tenderest spot

In the silence of the room he heard her question to Worthing What has he told you'

That he blew up the dam that it was he not Blass Cardross

Buck could not catch the relief in the girl's next words An that is all she cried He said no more to you than that'

Before Worthing could answer, Buck stood beside him

You shall not do it for me Worthing he said and turned facing Jess I told him I shot Blass Cardross an' then blew up the dam Jess I owed him a long grudge between us two I went over there on my own hook I went a-purpose to get even with him for the killing of the cattle on the Loop Mr Brandon, what I owed him I paid him in his own coin He got a fair show for his life and he lost

Silent, wide-eyed on the pleading of her the girl stood Plainly she would not do that she could not

'You won't tell him Worthing Tell him you, Buck

Praps I'll say I'll take what's coming to me I'll take what's coming to me

Then Worthing spoke ed exhaustedly ion Buck I'm sure

There ain't nothing I do for you Worthing swaying in his voice spise myself forever for 'Twon't touch no one dross knows we was most come But I've always ain't goin to live a lie

He stood for a shoving his own sight Worthing straighter Jess now 'n ring to things in Jess watching him emotions in her from I Jess Cardross Jess me I love him Jess for that dream was from the first day week after on' morning to keep pttin the fool was Jess Cardross' dead Even reckon he just plain he was that know Speak Jess low for

Then I knew knew what a fool I'd been how I had to me Worthing always for him I hated him then like a man hates whose been treated so Jess hurt with the memory of his losses I hated myself I hated every one who looked at me I hated you, Buck Brannon for daring to say to me the things you said

She moved quickly forward until she stood before them

I hadn't seen him until today—over there on the dam I hadn't known then how dead my love was or how like my hate was It leaped in me like a fire He saw then he'd lost me forever lost what he wanted of me—and the devil in him came out

She faced Worthing only now

Buck Brannon tells you that he shot Blass Cardross dead' she cried He lies He lies to save me Ask him if I did not strike that man 'cross the face with my quirt Ask him if we didn't struggle on the dam But don't believe him when he says he shot Blass Cardross

Twas me that done it, an sent him dead over the wall after he'd threatened to kill me an' — me worse than death—an if Buck Brannon goes to the law an' says he done it, I'll go, too, an' it'll be his word against mine, an' it'll be me they will be eve—I swear it to God'"

She ceased, heaving breath catching in her throat, looking from one to the other as they watched her in dumb amazement. Before they could speak to stop her she had gone.

CHAPTER XIX.

RUSHING WATERS.

That was the strangest night in Buck's life. Alone in his cabin he lay sleepless, thinking of all that Jess Kilrain's impassioned action might mean. As he lay there thinking, the soft night air coming in upon him from the sleeping plains, the arguments Worthing had used recurred to Buck.

In reality what he had done had been justified—how much so Jess's recital had made horribly clear Wearied out at last by the circling of his thoughts, Buck fell asleep.

Though he did not know it then, Jess had won

She took her victory as a matter of course—so far, at least, as her outward behavior showed. She evaded meeting Buck all she could and, as the days went by her bearing fell once more almost into its accustomed manner—almost, yet not altogether. She never quarreled with Buck now. She never teased him. Oftentimes, restless and dissatisfied himself, the young fellow wished she had In some subtle way she had receded from him into a more unapproachable distance

In truth, Jess was on guard A wonderful thing had happened to her. Even in that shocked moment when she had stood looking down upon Blass Cardross' dead body it had been of Buck that she had thought. He had saved her He was thereby himself in danger

Strang nameless emotions stirred in her heart as she had watched him, so clean and capable, so fine and human, so wholly hers in his love. The scales had fallen from her eyes, yet even as her admiration had grown and that first sweet, wild sense of her power over his power, fear had grown, too, in Jess Kilrain's awakened heart.

So Jess had ridden from him that day, her soul in a tumult of feelings of which not the least were the wonder and marvel at herself for her blindness, her folly, the new, quick bounding capacity within her for joy that seemed to be sweeping her off her feet, a sudden zest for life which not even the thought of death as she had just seen it, avenging and terrible, could serve to daunt

Yet her fear daunted it, and even before the news of the dire results of Buck's exploding of the dam became known, Jess had determined she would plead with him through his love for her to be silent about Cardross' death

She had been quick to avail herself of the impression that had at once established itself in every one's mind as to the source of that explosion, and she had likewise been quick to see that Buck was not going to take shelter under it So she had gone to Worthing

Her action there had come at the moment's inspiration Love and life were in the balance, and Jess threw in her woman's soul to give full measure She had won, as she knew she would Then having won, Jess drew her woman's caution about her drew [illegible] because of the exposure [illegible]

I'm a man he said, his voice muffled Twarn't all done for you, Jess for you an me

Instinctively the girl drew back, sudden fear in her dark eyes—fear not alone of him and, therefore, the more baffling to Buck

Quickly his voice rang out in sharp, a armed command, and he sprang forward, seizing with one hand the girl and with the other the startled pony

For God's sake come!' he cried, and pulled them forward

It was in the nick of time There was a crashing, tearing, splashing sound behind them as the ground upon which Jess and her horse had been standing crumbly suddenly and plunged into the river below

Jess Kilrain had never swooned in all of her strong, young life, but now a faintness that was overwhelming claimed her She reeled against her pony, who, still startled, swerved aside, leaving the girl swaying unsteadily Yet even then she lifted a protesting hand as Buck leaped toward her

It is where you belong'" he cried exultant for all his pity as his arms closed about her and her head rested weakly against his breast. "It is where I'm going to hold you, Jess, over my heart forever Hold you till the rivers of hell freeze over an' the little devils go skatin'. Hold you' Don't you hear me, Jess?"

CHAPTER XXI

IN THE WOODS.

The feud between the two ranches did not cease with the death of Blass Cardross, and that it did not do so was due in large measure to the resentment and desire of personal revenge of one man.

That man was the cowpuncher, Bill Grange, who had been taken on the Racoon river outfit upon his dismissal from the Loop. He had always been an unpopular member of the Loop outfit; and though not the sort of man of whom a dangerous criminal is usually made, he was crafty and revengeful over petty affronts.

Buck Brannon had incurred his jealous enmity through Kilrain's marked favor for the younger man.

His one attempt to render himself an object of interest to Jess had been nipped so ruthlessly in the bud that, although Grange had never repeated the audacity, he had never forgotten the discomfiture. He had lent himself readily as an informer to Blass Cardross, and it had been his fate to meet disaster once again through Jess Kilrain's influence and her father

Therefore, Grange had resolved to harry the Loop to the limit of which he might go with a due regard to his own safety.

In this he succeeded in various ways, nor at first did they at the Loop suspect the source of the annoyances. Cattle rounded up for a certain purpose overnight would be found scattered in wild disorder in the morning

They suspected the Raccoon River sheep dogs, but not as incited thereto by a human marauder

The milk cows turned out overnight in the home runs would come up in the morning to their calves wild eyed and with scant milk, as though they had been chased and terrified, and again suspicion fell on the dogs. Now and then, as of old, the slaughtered carcass of a calf would be discovered, sure sign of the presence on the Loop of a murdering collie.

Then other things happened for which a dog could not be blamed A shelter house near the Raccoon River border burned down. Barbed wire fences were cut and ruined.

The obnoxious sheep again began their invasions, and in one conflict, ensuing between a vicious old ram and a longhorn bull more pugnacious than wary, the bull had been left dead on the field of battle, and his companion herd stampeded across the Owl creek, where a steer breaking over the low bank, had plunged to his death in one of Buck's sunken hogsheads

It was Jess Kilrain who first definitely connected Grange with these and other similar happenings

That autumn morning the girl had ridden out into the woods about the creek where the persimmons, touched by successive frosts, hung luscious upon the trees or were dropping over ripe to the ground Pecan nuts, too, had rewarded her search, and Jess, glorying in the crisp day, happy in her self imposed solitude, hitched her pony to a sapling, and, seating herself by the trunk of a cottonwood, cracked her pecans in a dreamy leisure

She was nursing these days to her heart.

Like a ripening flower, her own love was coming to its perfection She guarded it jealously as yet—guarded it for the fulfillment of its promise. She still held herself aloof from Buck, not in coyness, nor in coquetry but as one lingers on the threshold of a joy almost afraid to profane it by a glimpse within.

She knew she could not continue to hold herself so for long

More than once she had encountered a look of determination in Buck's eyes that had rendered her resistance as water in her veins. Since that day when she had lain in his arms, there would now and then come into his face a hint of conscious mastery that, had he but known it, was as sweet as life to the girl—was life in its tremulous delight and foreshadowing of a glad surrender.

Jess paused with the half of a pecan on the way to her lips, and turned her head slightly

She could almost have been sure she had heard a step in the dead leaves of the woods above her Her pony, with drooping head stood immovable, its ears, which had been indicating the habitual apathy of the cow pony when not in movement, now alert

"What is it, Buster?" she asked, and saw the ears answer at the name

"I reckon it's a rabbit, or a coon, or a possum that can't wait till night to get some of them sugary 'simmons. But it ain't, though'"

There was more than surprise in the sudden decision which, at the same time, brought Jess to her feet

There might have been nothing unusual or to be startled by in the fact of a man being in those woods at that hour, but intuitively the girl felt there was something to cause both surprise and concern in the sudden turning away of the horseman who must have run almost upon her and her pony before aware of their proximity

Something furtive too about the man's action in quickly shifting the object he carried across the saddle horn and his slouching body, gave Jess an unpleasant shock

Bill Grange' she called sharply What are you doin in these woods with that brand on rod'

The man swung the long iron over his shoulder and spun around

What's that to you Jess Kilrain?" he demanded Am I sailin this precious land to ride over it'

Jess climbed the slope that lay between them

I'm not so sure that you ain't Bill Somebody's been sailin' it pretty often ately That's a Raccoon River iron" she said looking sharply from the branding rod to the man's face "What does you need it over on the Loop for?"

The man laughed with a covert insolence

"Time was he retorted, "when you was more interested 'bout the Raccoon River than you was 'bout the Loop T'other way about now, eh, Jess? Other chips to burn'

The girl's face flushed with anger

You hound!" she cried below her breath You sneakin cayute'

He laughed again

Sneakin ain't in your line now eh" he sneered Didn't work no how did it, Jess?" He put his horse in motion I must be movin' on," he said "I'm bound for Shanley's forge'

"You're bound for a halter 'bout your neck'" declared Jess "That's what you're bound for You've stole that brandin' rod from the Raccoon River I wonder why'

'Keep on wonderin', damn you'" Grange cried in sudden fury But keep your wonder to yourself, Jess Kilrain I owes for certain things a'ready Don't you force me to pay There ain't no love lost 'tween me an' any one on the Loop, let alone Buck Brannon an' your father'"

He rode on at that, leaving the girl not a little perturbed and vaguely uneasy Slowly she went back to her waiting horse

Jess did not dream any more that day For a time she sat thinking, more and more convinced that Grange's presence on the Loop boded no good for its interests.

He might have been taking that iron to the forge at the fork of the public roads, but for some reason Jess doubted it.

Suddenly it occurred to her that she might ride that far to see if he had been telling her the truth. She would miss her dinner, but that did not matter. The service she might be rendering her father and Earle Worthing far outweighed that.

She went over to her pony, tightened the loosened cinches, and, getting into the saddle, rode up to the plateau of the plains, turning northward until she might strike the ford, and so on over towards the roads beyond the river.

CHAPTER XXII.

CAUGHT.

For a time Jess saw no living creature on the wide expanse of the prairie. She knew that most of the men that day were far distant on the western ranges, where many head of cattle had been shifted before they should be brought to the more sheltered runs on the nearer approach of the winter.

She forded the creek, and some distance farther on, not, indeed, without some misgiving, for the river still ran high, crossed the Raccoon itself on a much safer ford than the one over which Buck had swam his horse that other day

PATRIOTIC RECITATIONS.

An American Exile.

In Norfolk bay, long years ago, where waved
The nation's flag from mizzen gaff
Of frigate, sloop and other war like craft,
A group of naval officers, assembled
On the flagship's quarter deck, discussed
With earnestness the act by which the state
Of South Carolina annulled
The tariff laws of congress.
The president's prompt act,
Dispatching Scott to Charleston, ordering
The execution of the laws by force,
Had thrilled the nerves of those who bore
Their country's arms.

The naval service boasted many men
Who traced through veins as chivalrous as their series'
The blood of Sumter, Pickens, Hayne,
And other revolutionary patriots;
And, conscious of a lineage illustrious
From those who gave the grand republic birth,
Their minds were often filled with politics
Of state, and thus the acts of courts
And legislatures oft became their theme
In time of peace as much as warlike deeds
Of Neptune
One of these in this debate,
A handsome, sun bronzed officer of most
Commanding mien, became conspicuous
In warm approval of his state's rash act
And censure strong of president
And congress While his flashing eye betrayed
The fierce emotions of his soul, his voice
Rang fearful maledictions: "Curse the country
Whose flag from yonder mizzen floats, the men
Be cursed, who in the name of government
Ignore the rights my native state has held supreme."

Then drawing forth his rapier
As if in frenzied rage "My sword's my own,
My heart is loyal to my native state,
And here I swear, this blade shall ne'er be drawn
But in defense of rights this tyrant thing
Called government, usurps, and those its threats
Would terrify. Its flag be trailed in dust,
The fate of Carthage be its cursed doom,
The memory of its present acts, with those
Who gave them shape, go down in blood and shame"
Such direful imprecations shocked the ears
Of those who heard, and ere the speechless group
Recovered from their blank amaze a young
Lieutenant felled the speaker senseless to
The deck, then, quick before the officer
Commanding, preferred the charge of treason
Court martial trials are speedy in results,
The sentence, novel in its terms, was heard
With unfeigned haughtiness and scorn by him
Whom it deprived of country
"The prisoner, hence, for life, shall be consigned
To vessels cruising in a foreign sea;
No tongue to him shall speak his country's name,
Nor talk to him of aught save daily wants,
And ever to his sight that country's flag
Shall be he token that its powers live
To carry out this sentence

In far off seas, away from kindred hearts
And native home, the years passed slowly on,
But pride and stubborn will did not desert
This strange misguided man, his fate he seemed
To cherish for the cause he still believed
Would triumph in the end
Yet to and fro his narrow bounds he paced
Alone amid a frigate's crew, of whom
Not one could speak to him a friendly word,
Nor tell him of that wondrous growth and fame
The land he cursed attained among
The nations of the earth No cheering word
His yearning heart in time could e'er expect
From stricken mother, weeping wife, and babes
By him made worse than orphans, who might blush
To call him father. Still, above, around,
In sportive play, the flag he madly cursed, as star
By star was added to its field of blue,
In gorgeous folds waved kindly o'er his head,
As if forgiving his ingratitude

And now, as other years rolled sadly by,
And he was passed from ship to ship, as each
In turn went home, the lines of grief and frosts
Of age bore silent evidences of slow decay
In time his face was marked with pensive cast,
A harbinger of sad, repentant thought.
A sailor, unperceived, took note of him,
And oft observed him watch the waving flag
With strange emotion. And once his lips
Were seen to move: "Thou ever present curse,
Reminding me of what I am, of what I've lost. Thou Nemesis of nature's wrongs!
For that I've sinned against my birth, my soul's
Remorse affirms. How long ere nature's laws,
More kind than human heart, will free my eyes
From thee, thou venegful witness of my shame?
I'd tear thee from thy staff—but when I think
Of all the tears thou'st witnessed in these eyes,
At first my curses, then my prayers to God,
Of secret thoughts conceived within thy sight,
Thou seems't so much a friend, I would not blot
From out thy field a single star—and yet—and yet—
O soul, when will thy mad resentment cease?"

* * *

Full 30 years had passed since sound
Of friendly voice had filled his ear, and now
He paced another deck than one designed
For heavy armament—a merchant craft,
Commissioned while the navy of war
Were called for duty home to cause
For which this poor [illegible]
His manhood and his life [illegible]
Near set of sun
The cry of "Sail" was heard [illegible]
Against his will, the [illegible] married low.
The startling call [illegible] quarters his ear;
And ere the roll of drum and wain's whirth died away
There came a distant shout roused a hope
He yearned to realize A moment A deaf'ning sound that shook the keel
Awoke his heart with joy and hailed
The truth. The land his land now at war
The foe—his name, it mattered him—
Had struck the challenge blow filled his soul
With fire.
O love of country! lasting as
The faith of childhood. stronger than
The love of life—the fear of death
This exiled penitent this prodigal
Without a home, would prove a man'
He cried for help to free him from bonds;
"Ahoy there' Men on deck' For of God
Let me not perish in this cell. the door,
Take off these chains and arm me the fight'
Oh give me air and sight beneath flag.
My blood will wash away my crime But all
Was vain.

A tearing shot that plowed the side
And prison bulkhead made
A passage wide enough through
He sought his wild desire
But ere he reached the deck, had lashed
His ship beside, and countless wild men
Were leaping down among the crew.
Who battled hard, but vain, such odds.

He saw the flag the enemy displaced
A flag unknown, unseen by him
Though strangely like the one cursed—now love]
So much—would die in its defense
He wrenched a cutlass from a hand,
And hewed his way among the pirateers.
Where'er he struck, the way cleared of men
Like wheat before the blade.
strange demean
And antique garb amazed the foe,
It seemed he'd drive the boarders their ship.
At last his wounds o'ercame his failing strength,
And, sinking to his knee was disarmed,
But spared the murderous stroke one who knew
His name and story from a child,
His glazing eye turned wistful to that flag,
Now drooping low, as if to mourn him:
"My country' thou art now avenged my life—
My wasted life—I give to thee thee."

General Wheeler at Santiago.

Into the thick of the fight he went pallid and sick and wan.
Borne in an ambulance to the front
ghostly wisp of a man,
But the fighting soul [illegible]
approved in the long ago,
Went to the front in that ambulance and the body of Fighting Joe.

Out from the front they were borne back, smitten of shrapnel
Wounded boys from the charge and the Alabama [illegible]
"Put them into this ambulance; [illegible] to the front," he said
And he climbed to the saddle and right on, that little old ex-[illegible]

From end to end of the long blue line rose up the ringing cheers
And many a powder blackened face furrowed with sudden tears
As with flashing eyes and gleaming sword, and hair and beard of snow
Into the hell of shot and shell little old Fighting Joe'

Sick with fever and racked with pain
he could not stay away.
For he heard the song of yesterday in the deep mouthed cannon's bay
He heard in the calling song of guns there was work for him to do
Where his country's best blood splashed and flowed 'round the old White and Blue.

Fevered body and hero heart' This tribute's heart to you
Beats out in love and reverence—to each dear boy in blue
Who stood or fell 'mid the shot and shell, and cheered in the face of the foe,
As, wan and white, to the heart of fight rode little old Fighting Joe.

Our Flag.

Now can the world once more the gleam see
Of this our flag, emblem of liberty
Now can the tyrant quake with dire fear
As o'er his land our banners shall appear.

No selfish aim shall lead our arms astray,
No base desire shall point our banners way,
Each star has told a tale of noble deed
Each stripe shall mean from strife nation freed.

Our glorious past when first with thirteen stars
On field of blue with white and bright red bars,
Our flag led on in battle's fierce array
And freed the land from mighty tyrant's sway.

And since this time when first it unfurled.
Our flag has proved the noblest in the world.
From Cuba's shore out to Manila
Its mighty folds protecting fly today.

Beneath this flag with patriotic love
For freedom's cause great men gladly died
Our noblest sons beneath its folds free
In conflict died for Cuba's liberty.

Float on, dear flag, our nation's greatest joy,
Thy starry folds no despot shall destroy;
Stretch out thy arms till war for ever cease,
And all the world is universal peace.

The Heroes of '76.

We are fortunate that we behold this day. The heavens bend benignly over us, the earth blossoms with renewed life and our hearts beat joyfully together with one emotion of filial gratitude and patriotic exultation. Citizens of a great, free and prosperous country we come hither to honor the men, our fathers, who, upon this spot and upon this day a hundred years ago, struck the first blow in the contest which made that country independent. Here, beneath the hills they trod, by the peaceful river on whose shores they dwelt, amidst the fields that they sowed and reaped, proudly recalling their virtue and their valor, we come to tell their story, to try ourselves by their lofty standard to know if we are their worthy children and, standing reverently where they stood and fought and died, to swear before God and each other, in the words of [illegible] whom in our day the spirit of [illegible] ary fathers visibly [illegible] that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth.

This ancient town with its neighbors who share its glory, has never failed to fitly commemorate this great day of its history. Fifty years ago while some soldiers of the Concord fight were yet living, 25 years ago, while still a few venerable [illegible] lingered with prayer and eloquence and song, you renewed the [illegible]. But the last living link with the revolution has long been broken. Great events and a mightier struggle have absorbed our own generation. [illegible] who stand here today [illegible] with the [illegible] which those who [illegible] earlier celebrations could not know. With them war was [illegible] tradition. So swift [illegible] the change and [illegible] the country that [illegible] clash of arms [illegible] unreal and Concord and Lexington seemed to them [illegible] historic as Arbela and Sempach. [illegible] they assembled to celebrate this day they saw a little group of tottering forms, eyes from which the light was fading, arms nerveless and withered, thin white hairs that fluttered in the wind, they saw a few [illegible] of a vanished age, [illegible] that, before living memory [illegible] been minute men of Am[erican Inde]pendence. But with us [illegible] War is no longer a tradition [illegible] mantic and obscure. It has [illegible] how many of our homes. It [illegible] how many of the hearts [illegible] North and south [illegible] Our common liberty [illegible] a common sorrow. We [illegible] around us a few feeble veterans [illegible] contest but we are [illegible] of witnesses. We are surrounded by [illegible] where by [illegible] their prime. Beneath them [illegible] sharing [illegible] rites [illegible]

[illegible] tion shall poison the [illegible] liberty are your [illegible] Concord Bridge [illegible] country and your kind [illegible] your children rise up [illegible] blessed spirit [illegible] the hills out of the [illegible] the clouds pour in [illegible] Fire from every rock [illegible] door and window [illegible] and chamber, hang upon his [illegible] rear from morn to sunset and so, through a land blazing with holy indignation, hurl the hordes of ignorance and corruption and injustice back, back, in utter defeat and ruin.

George William Curtis.

Love of Country.

In these days of rapid national growth when the citizen of today is supplanted by the youth [illegible] emigrant tomorrow [illegible] ters cast their ballots with no higher motive than compliance with a custom or the dictates of party [illegible] when one-fourth of our [illegible] have no stronger ties [illegible] avarice, whose strength [illegible] financial fluctuations [illegible] world when year by year our shores receive the restless [illegible] lands who acknowledge no higher authority than their own [illegible] so many of our youth [illegible] manhood ignorant of everything save the means of licensed indulgences and frivolity our liberty affords [illegible] partakers of the grandest [illegible] heritance ever transmitted from one generation to another [illegible] to forget the fearful responsibilities thrust upon us in our acceptance of the blessings of liberty we enjoy it is time to halt.

"Let us gather the fragments that nothing be lost,
To tell the next ages what liberty cost."

Let us teach the coming citizen that next to the love of God implanted at the mother's knee and cultivated by daily acts of piety and benevolence is the love of country, its flag the martyrs who fell in its defense, and last, but greatest of all, an abiding faith in its institutions and an undying devotion to its peace, happiness and perpetuity. Let the examples of patriots in deeds of heroism and self sacrifice, be our theme of meditation and discussion. Let our literature gleam with the noble efforts, the grand achievements of those who gave their all that we, their dependents, might taste the sweets of freedom undisturbed.

Let us realize that this grandest heritage of earth's martyrs came to us, not alone through the business tact and prudent foresight of our sires, but by years of toil and suffering, of cold and hunger, of want and privation and by the generous sacrifice of precious blood; and that, though it be vouchsafed to us through blessings of a noble ancestry, its possession implies no permanence to an unworthy race.

It is ours, not alone to enjoy but to foster and protect, ours to guard from schism, vice and crime, ours to purify, exalt, ennoble, ours to prepare a dwelling place for the purest, fairest, best of earth's humanity.

History of Our Flag.

The history of our glorious old flag is of exceeding interest, and brings back to us a throng of sacred and thrilling associations. The banner of St. Andrew was blue, charged with a white altier or cross, in the form of the letter X, and was used in Scotland as early as the 11th century. The banner of St. George was white, charged with the red cross, and was used in England as early as the first part of the 14th century. By a royal proclamation dated April 12, 1700, these two crosses were joined together upon the same banner forming the ancient national flag of England.

It was not until Ireland, in 1801, was made a part of Great Britain, that the present national flag of England, so well known as the Union Jack was completed. But it was the ancient flag of England that constituted the basis of our American banner. Various other flags had indeed been raised at other times by our colonial ancestors. But they were not particularly associated with or at least were not incorporated into and made a part of the destined "Stars and Stripes."

It was after Washington had taken command of the first army of the revolution at Cambridge, that he unfolded before them the new flag of 13 stripes of alternate red and white, having one of its corners the red and white crosses of St. George and St. Andrew on a field of blue. And this was the standard which was borne into the city of Boston when it was evacuated by the British troops and was entered by the American army. [illegible] as it did the flags of England and America it showed that the colonists were not yet prepared to [illegible] the tie that bound them to the [mother count]ry. By that union of [illegible] claimed to be a vital and [integra]l part of the empire of Great [Britain an]d demanded the rights and privileges which such a relation im[plied. Y]et it was by these 13 stripes [illegible] made known the union also [illegible] the stripes of white [illegible] purity and innocence of [illegible] and the stripes of red giv[illegible] to cruelty and oppo[ssion.]

[illegible] of June 1777 it was [illegible] That the flag of [illegible] be 13 stripes al[ternate red and w]hite and the union [illegible] stars in the blue field. Here the 13 stars were arranged in a circle as we some[times see] them now in order better to [illegible] the union of the states.

[illegible] having been two more [illegible] added to the union it was [illegible] stripes as well [illegible] be 15 in number, [and the] flag was thus altered and en[l]arged was the one which was borne [illegible] the war of [illegible] that the flag [illegible] me too large if a [illegible] added with [illegible] It was there[illegible] that a perma[nent] [illegible] be made to the [illegible] 13 stripes and the [illegible] henceforth [illegible] the growing number [illegible]

[illegible] of Saratoga [illegible] Mon[illegible] Lin[illegible] New Orleans at Buena [illegible] It is the same [illegible] with [illegible] of Lawrence. Don't [illegible] was hoisted on Lake [Erie b]y Commodore Perry just on the [eve o]f his great naval victory—the same old flag which our great chieftain bore in triumph to the proud city [of the] Aztecs and planted upon the heights of her national palace. Brave hands raised it above the eternal regions of ice in the Arctic seas and have set it up on the summits of the lofty mountains of the distant west.

Where has it not gone, the pride of its friends and the terror of its foes? What countries and what seas has it not visited? Where has not the American citizen been able to stand beneath its guardian folds and defy the world? With what joy and exultation seamen and tourists have gazed upon its stars and stripes, read in it the history of their nation's glory, received from it [a] [illegible] sense of security and drawn from it the inspirations of patriotism! [illegible] how many have sworn fealty to their country.

What bursts of magnificent eloquence it has called forth from Webster and from Everett! What lyric strains of poetry from Drake and Holmes. How many heroes its folds have covered in death! How many have lived for it and how many have died for it! How many, living and dying have said in their enthusiastic devotion to its honor, like that young wounded sufferer in the streets of Baltimore, "Oh, the flag! the Stars and Stripes," and wherever that flag has gone it has been the herald of a better day, it has been the pledge of freedom, of justice, of order, of civilization and of Christianity. Tyrants only have hated it and the enemies of mankind alone have trampled it to the earth. All who sigh for the triumph of truth and righteousness love and salute it.

Our Centennial Celebration.

Extract of a speech delivered by the Hon. Orestes Cleveland at the closing of the preliminary session of the Centennial commission.

Fellow Commissioners: When we were welcomed in Independence hall, and again in visiting old Carpenters' hall, I was impressed with the grand and glorious memories clustering round about Philadelphia, all pointing with solemn significance to the occasion we are preparing to celebrate. May we all have light and strength to appreciate that occasion as it approaches. No such family gathering has ever been known in the world's history and we shall have passed away and been forgotten when the next one recurs. May we be permitted to rise up to the grandeur and importance of the work before us, so that the results and lessons of our labor may bless and last until our descendants shall celebrate in a similar manner the next centennial.

The vast and varied and marvelous results of inventive industry from all the world shall gather here; and it is fitting—for here, upon this continent, in this new country, under the fostering care of the wise and beneficent provisions of our patent laws, the inventive genius of the age finds her most congenial home. From the international exhibition of 1876 the education of skilled labor, in this country, at least, is to take a new departure, and we hope the effect will be felt also, in some measure, by every civilized nation.

Here will be spread out before us the manufactures of Great Britain, the source of all her power. From France will come articles of taste and utility, exquisite in design and perfect in execution. From Russia, iron and leather no nation has yet learned to produce. From Berlin and Munich, artistic productions in iron and bronze. From Switzerland, her unequaled wood carvings and delicate watch work. From Bohemia shall come the perfection of glass blowing, and musical instruments from the Black Forest.

From the people of poor old Spain, to whose daring and public spirit nearly four centuries back we owe the possibilities of this hour, shall come the evidence of aforetime greatness, now unhappily faded away for the want of education amongst the mass of her people. From Nineveh and Pompeii the evidences of a buried past. The progress of the applied arts will be shown from all Europe. From China, her curious workmanship, the result of accumulated ingenuity reaching back beyond the time when history began. Matchless woodwork from Japan, and from far India her treasures rare and wonderful. Turkey and Persia shall bring their gorgeous fabrics to diversify and stimulate our taste. The queen of the east, passing the Suez canal, shall cross the great deep and bow her turbaned head to this young giant of the west, and he shall point her people to the source of his vast powers—the education of all her people.

One of our noted orators said before us the other night such evidence as he could gather of the lost arts of the ancients, and he demands to know what we have to compensate us for the loss. I claim that we have produced some things, even in this new country, worthy of that orator's notice. Instead of tearing open the bosom of mother earth with the root of a tree, that he may feed upon the bounties of nature as the ancients did, the green covering rolls away with the perfection and grace of art itself from the polished moulding board of the Pittsburgh steel plow. Machinery casts abroad the seed and a reaping machine gathers the harvest. Whitney's cotton gin prepares the fiber. Lyall's positive motion loom takes the place of the old wheel and a sewing machine fits the fabric for the use of man. What had the ancients, I demand to know, that could compensate them for the want of these American inventions? I do not speak of the American telegraph or steam power that we have [illegible] more than all other nations put [toget]her in reaching its possibilities. The Magi of the east never dreamed, in the wildest frenzy of their beautiful [illegible] of the wonders of these!

Next year it will become the duty of the federal government to make the international exhibition known to other countries to the end that all civilized people may meet with us in 1876 [illegible] in the progress [illegible] It is our duty [illegible] own prop[le] [illegible] know that [illegible] hearts [illegible] of our [illegible]

The same may be said of the entire movement.

[illegible] Spanish fashion [illegible] the cool, deliberate Yankee work. The American squadron was without sentiment apparently. The ships went at their Spanish opponents and literally [illegible] them to pieces. Admiral Cervera was taken aboard the Iowa from the Gloucester, which had rescued him, and he was received with a full admiral's guard. The crew of the Iowa crowded aft over the turrets, half naked and black with powder, as Cervera stepped over the side bareheaded. The crew cheered vociferously. The admiral submitted to the fortunes of war with a grace that proclaimed him a thoroughbred.

The officers of the Spanish ship Vizcaya said they simply could not hold their crews at the guns on account of the rapid fire poured upon them. The decks were flooded with water from the fire hose, and the blood from the wounded made this a dark red. Fragments of bodies floated in this along the gun deck. Every instant the crack of exploding shells told of new havoc. The torpedo boat Ericsson was sent by the flagship to the help of the Iowa in the rescue of the Viscaya's crew. Her men saw a terrible sight. The flames, leaping out from the huge shot holes in the Viscaya's sides, licked up the decks, sizzling the flesh of the wounded who were lying there shrieking for help. Between the frequent explosions there came awful cries and groans from the men pinned below. This carnage was chiefly due to the rapidity of the American fire.

From two six-pounders 400 shells were fired in 50 minutes. Up in the tops the marines banged away with one-pounders, too excited to step back to duck as the shells whistled over them. One gunner of a secondary battery under a 12-inch gun was blinded by smoke and saltpetre from the turret, and his crew were driven off, but sticking a wet handkerchief over his face, with holes cut for his eyes, he stuck to his gun.

Finally, as the six-pounders were so close to the eight-inch turret as to make it impossible to stay there with safety, the men were ordered away before the big gun was fired, but they refused to leave. When the three-inch gun was fired, the concussion blew two men of the smaller gun's crew 10 feet from their guns and threw them to the deck as deaf as posts. Back they went again, however, and were again blown away from their stations. Such bravery and such dogged determination under the heavy fire were of frequent occurrence on all the ships engaged.

Astronomers are already beginning to make plans for observing the total eclipse of the sun which will occur June 8, 1918. The path of totality extends diagonally across the whole United States, as the shadow, after crossing the North Pacific ocean, will enter the country in the neighborhood of Chehalis, Wash.; pass over Baker City, Ore.; Hailey and Montpelier, Id.; Rock Springs, Wyo.; Steamboat Springs, Central City, Golden and Denver, Colo., Lakin and Ashland, Kan.; Enid, Okla.; Jackson, Miss., and Orlando, Fla. Along the easterly part of the route the sun will be too near setting for the best observations.

Shehi, kaswa and kvass are the three staple dishes of the Russian peasant, yet death by choking is not inordinately frequent. In fact, these raucous libels are attached to such simple things as porridge, stewed cabbage and a mild, homebrewed refreshment.

"Strike three," said the umpire. "Batter up!"

"Whaddye mean, out?" protested the batter. "Yuh big stiff, that last one was a mile outside."

"You're fined ten dollars," said the umpire. "Do you understand that?"

"Sure, I get you now. Money talks."

The Wheat Yield Tells the Story

of Western Canada's Rapid Progress

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The heavy crops in Western Canada have caused new records to be made in the handling of grains by railroads. For, while the movement of these heavy shipments has been wonderfully rapid, the resources of the different roads, despite enlarged equipments and increased facilities, have been strained as never before, and previous records have thus been broken in all directions.

The largest Canadian wheat shipments through New York ever known are reported for the period up to October 15th, upwards of four and a quarter million bushels being exported in less than six weeks, and this was but the overflow of shipments to Montreal, through which point shipments were much larger than to New York.

Yields as high as 60 bushels of wheat per acre are reported from all parts of the country; while yields of 45 bushels per acre are common.

Thousands of American farmers have taken part in this wonderful production. Land prices are still low and free homestead lands are easily secured in good localities, convenient to churches, schools, markets, railways, etc.

There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

A. E. Baumgardner, sheriff of Hancock county, was up from Garner Thursday transacting official business. Mr. Baumgardner is a candidate for renomination for another term, on the republican ticket at the June primaries. Mr. Baumgardner has shown marked ability in administering the affairs of his office and it would seem that the voters of our adjoining county will accord this popular official another term, and there is no reason why he should not be accorded the same as that of his predecessor in office. Mr. Baumgardner has always been found accomodating and efficient in all his official duties and he has many friends accross the line in the vicinity of Forest City who are warmly advocating his candidacy for another term, for the reason above stated and also for the further fact that he is the only east end candidate and it would seem that he would recieve the unanimous support in the east part of Hancock county.—Winnebago Republican

He was picked up and taken to his room and told to remain but he again wandered on the street and was again taken in hand and landed in jail. At first Nelson was surly and refused to tell but after being informed of the law he admitted that Carl Raw had purchased it for him. Carl was then taken in hand and after considerable questioning admitted that one Earl Sweet was the man who sold the shiskey Mr. Sweet was then arrested and brought to trial Monday before Mayor Meyer on information filed by Marshall Raw on charges being the violation of section 2452 of the supplement to the Iowa Code, known to most people as bootlegging Clay attorney Hasmus appeared for the state and John Hannon appeared as attorney for defendant Mr Sweet waived examination and was bound over to the grand jury being released on bond of $300 to insure his appearance Charges are frequently made by Britt citizens of bootlegging and this is a Mr. [illegible] backing of every law abiding citizen, Nelson whose actions led to this capture left town before his case was disposed of but will probaly return and if he does will recieve the further attention of the local officers.

Four Inch Tires

HERE is another Overland Model. A brand new car at a brand new price. Many people prefer a car with the advantages of the larger and higher priced cars but that is smaller, lighter and more economical to run.

Model 75 is a comfortable, family car with virtually all the advantages of the very large cars at a price which is well within your reach.

The body is the latest full streamline design with a one-piece cowl.

It is handsomely finished in solid black with bright nickel and polished aluminum fittings.

Five adults can ride comfortably.

The tires are four inch all around because we believe in the advantage of large tires. They insure greater mileage and comfort than can be obtained from the smaller size used on other cars of similar specifications.

The motor is four-cylinder, long stroke bloc type, having a 3¼-inch bore and 5-inch stroke. Horsepower is 20-25. It is of the most modern design.

It has high-tension magneto ignition. This is the kind used on the most expensive cars.

The electric starting and lighting system is one of the most efficient on the market. It is of the two-unit type.

The electric switches are conveniently located on the steering column. This is the same arrangement used on the highest priced cars.

It has the easy working Overland clutch which any woman can operate. The pedals are adjustable for reach. The steering wheel is large and turns easily. The brakes are large and powerful.

The rear springs are the famous cantilever type. These are probably the easiest riding and most shock absorbing springs ever designed. With these springs riding comfort is insured.

It has a one-man mohair top.

In short, there is everything that makes this car up-to-date and comparable with many cars costing considerably more money.

You will be delighted when you see it. And when you ride in it you'll know instantly that this is your ideal of a modern automobile at your idea of a moderate price.

Other Overland models are—Model 83 five-passenger touring car the famous Overland Six seven-passenger touring car $1145. All prices being f. o. b. Toledo.

Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employes, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employes for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railways be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot under existing laws act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or

2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employes are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence.

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employes as wages and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as will protect the interests of the railroad employes, the owners of the railroads and the public

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employes, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employes, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.

As Hoke Hardman gazed fondly into the banker's flustered eyes, the banker took turns gazing from Hoke's steel blue eyes to the muzzle of the 57-calibre Epidemic that was pointed at the end of his expensively tinted nose.

"Gimme that cigar stikin' outa your vest pocket," said Hoke once more. (He had said it first before our story opened.)

"But, my good man," said the banker desperately, "that's a Flora de Dewdrop perfecto and it cost me 35 cents. They only make them every other Thursday in leap year, and this is the last I've got. Take my money, my life—I mean my wife—anything but leave me this cigar!"

"No go, fellah, hand it over!" said the other, and, as the muzzle of the Epidemic pressed against his nose, the banker grudgingly handed over his Flora de Dewdrop.

Once around the corner, the foot pad discovered that he had no match

"Bother," he cursed, and, rapidly whipping out of his vest pocket a pair of green whiskers and a purple mustache, he hastily stuck them on assorted portions of his face and ran to intercept the banker again.

At the entrance of his bank, the Third Cashional, he caught up to him.

"Oh, sir," he whined, "could you spare a poor man a match?"

"Here, you poor devil, is that all you want!" said the generous banker and handed the disguised Hoke a match.

As soon as the banker had disappeared inside the bank, Hoke drew out the Flora de Dewdrop, struck the match, and leisurely lighted up.

LOOK BEFORE YOU LEAP

Three or four mysteriously inspired politicians around the state of Iowa are busy organizing the farmers into taxpayers' leagues. The main purpose of these leagues, as announced in their various sets of resolutions, is to do away with the highway commission because of its "enormous" expense.

Tax reduction was the cry of the Egyptians when they wanted to remove Ptolemy from his job of being king, and, unto this day it has been a favorite vehicle upon which a certain calibre of politicians have endeavored to ride into public office

In Iowa today, Messrs. Doran, Pitt, and others, are demanding the elimination of the highway commission, as a material reduction in taxes.

But, do the farmers of Iowa realize that if Messrs. Doran and Pitt are successful in getting into the next Iowa legislature a majority of tax reductionists (and if they get there themselves), and, if they abolish the highway commission, that the actual reduction of taxes to the average farmer, by reason of all this wonderful reform, will be about twenty-five cents a year.

A great many of these well-intending farmers are paying $1 a year as dues into these taxpayers' leagues in order to effect this reduction in taxes, which amounts to only twenty-five cents a year Spending a dollar in an effort to save twenty-five cents is bad economy

The total amount of taxes collected in Iowa last year was a trifle in excess of $47,000,000 The total cost of the highway commission, including salaries, expenses, and everything else was approximately $80,000 Now, $80,000 is just about one-sixth of one per cent of $47,000,000, therefore, if all this hubbub about tax reduction is successful and Iowa is relieved of the scientific and technical co-operation of a corps of expert road and bridge engineers, the average farmer of the state of Iowa will notice a reduction in taxes of just one-sixth of one per cent, or twenty-five cents.

A farmer living in Scott county, and owning 234 of the best acres of land in the world, came into the offices of the Greater Iowa Association, at Davenport, the other day and said he had joined one of the taxpayers' leagues, believing that what Mr Doran, Mr Pitt and others said about tax reduction was correct It so happened, however, that this particular farmer was one of those business men who thinks for himself He had attended a meeting at Tipton where Mr. Pitt, in high-flung wrathful oratory had declared the highway commission was costing the taxpayers of the state the "tremendous" amount of $80,000 a year

And so this farmer wanted to know how much he would save if this $80,000 expense was eliminated He brought along his tax receipts and they showed that his total taxes amounted to $247.94, including a school tax of $105.07. Hee figured out for himself that the elimination of the highway commission would reduce his taxes just forty-one cents a year, and he left the offices, after having signed an application blank for membership in the Greater Iowa Association ,and declared his intentions to renounce the taxpayers' league.

This farmer saw thru the political scheming and the misrepresentation that is being indulged in by these who would set Iowa back twenty years in the matter of road building.

Before the fall elections roll around a great many farmers in Iowa are going to figure this thing out the same way. What the farmers of Iowa want, is not necessarily a reduction of taxes, but they want a dollar's worth of service or of material for every dollar of tax money spent.

CORN CAMPAIGN THROUGH SCHOOLS

Iowa school children will next fall be utilized in waging the most comprehensive seed corn campaign ever conducted in this state.

A. M. Deyoe, state school superintendent, has promised his co-operation in urging every pupil in the state to take part in the extensive campaign to be conducted by the agricultural extension department at Iowa State college.

"If each pupil of school age would select early and store properly a bushel of seed corn, enough seed would be insured to plant 2-3 of the entire corn acreage of the state. The value of the corn produced from this amount would amount to over $100,000,000

KNOCKING THE KNOCKER

"Knocking the Knocker" is another pastime which apparently affords us much satisfaction, if not amusement.

Every town has its knocker, and just as sure as he gets out his hammer he finds the community maul pounding away at him. It is a case of the survival of the fittest, and ofttimes the professional knocker is the worse knocked of all.

Some knock from the love of it, others from habit, while a few, it seems, knock for the pure cussedness of it. In any case they knock, and, likewise, they are promptly knocked in return.

Knocking, forsooth, is a great game, and everybody plays it these days. We, in fact, are doing a little of it ourself.

The dangers of wood alcohol are just now attracting much attention, not only on the part of the public, but also of legislative bodies. A note in public health reports records the progress of the campaign against this substance during the year of 1915. The National Association of Retail Druggists adopted a resolution opposing the use of wood alcohol in medicinal preparations to be used by human beings, and in favor of such labeling as would protect the public against its harmful use. Two states, New Hampshire and South Dakota, each enacted a law restricting the sale of wood alcohol and prescribing a form of label to be used. The South Dakota law debars its use in any food, drink, medicine or toilet preparation intended for human use internally or externally. The cities of New York, Chicago, and Montclair, N. J., have adopted regulations or ordinances restricting its use.

Prizes aggregating $2,100 have been offered by the national Americanization committee in a contest for plans for the housing of immigrants in industrial towns. Two groups of prizes are offered. The first covers plans for the housing of workmen in industrial communities not exceeding a population of 5,000. Entries may include designs for single family houses, combined family and lodging houses, which will permit separation of the family from the lodgers or boarding houses or community dwellings for numbers of single men or single women. The first prize in this group is $1,000, the second $500 and the third, fourth and fifth, $100 each. The second group of prizes is offered for a satisfactory substitute for the derailed freight and cattle cars now used to house construction gangs on railways. In this group the first prize is $200 and the second prize $100.

A phonograph, recently constructed by a high school boy and described in the Popular Science Monthly, has as its reproducing part nothing more pretentious than an ordinary shingle, with the point of a darning needle securely fastened in one corner. A steel knitting needle, clamped in a laboratory ring-stand, is thrust through a hole in the shingle to support it as it is carried over the record. The record is mounted on a wooden turntable constructed as follows: A disk, made of three-quarter inch wood, with a groove in the edge, is mounted on the hub and axle of an old bicycle wheel, so that it can turn easily. This is connected with an ordinary battery motor by means of a cord belt. Pressure of the thumb and finger on the shaft of the motor regulates the speed of the disk. [illegible] It has been prominently suggested that a belt line road be built around the United States, near the seacoast. Such a road would be of undoubted value, but enthusiasts in this direction apparently lose sight of the fundamental fact that either for war or peace, we need good roads everywhere. Another lesson that can be drawn from the experience of Europe of late is so to build the roads that they will stand up in time of need. If our special war roads were built by the average county official they would probably not survive actual war conditions over a week.

Devout Roman Catholics often enjoy a whimsical joke on themselves as this story from a good-humored ecclesiastic indicates. Lay readers are sometimes employed to read aloud to an assembly of the religious in a monastery. In one such case the reader (not a learned man) was reading an account of missionary work. He came to this sentence: 'So the Jesuit returned from China with his Mss.' He rendered it thus: 'So the Jesuit returned from China with his missis.' The hearty roars of laughter from the brothers would have done credit to a group of the worldly minded.

Within easy walking distance of the old cathedral town of Chichester, England, is the Rising Sun in North Bersted, a house of interest to all who collect stamps. This small inn contains a room every inch of which is covered with postage stamps. Ceiling, walls, doors, chairs, tables, picture frames, every part of the room except the floor is thickly covered, while from the ceiling hang long festoons and ropes, made of bundles of stamps for which there is no other place. Fully 2,000,000 stamps are pasted up and 1,000,000 more hang in the festoons.

Advocating the increased use of paper appliances and utensils in the household a writer in Good Health says that there are now about 50 household articles made from vegetable parchment paper, among them ice blankets, dishcloths, bed protectors, etc. The housekeepers who have learned to use these articles the writer avers say that they could not possibly do their work comfortably without them.

IOWA STATE NEWS.

FORMER DUBUQUE TELLER ADMITS EMBEZZLEMENT.

Dubuque, Ia., June 10.—Frank J. Neuwoehner appeared before Judge Robert Bonson in the district court and entered a plea of guilty to the charge of embezzlement. He will be sentenced next Monday.

Neuwoehner was a teller in the German Trust and Savings bank, of this city. An illness of a few days' duration last fall caused him to be away from the bank and another man was in his place. Slight discrepancies, accidentally discovered, led to closer examination of his accounts, and the discovery that he was short several thousand dollars. Well to do relatives were about to make the shortage good when Neuwoehner disappeared, was gone for about 10 days, when he returned as mysteriously as he had disappeared, saying he had been to Oklahoma and back to Chicago. He then openly admitted that his shortage was something more than $10,000. He also admitted a shortage of about $8,000 with the St. Aloysius society, a Catholic benevolent and insurance organization, of which he was secretary.

CLAIMS WIFE IS BIGAMIST AND APPLIED FOR DIVORCE.

Des Moines, Ia., June 10.—W. D. Cormac claims to have discovered that his supposed wife, acquired three years ago, has an undivorced husband living. On that basis he has applied for court release.

The rude awakening and discovery that his wife had never been divorced from her real husband came three days ago, according to allegations in a petition filed in Polk county district court. He has been granted a temporary injunction restraining his supposed wife from withdrawing $2,000 from the People's Savings bank of this city.

Cormac, who is 45 years old, inherited considerable money from his father, the late W. H. Cormac, who was engaged in the coal business here. The woman in the case is five years his junior. Her lawful husband, J. W. Brown, is now living in Oklahoma, it is claimed.

CHEROKEE WILL HAVE TRYOUT ON STRONGEST SUNDAY LAWS.

Cherokee, Ia., June 10.—On Sunday, June 11, Cherokee is to have its first experience with the new Sabbath observance ordinance recently adopted by the city council. The ordinance is modeled on the state "blue law" and prohibits "dancing, hunting, shooting, horse racing, or in any manner disturbing a worshiping assembly or private family, or buying or selling property of any kind or any labor except that of necessity or charity." The city administration is committed to strict enforcement of the ordinance, but there is doubt as to how liberally it will construe the exemption of labor of necessity. The understanding is that restaurants will be allowed to serve meals, but that the after dinner cigar will be tabooed and the evening chocolate sundae will be strictly under ban. There is some wonderment over whether the delivery of Sunday newspapers will be permitted. There probably will be a test of the [illegible] city of the ordinance.

TRAIN STRIKES AUTO AND KILLS TWO OMAHA WOMEN

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 10.—Mrs. Arthur Storz, [illegible] years old, and Mrs. W. J. Bartlett, 26, sister, were killed and Miss Nora Hart, 18, another sister, all of Omaha, and Miss Lillian Jensen [illegible] Mrs. Storz, were badly injured when an automobile driven by Mrs. Storz was hit by an eastbound Rock Island passenger train last evening, three miles east of Council Bluffs.

Mrs. Storz had driven to Macedonia with the other women, expecting to get her husband, who was injured in the accident in which Mr. R[illegible], Cadillac agent at Omaha, was probably fatally injured yesterday afternoon. Mr. Storz had been taken by another route to Omaha in an ambulance and the women did not meet the party.

They were driving back when the train containing the women was hit. Engineer J. Jordan, of Valley Junction, told Coroner Cutler that the woman driving the car had stopped the machine and started it up again, apparently believing she could cross ahead of the train.

CANDIDATES ARE FILING CAMPAIGN STATEMENTS

Des Moines, Ia., June 10.—The Cosson for governor campaign cost about $2,500. Although Attorney General Cosson has not filed his expense account with the state, he said that he has expended not more than this amount.

According to one report which reached the state house today, $9,000 was sent to one of the Des Moines banks recently from Sioux City to be used in the Harding campaign and all of it was expended.

W. D. Evans, candidate to succeed himself as justice of the supreme court, spent $125 during the campaign, his expense statement shows. Clem Kimball of Council Bluffs, did not spend a cent getting the nomination again for state senator. John W. Foster, of Guthrie Center, spent $87 on the campaign in which he was renominated for senator.

LITTLE GIRL THOUGHT TO BE LAST OF WRECK VICTIMS

Green, Ia., June 10.—The body of Opal Robinson, of Sterling, Ill., which is thought to be the last among the missing of the Rock Island wreck, which occured near Packard Friday morning, was found Wednesday morning beneath one of the steel girders of the bridge. Her father, who also lost his wife in the wreck, has been here conducting the search day and night for the body of the little girl. Many of the local people have been assisting in the search, and it was not until this steel girder had been raised that the body was found.

DES MOINES—About 400,000 rural telephone poles in Iowa will be replaced by new poles 25 feet long, at a cost of $2,000,000, if the Iowa supreme court decision in the injunction case of Ernest Wegner against Joseph Kelly, of Sac City, is upheld on appeal. So state attorneys for Kelly in applying for a rehearing. The court reversed the Sac county district decision and held that telephone companies must maintain lines on highways so that a vehicle may pass without hindrance.

Fire Hatches Eggs.

Discovering a crow's nest atop a hemlock tree, Fritz H[illegible]r climbed skyward 60 feet and got the three eggs in the nest. He placed the eggs in the pockets of his coat and, on reaching home, hung the coat near the open fireplace, in which large chunks of wood are burned all night in sour weather.

The next morning he heard a peculiar noise emanating from his coat, and on investigation found two young crows in his pocket. The third egg did not hatch out. This all happened at Winsted, Conn.

WILSON TO DWELL ON PEACE RECORD

Democratic Platform to Emphasize Fact He Has Kept Country Out of War and Maintained Honor.

Washington, June 10.—The outcome of the administration's efforts to keep the United States out of war and at the same time maintain the national honor will be the foundation of the foreign affairs plank and one of the emphasized points in the platform to be adopted by the democratic national convention at St. Louis, according to authoritative statements obtained from administration sources.

The renomination of President Wilson and Vice President Marshall is regarded as assured. The platform now is receiving the chief attention of the democratic leaders.

As a result of conferences with members of the cabinet and other advisers, President Wilson, who personally began work several days ago on a platform to be submitted to the convention by party leaders virtually has completed a preliminary draft leaving only details to be finished after the republican and progressive conventions at Chicago. The president has utilized as a basis for his work, features of the Missouri state democratic platform, which was prepared by officials made known, under the direction of the White House.

To Reassert Neutrality.

Following out this idea, it is understood that the national platform will point to the success of the administration in guarding the honor and interests of the United States in face of obstacles and at the same time keeping the nation at peace. The administration's championship against all belligerents of the rights of America and all neutrals on the high seas will be raised with the statement that the results will be of great importance to American commerce.

The Mexican situation will be referred to by praise of the president's action in refusing to allow the nation to be drawn into the internal strife raging in Mexico and his prompt action in ordering troops across the border after the Columbus massacre.

Another section is expected to laud the administration for maintaining the Monroe doctrine, and fostering a fair dealing with the other republics of the western hemisphere, resulting in the building up of trade with those nations.

Finally, it is understood, the foreign affairs plank will align the party behind the president in placing "America first" with reference to all questions, both international and domestic.

Party's Tariff Record.

The tariff is expected to be the subject of an independent plank, the platform coupling the Underwood revision with the currency law and other conservative legislation of the past four years in a prosperity declaration. President Wilson's preparedness program will occupy another prominent place in the platform.

The slender angular head of the wheat stalk with its needle-like barbs—the characteristic of the American-grown crop—is doomed, if Professor William F. Freedman, graduate of Cornell university, is successful in experiments in wheat production. Professor Freedman has at his disposal wheat

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—The republican state convention will have the task of designating party candidates for attorney general and railroad commissioner as no candidate for either of these offices polled the necessary 35 per cent. George Wilson, present county attorney of Polk county, has the high vote in the primary for attorney general and John A. Guiher, incumbent, is high man for railroad commissioner.

Republican nominations for state offices as made at the primary, are:

Governor—W. L. Harding.

Lieutenant Governor — Ernest R. Moore.

Secretary of State—William S. Allen.

Auditor of State—Frank S. Shaw.

Treasurer of State—W. C. Brown.

On the democratic state ticket there were no contests. The ticket previously arranged by party leaders, and confirmed at the primary, is: Governor, E. T. Meredith, lieutenant governor, James J. Doty, secretary of state, William G. Noth, auditor of state, John B. Keefe, treasurer of state, Herman P. Hansen, attorney general, John F. Clarkson, railroad commissioner, John P. Manatray.

The republican votes cast on the governorship will run very close to 200,000, as against about 133,000 republican votes in the primary two years ago. Harding has approximately 50 per cent of the republican votes, Cosson runs second, Allen a close third, and Kuehnle a weak fourth. On unofficial returns from 94 out of 99 counties the vote on republican gubernatorial candidates is: Harding, 96,939, Cosson, 46,477; Allen, 36,491; Kuehnle, 13,811.

Congressional Contests — In the Tenth district Congressman Frank P. Woods defeated Chris Ottosen. In the First district Congressman Kennedy defeated Clifford Thorne. In the Seventh district Congressman Dowell defeated W. O. Payne. In the Eleventh district George C. Scott defeated Samuel D. Riniker.

EXPENSES GROW UNDER STATE COMMISSION PLAN

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—Iowa spent [illegible] roads and bridges in [illegible] statement published [illegible] highway commission bulletin.

The amount invested in the roads last year has now been definitely determined. The first estimate was $11,000,000. But as the reports of the county engineers were received the [illegible]

The report shows that $6,629,252 went into bridges, $3,403,000 to the county road system and $1,171,000 to the township road system.

In 1914 the state spent $11,601,000 on roads and bridges.

FORMER SPEAKER OF HOUSE AMONG PRIMARY VICTIMS

Allison, Ia., June 7.—Returns from all precincts in Butler county show that William Atkinson, speaker in the house in the last general assembly, was defeated by 15 votes by his opponent, O. J. Mead. The race was one of the most hotly contested in recent years.

Speaker Atkinson was a member of the 34th and 36th general assemblies.

While the returns as hurriedly canvassed in the auditor's office give Mead the nomination, a count of the ballots will be probably asked for by Atkinson.

SCOTT'S MAJORITY OVER RINIKER MAY EXCEED 1,000

With the estimated majorities falling short in Riniker counties previously incomplete and the Scott majorities growing in previously unreported precincts, the majority for Scott in the Eleventh district congressional contest probably will exceed 1,000. The Scott majority of 2,400 in Woodbury county was the outstanding feature of the situation. Outside of Woodbury county the advance estimates on Riniker and Scott strength in the various counties were not seriously disturbed.

JAPAN REMAINS QUIET IN CHINESE CRISIS

Tokio, June 7.—A speciall session of the cabinet was summoned today to consider the situation in China resulting from the death of President Yuan Shi Kai.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the foreign office made a statement to the Associated Press that Japan had decided not to make any new political move in regard to China.

SEEKS NEW TRIAL.

New York, June 7.—Counsel for Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, sentenced to die during the week of July 10 for the murder of his fatherinlaw, John E. Peck, filed a notice of appeal for a new trial today. This action will delay the time of execution.

TRIAL OF CAPTAIN.

Dublin, (via London), June 7.—At today's session of the court martial of Capt. Bowen-Colthurst, who is accused of manslaughter for having caused the execution during the recent rebellion of Sheehy Skiffington, editor of the Irish Citizen, Thomas Dickson and Fred McIntyre, physicians who had examined the defendant, testified he was mentally unstable.

BROWN AND THOMAS MAKE CLOSE FINISH

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—The vote on republican nomination for state treasurer is so close between W. C. Brown, incumbent, and C. H. Thomas that the full and official vote of all counties may be necessary to decide. With precincts missing in a large number of counties reported, the vote between these two candidates is so close that either one may prove to be winner on final count.

RURAL DISTRICTS WILL FIX FATE OF SUFFRAGE

Des Moines, Ia., June [illegible] 50 per cent of the [illegible] reported on the suffrage question [illegible] most entirely to cities and [illegible] result is so close that [illegible] districts will determine the fate of "Votes for Women." Both the pro and "antis" express confidence at the situation, indicating that [illegible] vote is not scientifically and definitely classified on this proposition.

In returns received from counties without large cities the majority has shifted first one way and then the other, making general estimates very difficult.

Practically all of the cities in the state, except Des Moines, gave majorities against suffrage. Clinton, Scott, Dubuque, Des Moines and other river counties went strong against the amendment. Even Linn county registered as an anti.

FEW FIGURES AVAILABLE ON CONGRESSIONAL CONTEST

Rock Rapids, Ia., June 8.—With very incomplete returns at hand this morning on the republican congressional contest in the Eleventh district the Riniker headquarters here believes that S. D. Riniker has defeated George C. Scott, of Sioux City, by a safe majority. On the estimate that Scott will carry Woodbury county by 800 majority the Riniker forces expect to carry at least 10 of the 12 outside counties in the district.

The first county this morning to give returns on republican congressional candidates was Sac, which reported as follows: Riniker, 708; Scott, 639. Lehry vote negligible. In the earlier bulletins from Sac county Scott has a slight lead.

Osceola county will go strong for Riniker. The vote in Sibley precinct was Riniker, 225, Scott, 99, Lehr 1[illegible]

Partial returns show Riniker leading in Buena Vista, Sioux, Clay, Plymouth and O'Brien counties.

Leads for Scott are certain in Woodbury and possibly in Cherokee, Ida and Monona.

Scott headquarters in Sioux City this morning claim that George C. Scott has at least an even break for the republican congressional nomination. Very few figures are available to support any claims or estimates either way.

The Tribune has arrangements in all counties of the district for congressional returns, but these have been delayed by reports from the rural precincts, constituting the bulk of the vote in all counties.

KENNEDY DEFEATS THORNE BY DECISIVE MAJORITY

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—In the First congressional district reports indicate that Kennedy has defeated Thorne about two to one.

An interesting feature of the state returns is the apparent defeat of W. C. Brown for treasurer. Both Thomas and Hoyt are leading him.

Figures from 622 precincts for governor are as follows: Harding, 32,892; Cosson, 19,242; Allen, 16,795, Kuehnle 5,682.

Lieutenant Governor—384 Precincts—Moore, 11,947; Hanna, 10,858, Brady 7,297.

Secretary of State—384 Precincts—Allen, 12,130; Harsselquist 3,978.

Treasurer of State—384 Precincts—Thomas, 6,520; Hoyt, 6,047, Brown 4,906.

Attorney General—384 Precincts—Wilson, 9,609; Havner, 5,849, Sampson 4,948; Robbins, 4,268; Fletcher, 3,33[illegible] Whitmore, 2,334.

SENATOR FRANCIS DEFEATED.

Spirit Lake, Ia., June 8.—Senator Leslie M. Francis, one of the prominent republicans of Iowa, was defeated for renomination at state senator by Adams of Algona.

OOSE WILL WAIT TEST OF STRENGTH

uced By Republicans to Hold f Until G. O. P. Can Get Line on the Candidates, Then Confer Again.

DDY ASKS FOR DELAY

ses Still Hoping to Defeat oth Hughes and Teddy— Believed Justice Will Finally Win.

By JOHN SNURE.
Tribune Headquarters, Congress Hotel.

hicago, June 9.—Here is the situa- according to one of the foremost he peace conferees as it stood this rning

Hughes leaders have had it strongly imated to them in the last 24 hours t in a show down Roosevelt will e Hughes.

While the peace conferees on the bull ose side want Roosevelt, a majority them prefer Hughes to any of the called allies, whether it be Root, eks, Fairbanks, Burton or Sherman. he republican conferees in their sion with the bull moose conferees night told them that even if they e willing to accept Roosevelt they ld not figure a way to get the con- tion to accept him.

Want Test of Strength.

On the other hand they said they had authority to say Hughes was the ongest man before the republican vention. Therefore until there had n a tryout of strength in the repub- n convention it might be well to it.

But they pointed out to the bull ose that the chances were, if the vention started voting, it would be ossible to stop it and it would name ghes on the second or third ballot e conferees agreed to meet again in y event.

Future Program In Dark.

If there has been no nomination by e time they meet, they will try anew work to an agreement on a candi- te. If Hughes has been named by the publicans, the republicans will try get the bull moose to accept him. If ghes has been named by the repub- ans, or some one else, and Roosevelt the bull moose, the effort will be ade to get Roosevelt to decline and ree to Hughes.

If it has developed Hughes cannot be med by the republicans and some e else is stronger in the republican nvention, a new situation will have be met

Roosevelt Urges Delay.

The progressive leaders including rkins, Johnson, Oscar Strauss, Val- nburg and several others conferred is morning among themselves They talked with the colonel over ng distance

It was decided, with the approval of oosevelt, not to allow the bull moose nvention to nominate today if it uld be avoided. It was fully recog- zed that it might be found impossible stem the tide

Colonel Roosevelt passed the word long the line to let the republicans g head and show what they intended to "Give them all the rope they want," as the effect of his mandate.

The leaders said they would try to vent the bull moose naming him be- re the republicans had a chance to ct. They didn't know whether they uld prevent it

Moosers Still Hopeful.

They were pleased with the concilia- ry attitude of the republican con- rees.

Bull moose leaders are apprised that e idea of the republicans nominating oosevelt was making some headway n the republican convention. They ere advised a Roosevelt demonstra- on would be attempted by pro-Roose- t republicans.

If the colonel will make publicly nown that he stands ready to elimi- ate himself for the sake of an agree- ent between the two parties and will y he will support Hughes it will all e over

May Go Right Through.

National Chairman Hilles, who has en in conference with George W. Per- ins and other progressive leaders, id at 1 30 this afternoon he believed he republican convention would stay n session until a nomination had been ade Perkins and other bull moose eaders advised him they would hold ack the bull moose nomination until he republicans had had a chance to ominate. Mr Hilles said there was o understanding as to how many bal- ts would be taken. He believes it uite possible the bull moose conven- ion may endorse a republican nominee if it picks a man satisfactory to Roose- elt.

"I think the republican convention hould sit right here until it nominates onight, no matter how long it takes," aid Mr Hilles.

By reason of the information which eached certain of the bull moose lead- rs from the colonel yesterday morn- ng, pointing to a disposition to sup- ort Hughes, the belief continued trong that the way to harmony would ventually be found through Hughes' omination.

This was the case despite the fact hat the peace committees named on each side failed last night to reach an greement.

Here Is Situation.

The peace committees were in ses- ion several hours at the Chicago club. While the names of a number of can- idates were considered, the situation which presented itself in a general way was this:

The bull moose conferees wanted oosevelt, and urged his nomination.

The republicans for the most part talked Hughes, though other candi- ates were also discussed.

Fusion could not be agreed on, but it was agreed that the interests the coun- try demanded the defeat of the demo- crats and that there was no essential difference in the purposes of the two parties at this time.

It was decided to report progress to the conventions at the meeting of the two bodies today. It is expected there will be a further meeting after the conventions; but that will depend on the day's developments.

It will not be easy to hold back the radical bull moose from going ahead and nominating Roosevelt, and on the other hand some of the republicans want to go ahead and nominate.

Never Said He Had Information Wilson Planned Peace Mediation

Berlin, Oct. wireless to Sayville, June [illegible] The American [illegible] James W. Gerard, has repudiated an interview recently attributed to him on the subject of President Wilson's peace efforts, the Overseas News agency says.

According to a statement given out by the news agency today a manuscript containing a [illegible] of the spurious interview was submitted to Mr. Gerard with the idea that it was to have been published in the National Zeitung, but the ambassador refused to sanction it. The statement says:

"Ambassador Gerard stated to a staff member of the National Zeitung that he never made the utterances in regard to President Wilson's proposed peace mediation attributed to him and quoted in the recently. The conservative leader Count von Westarp said that Mr Gerard had announced President Wilson's intention to mediate for peace and for this purpose to exert pressure on the belligerents which he (Count von Westarp) was unwilling to agree to."

GRAND JURY BEGINS "L" WRECK INQUIRY

Rear End Collision Will Be Investigated—Tower Man Arrested.

New York, June 10.—A grand jury investigation was begun last night into a rear end collision between two elevated railroad trains in which one person was killed and 15 were injured, some perhaps fatally. Edward Grove, the towerman on duty at the scene of the crash, was arrested on a charge of homicide after a coroner's inquiry. Coroner Flynn announced that Grove admitted the signals were set for the motorman of the rear train to proceed, thus permitting it to crash into the rear of a stalled express train on the Third avenue "L" at One Hundred and Forty-ninth street.

BOOSTERS, SHOVERS, PUSHERS

This town is full of boosters, shovers, and pushers, and each is working valiantly toward a common end. The only difficulty in the accomplishment of definite results as we see it, is that some begin at the bottom and work upward, while others start at the top and slide down.

Thus it is that when the two forces meet there is an inevitable conflict of opinion and resultant confusion ending, as usual, in nothing being done.

It is the law of human nature that the child must first learn to crawl before it can walk, and the corn must sprout before it can grow. In each, you will note, the beginning is at the bottom.

And so it should be with us as a community.

No satisfactory results are ever accomplished when a majority of the people are working at cross purposes, for that which is created by one is dissolved by another.

We have the boosters, the shovers, and the pushers in this community, but what we need is a unity of purpose, each with his eye centered upon the goal ahead and not upon the one behind.

The mule is prone to move backward when its strength and energy is most needed in a strong and determined forward movement. And we, brothers, should not emulate the mule.

It would be a splendid thing for this town if we could get all of the boosters and shovers, and pushers together and fix our minds upon one certain goal, and in each boost side by side and all together as a unit until we attain the desired end. But success will come only by beginning at the bottom and working upward always upward with never a half or backward glance until we reach the top.

In bible times Lot's wife looked back and was turned into a pillar of salt. Now salt is a very useful article, but it does not figure in the scheme of community development.

We do not want any mules or pillars of salt to retard our movement, but we do want men and women of resource and determination who will meet on a common ground and all labor and boost and push and shove in the same direction and to the same end, always forward and upward.

We want to make a bigger and better and more prosperous place of our home community, but it is difficult of accomplishment when so many insist on beginning at the top and sliding downward.

Isn't it possible for us to adopt a different policy, one upon which we may all agree, and in behalf of which we may labor in unison?

There are many and glorious possibilities ahead of us as a commercial and industrial proposition, supplemented by that most reliable of all industries agricultural development and expansion.

Our interests all lie in the future, and not in the buried past and its sorrows and disappointments.

There is life and achievement ahead, but it will require thought, and energy, and unity, and action to accomplish results.

Can we not inject new life into our boosters, and shovers, and pushers? Can we not utilize their wonderful store of intelligence and energy, and perseverance that is now lying dormant?

As one of them, brother, what do you think? What have you to say? WHAT ARE YOU WILLING AND READY TO DO?

O O—O

SIMPLY A CASE OF WHEN

With every mortal in this town of normal intelligence and thinking age it is simply a case of "when."

Some may scoff, others may ridicule this statement, but it is true.

For instance—

Walking in the straight and narrow path is not a matter of compulsion or force of habit. It is done only WHEN we choose to do so.

The inoffensive dog or cat is kicked only WHEN the kicker chooses to descend to the level of the brute.

We go to church WHEN we please, we believe the minister WHEN we choose, and we serve the devil WHEN it strikes our fancy. Habit and necessity have no place in any of these.

We boost for the town WHEN it pleases us, or we knock it WHEN the inclination overtakes us, or we lapse into a state of indifference WHEN our thoughts and desires are dormant.

We are prosperous WHEN we give our best thought and energy to our business affairs, and we enjoy life to the fullest only WHEN we emerge from the shadows and bask in the sunlight of existence.

Go where you please, and view the subject from any angle you choose, in almost every instance life is simply one long case of WHEN.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co. Toledo, Ohio is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

The dangers of wood alcohol are just now attracting much attention, not only on the part of the public, but also of legislative bodies. A note in public health reports records the progress of the campaign against this substance during the year of 1915. The National Association of Retail Druggists adopted a resolution opposing "the use of wood alcohol in medicinal preparations to be used by human beings," and in favor of such labeling as would protect the public against its harmful use. Two states, New Hampshire and South Dakota each enacted a law restricting the sale of wood alcohol and prescribing a form of label to be used. The South Dakota law debars its use in any food, drink, medicine or toilet preparation intended for human use, internally or externally. The cities of New York, Chicago, and Montclair N. J. have adopted regulations or ordinances restricting its use.

Prizes aggregating $2,100 have been offered by the national Americanization committee in a contest for plans for the housing of immigrants in industrial towns. Two groups of prizes are offered. The first covers plans for the housing of workmen in industrial communities not exceeding a population of 5,000. Entries may include designs for single family houses, combined family and lodging houses which will permit separation of the family from the lodgers or boarding houses or community dwellings for numbers of single men or single women. The first prize in this group is $1,000, the second $500 and the third, fourth and fifth, $100 each. The second group of prizes is offered for a satisfactory substitute for the derailed freight and cattle cars now used to house construction gangs on railways. In this group the first prize is $200 and the second prize $100.

A phonograph, recently constructed by a high school boy and described in the Popular Science Monthly, has as its reproducing part nothing more pretentious than an ordinary shingle, with the point of a darning needle securely fastened in one corner. A steel knitting needle, clamped in a laboratory ringstand, is thrust through a hole in the shingle to support it as it is carried over the record. The record is mounted on a wooden turntable constructed as follows: A disk, made of three-quarter inch wood, with a groove in the edge, is mounted on the hub and axle of an old bicycle wheel, so that it can turn easily. This is connected with an ordinary battery motor by means of a cord belt. Pressure of the thumb and finger on the shaft of the motor regulates the speed of the disc. Records can be played backwards simply by twisting the belt.

In the discussion about preparedness it is [illegible] that [illegible] a belt line road is built around the United States, near the seacoast. Such a road would be of undoubted value, but enthusiasts in this direction apparently lose sight of the fundamental fact that either for war or peace, we need good roads everywhere. Another lesson that can be drawn from the experience of Europe of late is so to build the roads that they will stand up in time of need. If our special war roads were built by the average county official they would probably not survive actual war conditions over a week.

Devout Roman Catholics often enjoy a whimsical joke on themselves as this story from a good-humored ecclesiastic indicates. "Lay readers are sometimes employed to read aloud to an assembly of the religious in a monastery. In one such case the reader (not a learned man) was reading an account of missionary work. He came to this sentence: 'So the Jesuit returned from China with his Miss.' He rendered it thus: 'So the Jesuit returned from China with his missus.' The hearty roars of laughter from the brothers would have done credit to a group of the worldly minded.

Within easy walking distance of the old cathedral town of Chichester England, is the Rising Sun in North Bersted, a house of interest to all who collect stamps. This small inn contains a room every inch of which is covered with postage stamps. Ceiling walls, doors, chairs tables, picture frames, every part of the room except the floor, is thickly covered while from the ceiling hang long festoons and ropes, made of bundles of stamps for which there is no other place. Daily 5,000 stamps are pasted up and 100,000 more hang in the festoons.

Advocating the increased use of paper appliances and utensils in the household a writer in Good Health says that there are now about 30 household articles made from vegetable parchment paper among them ice blankets, dishcloths, bed protectors etc. The house keepers who have learned to use these articles, the writer avers, say that they could not possibly do their work comfortably without them.

FORMER DUBUQUE TELLER ADMITS EMBEZZLEMENT.

Dubuque Ia., June 10.—Frank J Neuwoehner appeared before Judge Robert Bonson in the district court and entered a plea of guilty to the charge of embezzlement. He will be sentenced next Monday.

Neuwoehner was a teller in the German Trust and Savings bank, of this city. An illness of a few days' duration last fall caused him to be away from the bank and another man was in his place. Slight discrepancies, accidentally discovered, led to closer examination of his accounts, and the discovery that he was short several thousand dollars. Well to do relatives were about to make the shortage good when Neuwoehner disappeared, was gone for about 10 days, when he returned as mysteriously as he had disappeared, saying he had been to Oklahoma and back to Chicago. He then openly admitted that his shortage was something more than $10,000. He also admitted a shortage of about $8,000 with the St. Aloysius society, a Catholic benevolent and insurance organization, of which he was secretary.

CLAIMS WIFE IS BIGAMIST AND APPLIED FOR DIVORCE.

Des Moines, Ia. June 10.—W. D. Cormac claims to have discovered that his supposed wife, acquired three years ago has an undivorced husband living. On that basis he has applied for court release.

The rude awakening and discovery that his wife had never been divorced from her real husband came three days ago, according to allegations in a petition filed in Polk county district court. He has been granted a temporary injunction restraining his supposed wife from withdrawing $2,000 from the People's Savings bank of this city.

Cormac, who is 45 years old, inherited considerable money from his father the late W H Cormac, who was engaged in the coal business here. The woman in the case is five years his junior. Her lawful husband, J. W. Brown, is now living in Oklahoma, it is claimed.

CHEROKEE WILL HAVE TRYOUT ON STRONGEST SUNDAY LAWS.

Cherokee, Ia. June 10.—On Sunday, June 11, Cherokee is to have its first experience with the new Sabbath observance ordinance recently adopted by the city council. The ordinance is modeled on the state "blue law" and prohibits "dancing hunting, shooting, horse racing, or in any manner disturbing a worshiping assembly or private family, or buying or selling property of any kind, or any labor except that of necessity or charity." The city administration is committed to strict enforcement of the [illegible] but there is doubt as to how liberally it will construe the exemption of labor of necessity. The understanding is that restaurants will be allowed to serve meals but that the after dinner cigar will be tabooed and the evening chocolate sundae will be strictly under ban. There is some wrangling over whether the [illegible] will be allowed. Test cases will be made to test the validity of the ordinance.

TRAIN STRIKES AUTO AND KILLS TWO OMAHA WOMEN

Council Bluffs, Ia. June 10.—Mrs. Arthur Storz [illegible] years old and Mrs. W. J. Lytle [illegible], sisters were killed and Miss Nora Hart, 18, another sister, all of Omaha, and Miss Lillian Jensen, 16 of Audubon and a young child of Mrs. Storz, were badly injured when an auto bus driven by Mrs. Storz was hit by an eastbound Rock Island passenger train last evening, three miles east of Council Bluffs.

Mrs. Storz had driven to Macedonia with the other women expecting to get her husband, who was injured in the accident in which Mr. Roy Cadillac agent at Omaha, was probably fatally injured yesterday afternoon. Mr. Storz had been taken by another route to Omaha in an ambulance and the women did not meet the party.

They were living back when the car containing the women was hit. Engineer J. Jordan, of Valley Junction, told Coroner Cutler that the woman driving the car had stopped the machine and started it up again, apparently believing she could cross ahead of the train.

CANDIDATES ARE FILING CAMPAIGN STATEMENTS

Des Moines, Ia., June 10.—The Cosson for governor campaign cost about $2,500. Although Attorney General Cosson has not filed his expense account with the state, he said that he has expended not more than that amount.

According to one report which reached the state house today, $9,000 was sent to one of the Des Moines banks recently from Sioux City to be used in the Harding campaign and all of it was expended.

A. D. Evans candidate to succeed himself as justice of the supreme court, spent $125 during the campaign, his expense statement shows. Clem Kimball, of Council Bluffs, did not spend a cent getting the nomination again for state senator. John W. Foster, of Guthrie Center, spent $87 on the campaign in which he was renominated for senator.

LITTLE GIRL THOUGHT TO BE LAST OF WRECK VICTIMS

Green, Ia., June 10.—The body of Opal Robinson, of Sterling, Ill., which is thought to be the last among the missing of the Rock Island wreck, which occurred near Packard Friday morning, was found Wednesday morning beneath one of the steel girders of the bridge. Her father, who also lost his wife in the wreck, has been here conducting the search day and night for the body of the little girl. Many of the local people have been assisting in the search, and it was not until this steel girder had been raised that the body was found.

DES MOINES—About 400,000 rural telephone poles in Iowa will be replaced by new poles 25 feet long, at a cost of $2,000,000, if the Iowa supreme court decision in the injunction case of Ernest Wegner against John Kelly, of Sac City, is upheld on appeal. So state's attorneys for Kelly in applying for a rehearing. The court reversed the Sac county district decision and held that telephone companies must maintain lines on highways so that a vehicle may pass without hindrance.

Fire Hatches Eggs.

Discovering a crow's nest atop hemlock tree, Fritz Hafner climbed skyward 60 feet and got the three eggs in the nest. He placed the eggs in the pockets of his coat and, on reaching home, hung the coat near the open fireplace, in which large chunks of wood are burned all night in sour weather.

The next morning he heard a peculiar noise emanating from his coat, and on investigation found two young crows in his pocket. The third egg did not hatch out. This all happened at Winsted, Conn.

WILSON TO DWELL ON PEACE RECORD

Democratic Platform to Emphasize Fact He Has Kept Country Out of War and Maintained Honor.

Washington, June 10.—The outcome of the administration's efforts to keep the United States out of war and at the same time maintain the national honor will be the foundation of the foreign affairs plank and one of the emphasized points in the platform to be adopted by the democratic national convention at St. Louis, according to authoritative statements obtained from administration sources.

The renomination of President Wilson and Vice President Marshall is regarded as assured. The platform now is receiving the chief attention of the democratic leaders.

As a result of conferences with members of the cabinet and other advisers, President Wilson, who personally began work several days ago on a platform to be submitted to the convention by party leaders, virtually has completed a preliminary draft leaving only details to be finished after the republican and progressive conventions at Chicago. The president has utilized as a basis for his work, features of the Missouri state democratic platform, which was prepared, officials made known, under the direction of the White House.

To Reassert Neutrality.

Following out this idea, it is understood that the national platform will point to the success of the administration in guarding the honor and interests of the United States in face of obstacles and at the same time keeping the nation at peace. The administration's championship against all belligerents of the rights of America and all neutrals on the high seas will be praised with the statement that the results will be of great importance to American commerce.

The Mexican situation will be referred to by praise of the president's action in refusing to allow the nation to be drawn into the internal strife raging in Mexico and his prompt action in ordering troops across the border after the Columbus massacre.

Another section is expected to laud the administration for maintaining the Monroe doctrine, and fostering a fair dealing with the other republics of the western hemisphere, resulting in the building up of trade with those nations.

Finally, it is understood, the foreign affairs plank will align the party behind the president in placing "America first" with reference to all questions, both international and domestic.

Party's Tariff Record.

The tariff is expected to be the subject of an independent plank, the platform coupling the Underwood revision with the currency law and other conservative legislation of the past four years in a prosperity declaration. President Wilson's preparedness program will occupy another prominent place in the platform.

The slender angular head of the wheat stalk with its needle-like barbs — the characteristic of the American-grown crop—is doomed, if Professor William F. Freedman, graduate of Cornell university, is successful in experiments in wheat production. Professor Freedman has at his disposal wheat. The state of Montana is one of the world's richest fields for sapphire mining, competing on fairly even terms with the great sapphire districts of the far east and has already produced nearly $2,000,000 worth of these highly valued gems.

ALFALFA NOT HARD TO CURE

Must Be Taken Care of as Soon as Ready, Not Let Lie on Ground.

Is alfalfa harder to cure than red clover? Of 990 Iowa farmers questioned by the farm crops department at Iowa State college, 260 said that it was; 730 said that it was not. For those farmers who have trouble curing alfalfa, the following suggestions may help:

Alfalfa cannot lie on the ground as long as other hay; it must be taken care of as soon as ready. Good machinery is essential. The side delivery rake and loader are used by many of the best hay makers in the state.

A common practice is to cut in the afternoon rake in windrows the next morning and haul in the next afternoon. Many farmers cut in the morning after the dew is off, rake as soon as slightly wilted with a side delivery rake, turn the windrow over the next day with a rake and haul in the afternoon with the loader. The side delivery rake handles the plants when greener, is quicker, and does not shatter as many leaves as the dump rake. It ran in the same direction as the mower, the leavees and tops of the alfalfa are turned into the center of a continuous windrow with the coarse, more succulent stems to the outside. Also, the windrows are loose, so that the wind can blow thru, thus providing [illegible] method of curing.

SUNSHINE A GERMICIDE

Tests Show that Germs of Disease Cannot Survive When Exposed to the Sun

[illegible] for the farm bureau [illegible] in connection with [illegible] of [illegible], although comparatively few [illegible] actually the work done by [illegible] probably on[illegible] with tests [illegible] real[illegible] by sunshine [illegible] Here the [illegible] may be generally in[illegible] and interesting.

A [illegible] of tubercu[illegible], which were proved to [illegible] of virulence [illegible] obtained [illegible] and spread [illegible] layers on [illegible] of wood, and [illegible] of the sheets [illegible] of wood, and strips of muslin were then placed outdoors on a bright, sunny, warm, clear, calm day when the sun could shine on them, and an equal number were placed in a dark room. After 15 minutes exposure to the sun, the tuberculous bacterial on the glass, wood, and muslin still contained large numbers of living virulent tubercle bacilli, which were proved to be fully capable of causing tuberculosis, but after 30 minutes exposure to the sun no living tubercle bacilli could be found; every test that could be made proved that they were all dead.

Similar tests with quite large opaque masses of tuberculous material, larger and denser than any tuberculous person is apt to expectorate, proved that the bacilli in such masses on glass are still alive after 4, but entirely dead in less than 8 hours, and still alive in the material on wood and muslin after 8, but dead in less than 16 hours.

The tuberculous material in thin layers on glass, wood, and muslin, kept in a dark room, was proved to contain fully virulent, living tubercle bacilli after 30 days. The contrast is remarkable, tubercle bacilli of the same kind, on the same kind of material dying in a smaller number of minutes in the sunshine than the number of days they remained alive in a dark room.

As most varieties of disease germs are more easily destroyed by germicides than tubercle bacilli, and as tubercle bacilli in the thin layers in which they are likely to adhere to clothing, blankets, rugs, draperies, furniture, walls, floors, etc., are killed by the rays of the sun in less than half an hour, though they remain alive [illegible] in dark places a month and longer, it is reasonable to draw the following conclusions:

(a) As a general sanitary principle it is desirable that all dwellings, stables, etc., should be so constructed that an abundance of sunshine can reach their interiors.

(b) As a general protective measure against disease germs, it is an excellent practice to expose utensils for handling milk, and milk cans after they have been cleaned, to direct sunlight, and to hang or spread wearing apparel, blankets, bedding, rugs, horse blankets, etc., periodically where the sun can shine on all parts of them.

San Jose Scale.

The fight against the San Jose scale can begin as soon as the leaves drop. The standard remedy is lime-sulphur. A ready prepared form of this mixture may be had of seedmen or dealers or you can make it at home by using the following formula: Slake twenty-two pounds of fresh lump lime in the vessel in which the mixture is to be boiled, using only enough water to cover the lime. Add seventeen pounds of sulphur (flowers or powdered,) having previously mixed it in a paste with water. Then boil the mixture for about an hour in ten gallons of water, using an iron (not a copper) vessel. Next add enough more water to make, in all, fifty gallons. Strain through wire seive or netting, and apply while mixture is still warm. A good high pressure pump is essential to satisfactory work.

For large high trees it is necessary to have an extension rod, an extra length of hose, and an elevated platform built on the wagon upon which the operator can stand. Oftentimes each line of hose supplies a cluster of nozzles—two, or three, or even four, and for extensive work there may be several lines of hose running from the same pump, with an operator for each. Thus one man may be spraying the lower part of the tree from the ground while another man sprays the upper part of the tree from the tower.

Motor goggles are a great help in protecting the eyes from the solution when spraying.

Dangerous Hog Feeds

Kitchen slops may contain wash powders that are made up of soap and impure lye. They also contain much indigestible waste and often contain scraps of uncooked meats and cholera virus. Kitchen slops may contain poisonous ptomaines or poisonous products found in decomposing organic matter. Uncooked meat in kitchen slops may contain trichina or tapeworm cysts and sometimes such slops may contain dead mice or rats that may be infected with trichina or tapeworm cysts. Hence kitchen slops or restaurant or hotel slops are dangerous feeds for hogs.

BOOSTERS, SHOVERS, PUSHERS

This town is full of boosters, shovers, and pushers, and each is working valiantly toward a common end. The only difficulty in the accomplishment of definite results as we see it, is that some begin at the bottom and work upward, while others start at the top and slide down.

Thus it is that when the two forces meet there is an inevitable conflict of opinion and resultant confusion ending, as usual, in nothing being done.

It is the law of human nature that the child must first learn to crawl before it can walk, and the corn must sprout before it can grow. In each, you will note, the beginning is at the bottom

And so it should be with us as a community.

No satisfactory results are ever accomplished when a majority of the people are working at cross purposes, for that which is created by one is dissolved by another

We have the boosters, the shovers, and the pushers in this community, but what we need is a unity of purpose, each with his eye centered upon the goal ahead, and not upon the one behind

The mule is prone to move backward when its strength and energy is most needed in a strong and determined forward movement And we, brothers should not emulate the mule

It would be a splendid thing for this town if we could get all of the boosters and shovers, and pushers together and fix our minds upon one certain goal, and then each boost side by side and all together as a unit until we attain the desired end But success will come only by beginning at the bottom and working upward—always upward with never a halt or backward glance until we reach the top.

In bible times Lot's wife looked back and was turned into a pillar of salt Now salt is a very useful article, but it does not figure in the scheme of community development

We don't want any mules or pillars of salt to retard our movement, but we do want men and women of resource and determination who will meet on a common ground and all labor and march and push and shove in the same direction and to the same end, always forward and upward.

We want to make a bigger and better and more prosperous place of our home community, but it is difficult of accomplishment when so many insist on beginning at the top and sliding downward.

Isn't it possible for us to adopt a different policy, one upon which we may all agree, and in behalf of which we may labor in unison?

There are many and glorious possibilities ahead of us as a commercial and industrial proposition, supplemented by that most reliable of all industries—agricultural development and expansion

Our interests all lie in the future, and not in the buried past and its sorrows and dissapointments.

There is life and achievement ahead, but it will require thought, and energy, and unity, and action to accomplish results.

Can we not inject new life into our boosters, and shovers, and pushers? Can we not utilize their wonderful store of intelligence, and energy, and perseverance that is now lying dormant?

As one of them, brother, what do you think? What have you to say? WHAT ARE YOU WILLING AND READY TO DO?

O—O—O

SIMPLY A CASE OF WHEN

With every mortal in this town of normal intelligence and thinking age it is simply a case of "when,"

Some may scoff, others may ridicule this statement, but it is true.

For instance—

Walking in the straight and narrow path is not a matter of compulsion or force of habit. It is done only WHEN we choose to do so.

The inoffensive dog or cat is kicked only WHEN the kicker chooses to descend to the level of the brute,

We go to church WHEN we please, we believe the minister WHEN we choose, and we serve the devil WHEN it strikes our fancy. Habit and necessity have no place in any of these.

We boost for the town WHEN it pleases us, or we knock it WHEN the inclination overtakes us, or we lapse into a state of indifference WHEN our thoughts and desires are dormant.

We are prosperous WHEN we give our best thought and energy to our business affairs, and we enjoy life to the fullest only WHEN we emerge from the shadows and bask in the sunlight of existence.

Go where you please, and view the subject from any angle you choose, in almost every instance life is simply one long case of WHEN

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

CHAPTER IV (Continued)

The trail proved to be the kind that could not be descended slowly. He kept dodging rocks which his horses loosed behind him. And in a short time he reached the valley, entering the apex of the wedge. A stream of clear water tumbled out of the rocks here and most of it ran into irrigation ditches. His horses drank thirstily. And he drank with that fullness and gratefulness common to the desert traveler finding sweet water. Then he mounted and rode down the valley, wondering what would be his reception.

The valley was much larger than it had appeared from the high elevation. Well watered, green with grass and trees, and farmed evidently by good hands, it gave Duane a considerable surprise. Horses and cattle were everywhere. Every few cottonwoods surrounded a small adobe house. Duane saw Mexicans working in the fields and horsemen going to and fro. Presently he passed a house bigger than the others with a porch attached. A woman, young and pretty he thought, watched him from a door. No one else appeared to notice him.

The trail widened into a road, and that into a kind of square lined by a number of adobe and log buildings of rudest structure. Within sight were horses, dogs, a couple of steers, Mexican women with children, and white men all of whom appeared to be doing nothing. His advent created no interest until he rode up to the white men who were living in the shade of a house. This place evidently was a store and saloon, and from the inside came a lazy hum of voices.

As Duane reined to a halt, one of the loungers in the shade rose with a loud exclamation.

"Bust me, if that ain't Luke's hoss!"

The others accorded their interest, if not assent, by rising to advance toward Duane.

"How about it, Euchre? Ain't that Luke's hoss?" queried the first man.

"Plain as your nose," replied the fellow called Euchre.

There ain't no doubt about that, then, fought another, for Bosomer's nose is shore plain in the landscape.

These men lined up before Duane and as he coolly regarded them, he thought they could have been recognized anywhere as desperadoes. The man called Bosomer, who had stepped forward, had a fiery face which showed yellow over an enormous nose and a skin the color of dust, with a thatch of sandy hair.

"Stranger, where do you an' where in the hell do you reckon that bay hoss?" he demanded. His yellow eyes took in Stevens's horse, then the weapons hung on the saddle, and finally turned their glinting, hard light upward to Duane.

Dickens' Poor Taste in Dress.

When Charles Dickens was to make first appearance in America as a der an immense crowd awaited him a public hall in Boston. The en- siasm of the people had risen to er heat One of his most ardent mirers afterward told this little in- ent of the evening:

With a few gentlemen, who wished welcome him and to show him at- tion, I was in the little room back the platform when Dickens entered He was a rather stout man, with a mewhat red face, and I saw, to my prise, that he was dressed in an ggerated servility to the extreme fashion. More than this, he wore a utonniere in each buttonhole, and watches, the chains of which were ung aggressively across his chest. ere was a gaudy bad taste in his earance which his friends regret- , knowing how distasteful it would to his admirers, who appreciated genius and enjoyed his writings."

BRAVE WAR CHAPLAINS HEROIC IN STRUGGLE

Instances of Bravery They Display—Anti-Clerics Are Active.

Paris, (correspondence of the Associated Press) - A campaign by the extreme anti-clerical elements of the radical and socialist parties against the presence of priests at the battle fronts in daily contact with soldiers has brought sharply into public notice the work which these priests have done and are doing at the front

It required a special intervention to produce for priests even the privilege of going to the front Prior to May, 1913, no chaplains were provided for the army The minister of war at the time provided in a decree that in case of war two Catholic priests a Protestant pastor and a rabbi should be attached to each group of stretcher bearers of an army corps, and two Catholic chaplains to each division which had no stretcher bearers.

Thus about 160 priests and half as many Protestants and Israelites were authorized to accompany the army When war began, Count Albert de Mun, since deceased, obtained from the minister of war authorization for priests to enlist as chaplains with the approval of their bishops to the number of 250 in addition Count Paul Pourtales obtained the same favor for 50 more Protestant pastors while 10 additional rabbis were named Die on Fields.

The number of priests who have given their lives on the field of battle has not yet been counted for by just the chaplains, there are several thousand priests incorporated in the auxiliary services, or who volunteered for active service A great many deaths, however, have been reported among the chaplains under heroic circumstances. The rabbi, Abraham Bloch, was fatally wounded at Saint-Die by a fragment of a shell at the moment when he tendered a crucifix to a wounded soldier who had taken him for a Catholic priest The Abbe Valle, chaplain of the civil hospital of Arras, was killed by a shell while seeking to save his patients during a bombardment of Arras. Chaplain Dubreuil died at the extreme point of positions conquered by the Zouaves, with whom he went to the assault

Three chaplains gave up their lives during the battle of Champagne the Abbe Thinot, struck by a shell while digging out men buried by the explosion of a mine the Abbe Perrot and the Abbe Pouch who fell the former while looking after a fallen soldier and the latter while acting first aid to a general of brigade wounded on the field of battle

A chaplain from [illegible] Verdun [illegible] of many [illegible] Easter [illegible] cradle [illegible] trenches [illegible] on God [illegible] mother with [illegible] cattle [illegible] slow [illegible] my [illegible] Soldier [illegible] a prayer [illegible] cross and [illegible] condition that I [illegible] the cross, and at the 12th station I offered the [illegible] that brave son of France to Christ and with all my heart I said Our Lord that blood was generously shed

Bishop Honored

Bishop Ruch [illegible] of stretcher bearers of the [illegible] was decorated with the Legion of Honor and the war cross on the field of battle, and cited in orders as follows "Charles Ruch, bishop, chaplain himself in spite of his eminent dignity and gave proofs in a modest post of untiring activity and devotion notably in the latest combats, visiting the first line trenches, seeking for wounded on the line of fire and watching at night in exposed field hospitals. His calm courage has acquired for him the affection of everyone"

In a little sector taken from the Germans, where there was a church riddled by shells, the chaplain of the victorious regiment decided to say mass while shells were screeching to right and left. A projectile crashed through the only window remaining intact, smashed the altar and threw the chaplain and his assistants to the floor Fragments of the shell struck the priest in the head, while another broke his righ arm at the elbow and another at the wrist

For the chaplain, as well as for the combatant, heroism is the small change of every day existence at the front His place is wherever there is fighting He often falls under the shells and bullets and frequently reaps the same reward for gallant conduct as that of the fighting soldier The Abbe Henrocque simple priest at the beginning of the war, is now a knight of the Legion of Honor He lifted men as they fell under a heavy shelling, with suffocating gas projectiles dressed their wounds and carried them to shelter He was wounded in the head and arm by a shell that exploded three yards away he stopped only to wipe the blood from his eyes, an instant later a heavy projectile upheaved a section of the French trenches and buried two officers and six men Abbe Henrocque while crying for help dug until he had saved one officer and four of the soldiers

Doherty's Farewell.

From the New York Mail

Private Doherty was 6 feet 4 in his socks. His sergeant was about a foot shorter The sergeant looked along the line. "Head up, there Doherty" he cried Doherty raised his head. "Higher!" said the little sergeant There, that's better! Don't let me see your head down again!"

"Am I to be always like this" asked Doherty, staring above his little sergeant's head

"You are."

"Thin I'll say goodbye to ye, sergint, dear, for I'll never see ye again in this world."

A Discreet Musical Critic.

From the Pleasant Valley (Ark.) Palladium.

The third number on the program was a saxophone solo by Miss Birdie Puffer Musicians are agreed that the saxophone is an instrument out of which but few can get real music, but Miss Birdie played it beautifully She is a popular member of our most exclusive social set, and is also noted for having once whipped a gentleman who did not appreciate her saxophone playing.

HOW ADVERTISING HELPS THE PUBLIC

D'Arcy Will Tell Advertising Men at the Annual Convention.

Philadelphia.—The value of advertising as a public servant (the manner in which it increases output, speeds up sales and otherwise enables the advertiser to sell goods of equal quality for less than the nonadvertiser can sell them) will be one of the subjects kept uppermost in the minds of the thousands of business men who will gather here, June 25 to 30, to attend the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

Especially will this phase of the subject of advertising come to the front when William C D'Arcy, of St. Louis makes his report as chairman of the advertising committee of the Associated Clubs

Advertising a Public Benefit.

In practically all of the magazines of the country, in 300 newspapers, in religious publications, farm papers and through other mediums, a great campaign to advertise advertising has been running, and now, Forrest Crissey, the magazine writer, has written a booklet, showing just how advertising helps the public, for free distribution

The advertising club movement is founded upon the knowledge that advertising, skilfully handled, is a public benefit saving the public's money and time standardizing qualities and making buying safer and easier.

HAY FEVER AND WEEDS.

The usual name for hay fever which occurs at this season of the year is rose cold The difference in names is a matter of small consequence, the disease is the same

The theory is that the pollen of certain plants at some time or other have irritated the membranes of the nose enough to bring on an attack of cold During the course of that attack the patient has been exquisitely sensitive to the pollens of certain plants Scientists say that he has anaphalxis or that he is sensitized A man who, having once been poisoned by lobsters, is anaphylactic for that food A man who gets asthma whenever he breaths air which smells of a horse is sensitized For that matter so is a person who, having been hurt in a railroad accident loses self control when he sees a train.

The number of weeds and flowers capable of producing hay fever is legion The American Hay Fever association says that all hay fever producing plants have four characteristics

1 They are wind pollinated
2 [illegible] production
3 [illegible] microscopic
4 [illegible] bright color [illegible] pleasant scent

The pollens tend to end in great quantities

Among the plants which cause hay fever, according to Dr Schoppengerdt are yellow dock, cocklebur, careless weed, [illegible] varieties of grass

To prevent the disease from developing [illegible] required Some of the [illegible] of the poison of the [illegible] These various [illegible] but to prevent and to [illegible] used to prevent it [illegible] several weeks before the [illegible] is due

There is not one method of preventing hay fever It is the control of weeds and grass Most cities, towns and villages have ordinances against weeds But weed ordinances are seldom [illegible] Every man keeps his own garden clear of weeds and the grass in his yard mowed short and then he will suffer from hay fever because his neighbor lets his lot grow rank Or the lots may be properly cared for, yet the disease may be caused by weeds in the streets. Take yellow dock and cocklebur easily recognized and widely known, they grow all around us There are plenty of cocklebur on Sheridan drive on a lot next to where I live

Weeds are unsightly They lessen the value of the real estate on which they grow for they make it unattractive in appearance A weed covered lot is liable to accumulate garbage, rubbish, and dead cats And this means that flies breed on weedy lots A weedy lot is liable to breed mosquitoes.

Why the Army Bill "Pork."

From the Kansas City Star

The army appropriation bill as agreed upon by the House committee carries, according to press reports $27,000,000 to carry into effect the national guard provision of the Hay-Chamberlain bill This is merely the initial cost Mr Hay, chairman of the military affairs committee has estimated that the annual cost of the federalized national guard when it reaches the full strength of 425,000 men authorized will be $100,000,000.

The federal government will pay this sum annually to the states for the upkeep of 48 military establishments over which it will have no direct control With this expenditure in mind would it be hard to guess why the politicians in Congress, all of whom have interests to be looked after would prefer to see the money distributed to the states rather than applied by the government to the creation of a federal volunteer force?

An Obedient Servant.

From the Chicago News.

Mrs Nobbs was giving instructions to her servant Before removing the soup plates, Mary always ask each person, if he or she would like any more." "Very good madam" Next day, Mary, respectfully bowing to one of the guests, inquired, "Would the gentleman like some more soup?" "Yes, please." "There ain't any left"

Women In a Thunder Storm.

Whenever the lightning flashes, whenever the thunder roars
I think of the frightened women folk that nervously pace the floors,
The queen in her castle chamber, the maid in her stuffy room,
Are sisters during a thunderstorm with fear of a common doom.

And whether it's night or morning, whenever the clouds appear,
I think of the frightened women folk who nervously sigh, "Oh, dear!"
I fancy I hear them calling the children from their play,
And closing each door and window, for this is a woman's way

There's never a flash of lightning let loose in the troubled sky,
But most of the women tremble and utter a startled cry
There's never a peal of thunder let loose
in the world's great dome,
But the women sit in terror and wish that men were home.

The dame with her jeweled fingers, the woman of high degree,
And the pitiful drab in her lowly haunt have this equality,
That never the lightning flashes and never the thunder peals,
But each faces the selfsame danger and the selfsame terror feels

PLEASED THE WOODPECKER

Bird Takes Kindly to Tin Barricade Erected Against Its Peckings.

Mrs. John Pozer of Main street, Newton, N. J., feared that a fine shade tree on her lawn would be killed by a woodpecker that appeared there every day and pecked away at a hole which he was making larger and larger. Therefore she had her husband tack a sheet of tin over the hole when the bird was absent.

Refusing to be discouraged and pretending he does not know the difference, the woodpecker now goes to the tree every day and pecks away like a trip hammer on the tin sheet. The neighbors are nearly crazy with the noise, and there is a law against killing woodpeckers.

"His Own Lawyer."

Over and over again, the wisdom of the adage, "A man who is his own lawyer has a fool for a client," and the understanding that inspired the injunction, "Physician, heal thyself," are established in the courts. Every lawyer is familiar with many instances in which the wills of distinguished jurists have been set aside because they were improperly drawn, and it is a matter of pretty common knowledge that few doctors can diagnose their own ailments.

Another exemplification now appears in the conflict about the will of the late Dr. Austin Flint. He was, perhaps, more frequently employed as an expert witness as to testamentary capacity than any other alienist in the country. Questions of mental fitness, of intent, of motive and of the other attributes of a "sound-disposing mind" were before him constantly Yet he drew his own will so ambiguously, so obscurely, that his executors have been compelled to invoke the aid of the court to determine what the learned testator meant.—Richmond Times-Dispatch

The Answer.

"Mr. Interlocutor," said the end man at the Commuterville Amateur Minstrel show, "I want to ask you a question."

"Very well, Mr. Bones, what is your question?"

The Commonwealth Power Co of Mankato, have an option on the Britt electric light plant. If the Britt plant sells this will mean every light plant in the county will be supplied with high tension. The ball game with the 7 Cairns Bros., Tuesday was won by the show boys by a score of 7 to 5. It was a well played game but the locals failed to connect with the ball at the opportune time. The Cairns boys put up a mighty good game and they should, as they have a game scheduled for practically every day in the week. They were certainly a nice clean bunch.

The Seven Cairns Bros. made their yearly exhibit here Tuesday and were greeted with a packed tent. They are presenting this year the four act western comedy drama, "In Oklahoma," and it was very fine. Their band and orchestra was fine and their cast was strong. The yearly visit here is looked to with much pleasure. They plan to keep Klemme on their regular iteniary.

Walter and Chas. Priebe and Harry Fortin of Edgely, North Dakota, autoed down from there, arriving here Friday. The Priebe boys' father has purchased a lot just north of the Fred Jahnka home and has already commenced the erection of a fine residence, and will move down here this fall to occupy it. We welcome them back to our midst and hope that they never regret their choice.

Too bad that Britt bunch cannot control all of the public offices in Hancock County. Last week the Tribune was "crabbing" because Chas. Terwilliger was defeated for supervisor by H. J Stille and worrying because they were afraid Mr. Stille was not capable of caring for the office as it should be. There is no doubt but what Mr. Terwilliger is a good capable man but he has absorbed too much "Bryanism" and has become a chronic office seeker. Mr. Stille, we believe is fully as capable to look after the needs of his constituents as Mr. Terwilliger and has never asked for any kind of a public office heretofore, but we know that the Tribune or any other paper in the county cannot dictate to Mr Stille. He will look after the needs of the district to the best of his ability and will give the people an honest administration

"Death to the traitor!" shouted the infuriated revolutionists.

But the old man gazed upon them calmly.

"Hear me," he said, "before you strike. It is true that I swore to overthrow the government, and it is also true that I was captured fighting in the ranks of its supporters. But the fact is, citizens, that I have been engaged in so many revolutions that I sometimes get mixed up. On this occasion I got rattled and forgot which side I was on."

Concluding that his defense was quite plausible, the patriots gave him the benefit of the doubt.

ARE REAL SOLDIERS

Remarks from Noted Authorities in Regard to Marine Corps.

The following remarks from some of our noted authorities in regard to our marine corps should prove that we have one body of men at least who are efficient and that we have one department at least that is prepared for any great struggle which we have to undergo. Just at this time when we are facing a Mexican crisis it makes good news for every loyal American

Here are some quite recent comments on the United States Marine Corps, by competent authorities.

Girard, in his Philadelphia Public Ledger column, wrote: "When A. H. Wetherill was returning to Philadelphia recently from a big game hunt in Africa, he met on shipboard a colonel of the English army. This officer, who impressed Mr. Weetherill as being a real student of military affairs, was discussing the merits of various armies when he made this startling assertion: 'The best equipped, organized, and most efficient body of its size in the world is the United States Marine Corps; the second best is the Northwest Mounted Police; the third best the Pensylvania State Constabulary.'"

Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the New York Evening post, wrote: "Let congress look at the Marine * * * It is a service to be proud of Why? It is solely due to its connection with the Navy, or its constantly seeing foreign service and going to sea? No; its admirable efficiency, the smartness, the neatness, and excellent set-up of the men, and the esprit de corps cannot be so easily explained. Some one ought to tell us why, someone like a committee of Congress."

Admiral George Dewey not long ago wrote of the Marines: "The work recently accomplished by the Marine Corps at Vera Cruz and in Hayti, fully justifies my belief that no finer military organization exists in the world."

Rear Admiral Cameron McRae Winslow, U S A., testifying before the present House Committee on Naval Affairs, said, "I am inclined to think there is no military body in our country of higher efficiency than the Marine Corps Their esprit de corps is very high, they take great pride in their profession. They never let things slack off a bit."

To which Representative Britten of the House Naval Committee added "When I was in Pekin last year, officers of the various legation guards from all over the world, voluntarily admitted that our Marine Corps boys were the most efficient and came nearer to being fighters and looking like fighters than any other soldiers in China."

FLY IS DOOMED TO GO

Some Day He Won't Be Mentioned in Polite Society

"When I come back to Ames 20 years from now, I'll have to apologize for mentioning the word fly or mosquito in my talk, just as I do today for mentioning lice or bedbugs," says Dr Warren H Wilson of New York, who is leader of the sixth annual country life conference being held at Iowa State College from June 19 to 30.

"The fly in America is due to the refuse and dirt on the farm. The chinese farmer takes care of and uses all refuse, so he has no flies. To get rid of flies it will take community swatting, everyone working at once." Dr. Wilson told the country preachers present at the conference that they should lead the swatting campaign.

CAN BY GOLD-PACK METHOD

As Taught to Girl's Canning Clubs it Has Been Success Because It's Easy, Safe and Economical.

"Canning fruit and vegetables by the cold-pack method, advocated by the U. S. department of agriculture and the extension division of Iowa State college, is so simple, economical and safe that wherever it has been taught in Iowa to the boys' and girls' canning clubs it has become quite popular," says Prof. E. C. Bishop, state leader of the junior work in Iowa.

There are two steps in this method. The first is the cold-pack. The vegetables or fruits are cleaned and prepared as desired and then packed raw in glass jars or cans. With vegetables, hot water is added; with fruit, sugar syrup. The covers are then put on the jars, but not completely sealed. An allowance is made for expansion from the inside

The second step is the hot water bath. The filled jars are placed in hot water to cover the tops of the jars for an inch or two. There should be a false bottom of some kind to hold the jars off the bottom so that the water will circulate beneath. Time tables will tell how many minutes different products should remain in the boiling water.

At the close of the period, the jars are removed, the tops seated down and the jars set away to cool.

Persons desiring more information or to organize a canning club for receiving instruction in this method should write to the agricultural extension division. Iowa State college, Ames.

AUTO TURNS TURTLE

Car Catches on Fire and Setting Breaks Puts It in the Ditch.

J. M. Edison had a bad automobile accident about two milees east of Garner Tuesday. He was driving the old Kittleson Winston six at a fair rate of speed when the machine caught on fire and in setting the breaks the rear was thrown off the grade and the car turned upside down in the ditch. The accident occurred near the Dusenberg place and the gasoline tank contained abount fifteen gallons of gas at the time Nothing could be done to save it from the fire and the machine was completely destroyed. Edison was somewhat hurt in the accident, his side being injured, but only enough to lay him up temporarily, and he feels that he came out of the mixup lucky indeed.—Forest City Summet.

COMING TO THE FRONT

No matter what our beliefs may be in the matter of woman's suffrage, candor compels the admission that the feminine cause is making strides toward ultimate achievement of their goal.

A few years ago the mere idea of a woman voting met with ridicule upon every hand. It was considered a dream and a joke.

Today, however, every party has its strong and powerful defenders of woman's right to the franchise, and neither party cares to risk going radically on record against it.

Politicians everywhere concede a little and diplomatically slide over the rest. Many hundreds of them dread to be placed on record as irrevocably opposed to suffrage for women.

MARRIED IN SWEDEN

The two Arvidson brothers, Albert and August, who have been visiting in Sweden, were both married this month. August became a benedict June 9, claiming as his bride, Miss Jenny Swenson. Albert became disgusted with single bliss a few days later and was married on June 24th to Miss Frida Swenson. While the ladies names were both the same, they are of no relation. Both of the weddings occurred at Nottja, Sweden. August and Albert have a host of friends in this neighborhood who are now anxiously awaiting their return so that they may be able to extend personal congratulations.

RINGLING BROTHERS COMING THIS WAY

World's Biggest Circus and Spectacle "Cinderella" Announced for Early Date.

Announcement is made that on Thursday, June 13, Ringling Bros. circus will give afternoon and night performances at Mason City.

The famous showmen are this season presenting an all new and wonderful program. The tremendous fairyland spectacle, "Cinderella," will appeal to both young and old. More than 1000 persons take part in it. It is easily the biggest spectacle Ringling Bros. have ever staged and its glorious "Ballet of the Fairies," with 300 dancing girls, is in itself worth going many miles to see. Following "Cinderella" 400 arenic artists appear in the main tent program. Because of the great European war the Ringlings have secured scores of circus performers never before seen in America. An entire trained animal show has been made a part of the main tent program this season. The menagerie now numbers 1009 wild animals. The elephants, including "Big Bingo," the earth's largest pachyderm, have been increased. There will be 60 clowns and a big free three-mile street parade show day morning.

THE SPIRIT OF THEN AND NOW

When war with Spain was declared in 1898 thousands of young men left their employment and went to the front in defense of their country. When the war was over these young soldiers returned home and in a majority of cases found their jobs filled by other people and themselves out of employment and without prospects for the future. Such was the reward of valor in 1898.

Today thousands of the principal business institutions of the country are announcing that all members of the National Guard who have responded to the president's call will not only find their jobs waiting for them on their return, but will have their full salaries paid to their families during their absence. Such is the sprit of 1916.

A little reflection should convince the most skeptical that not all of the patriotism of this country flows in the veins of the man with a gun. The civilian has his duty to perform, and he, too, performs it as the man he is.

The one grasps his gun and goes to fight the battles of his country, while the other supplies the sinews of war with which to fighht.

It is a combination of valor and fidelity which in this time should prove invincible. Let us hope that such it may be.

"War is hell," to quote a noted general. But we would rather have war with honor than to bask in the sunlight of peace at the price of our national soul.

Peace with honor, if we may; war to the hilt, if we must.

KANAWHA WINS GAME

At last, luck has evidently turned in favor of the Kanawha team; they won a game Sunday with the Klemme boys, score 4 to 2. Those new suits were a good investment.—Kanawha Record.

We do not know who the Kanawha boys played but there seems to be some country team west of here who are posing as the Klemme team and that is undoubtedly where Brother Ellsworth got his information. Klemme does not claim to have the best team in these parts but have a nice, clean team of all home players who are willing to accept a Kanawha challenge any time.

British board of trade returns go to prove that the dread of a shortage of foodstuffs in Great Britain in the event of a war of magnitude was unfounded. In fact, the food imports for the month of April show big increases Thus, in April, 1914, in round figures, the food imports were valued at $308,000,000, whereas for the same month in 1915 they totaled $368,000,000, an increase of $60,000,000. Exports in the corresponding months showed a decrease of $38,000,000 For four months, the imports showed an increase of $110,000,000 and the exports a decrease of $280,000,000 The increase in imports of grain and flour for April were about $20,000,000. Imports of meat, including animals for food, increased over $7,000,000, raw materials and articles unmanufactured increased about $30,000,000.

A few years ago much was heard about the utility of bats as a means of destroying mosquitoes. According to experiments reported by S. G. Dixon, the most formidable animal enemy of the mosquito is the duck, and the introduction of this bird is recommended for eliminating mosquitoes, and the diseases which these insects spread, from marshy regions where draining would be too costly. Two artificial pools were constructed of equal area, ducks being placed in one and fish in the other The former pool was quickly freed from mosquito pupae and larvae, while in the other they continued to abound Wild ducks are said to prefer mosquitoes to all other food

An anti-typhoid campaign, carried out in Yakima county, Washington, by the United States public health service in co-operation with the local health authorities, has given striking results, which are described in a recent public health bulletin Prior to 1911 this county had every year a typhoid fever rate three times as high as the average rate for the whole United States. In the summer of 1911 practical measures for the correction of the obviously insanitary conditions were recommended, and, what is much more important, were carried out by the people. The annual prevalence of typhoid has, in consequence, been reduced about 90 per cent

MANSFIELD DECLARES "13" REGULAR HOODOO

Man Accused of Iowa Ax Murder Says He Has Been Pursued By Mystic Numeral.

Kansas City, Mo., June 23—"Thirteen always was my unlucky number. They got me on this murder charge on the 13th day of the month four years and four days after the ax murders in Villisca were committed. When Chief Hedrick, of the Swift plant, came after me, I remembered it was the 13th, and knew that trouble was in sight."—William Mansfield, ax murder suspect.

Detective J. N. Wilkerson, who is responsible for all the recent exciting events in connection with the arrest of Mansfield and who has been quoted quite extensively in relation to the arrest, lays much stress upon the similarity of the two tragedies in Villisca, Ia., and Blue Island, Ill.

"Both murders were committed on Sunday night," he recalls. In both cases the murderer entered the house while the family was away and secreted himself in a closet to await their return In each case he took the ax with which he committed the deeds from the woodshed of the victims. In both cases he first struck with the blunt side of the ax, then used its edge as a cattle butcher does. It is worth remembering that Mansfield's father was a butcher.

In both cases the mirrors were covered by the murderer, who disrobed in the closet before committing the murders In both cases he left a lighted lamp without a chimney burning at the foot of a bed In both cases he washed the blood from himself in a basin which he left standing in the kitchen.

"What evidence have we against Mansfield? I am not at liberty to state. I will state, however, that when the full details of the Villisca ax murders are made public at the trial the evidence will create one of the greatest sensations in the state of Iowa. We will prove that the crime was committed for money"

While Mansfield lies in his cell, apparently glorying in the notoriety he has brought upon himself and voicing superstitious belief and fear of the 13th of the month, and while the machinery of the law is operating to take him back to Iowa for trial, his wife is working night and day for him.

With only $13 when Mansfield was arrested, she expended $10 of this for the writ of habeas corpus which was filed in his behalf, and now has but $3 for herself and baby. Yet she is fighting the state of Iowa and the detectives with just as much confidence as if she had a million.

RAILROAD EQUIPPED TO TRANSPORT IOWA TROOPS

Des Moines Ia., June 23.—If Iowa troops were to be sent to Mexico within two or three days, it would depend entirely upon the Pullman company to get them there in the best possible manner and time according to local representatives of the different roads which would handle such a movement out of Des Moines, the mobilization point of the guard

The government knows the facilities which the Pullman company has for handling such a movement and has figures on what the company could do. An important feature of the required equipment is the provision for feeding the troops en route and the kitchen cars built by the Pullman company were made according to the orders and under the supervision of the federal government, which has statistics on the number of such cars available at all times

Movement of Iowa's 3,500 guardsmen would not occasion any difficulty or delay, according to the local railroad men and all could be quickly delivered at the border from Des Moines

RAIN INTERFERES WITH OPENING SESSION OF G. A. R.

Marshalltown Ia., June 23.—A drizzling rain yesterday marred the opening session of the annual encampment of the Iowa department of the Grand Army of the Republic, but more than 1,000 delegates are on the ground.

Two candidates for commander are in the field They are G. H Van Hauten, of Lenox, and J H Mills, of Redfield.

Mrs. Bella Allender, of Burlington, and Mrs. Ada M. Smyth, of Chariton, are candidates for president of the Women's Relief corps.

WEATHER TOO COOL FOR BEST RESULTS IN CORN

Des Moines, Ia., June 23 —Following is the Iowa crop bulletin for the week ending June 20:

The week was unseasonably cool with a decided deficiency of rainfall and an excess of cloudiness. The average daily temperature was about 6 degrees below the normal and the nights were especially cool. Though the rainfall was below the normal, showers were frequent, but not sufficiently heavy to interfere materially with farm work The cultivation of corn was rushed and in the southeastern counties planting and replanting was finished. The fields are now generally clean, but the crop is a week to 10 days late. Over a large part of the state the second cultivation is nearing completion. Small grain is generally in good condition and doing well, but in some localities oats are yellow, and rust is reported in winter wheat in Marion and Madison counties. Early oats and barley are heading First cutting of alfalfa secured in fine condition, except in eastern counties where wet weather did some damage. Potatoes and garden truck still doing well, but a good rain and warmer weather is needed for corn and truck, and rain would be highly beneficial to pastures, meadows, small grain and small and tree fruits.

WESTFIELD—The Millnerville store and the adjoining building belonging to it were burned to the ground Monday evening as a result of a gasoline explosion in the store building. With the exception of a few household goods nothing was saved. H. A. Bailin, proprietor of the store, carried very little insurance. The buildings were owned by Tony Brienzo, of Jefferson, S. D. This removes an old landmark of over 23 years' standing.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y.—"For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation."—Mrs. JOHN A. KOENIG, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

BROWN'S LATE HOME-COMING

Striking Clock Registered a Record for Gentleman of Somewhat Convivial Habits.

Brown had come home very late after a convivial evening at a smoking concert and had consumed more cigars and refreshments than was good for him. It was midnight when he reached home, but he did not know it.

"Ah!" he muttered, "if the church clock would only strike, I should know the time. It's too late to see."

But hark! Just as he spoke the clock began to strike. Breathlessly, Brown counted, "One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve!"

But at that moment another clock began.

"Thirteen," counted Brown, "fourteen, fifteen—great Scott!—sixteen, seventeen, eighteen—gracious—nineteen, twenty, (!!!), twenty-one, twenty-two, (!!!), twenty-three—mercy on us!—twenty-four (!!!)."

Mopping his steaming brow he exclaimed: "My word, I've never been out so late in all my life!"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Unfinished Product.

Four-year-old Marjorie was sent by her father to get the egg from a nest in a fence corner, where a certain hen persisted in laying each day. The Difference.

"This poet speaks of the 'circumambient air.' What kind of air is that?"

"Oh, he means ordinary air, as distinguished from the air that is agitated by electric fans, patent systems of ventilation and thunderous appeals for preparedness."

INDEPENDENCE BELL.

(When it was certain that the declaration of independence would be announced by congress, it was resolved to announce the event by ringing the old statehouse bell, which bore the inscription "Proclaim liberty to the land, to all the inhabitants thereof!" The old bellman, accordingly, placed his little son at the door of the hall, to await the instruction of the doorkeeper when to ring, and, when the word was given, the little patriot-scion rushed out and, flinging up his hands, shouted aloud, "Ring! Ring! Ring!")

There was tumult in the city,
In the quaint old Quaker's town,
And the streets were rife with people,
Pacing restless up and down,—
People gathering at corners,
Where they whispered each to each,
And the sweat stood on their temples,
With the earnestness of speech.

As the bleak Atlantic currents
Lash the wild Newfoundland shore,
So they beat against the statehouse,
So they surged against the door,
And the mingling of their voices
Made a harmony profound,
Till the quiet street of Chestnut
Was all turbulent with sound.

"Will they do it?" "Dare they do it?"
"Who is speaking?" "What's the news?"
"What of Adams?" "What of Sherman?"
"Oh, God grant they won't refuse?"
"Make some way there!" "Let me nearer!"
"I am stifling!" "Stifle, then!"
When a nation's life's a hazard,
We've no time to think of men!"

So they beat against the portal,
Man and woman, maid and child;
And the July sun in heaven
On the scene looked down and smiled.
The same sun that saw the Spartan
Shed his patriot blood in vain,
Now beheld the soul of freedom
All unconquer'd rise again

See! See! The dense crowd quivers
Through all it lengthy line,
As the boy beside the portal
Looks forth to give the sign!
With his small hands upward lifted,
Breezes dallying with his hair,
Hark! with deep, clear intonation,
Breaks his young voice on the air.

Hush'd the people's swelling murmur,
List the boy's strong, joyous cry!
"Ring!" he shouts, "Ring! Grandpa, Ring! Oh, ring for liberty!"
And straightway, at the signal,
The old bellman lifts his hand,
And sends the good news, making
Iron music through the land.

How they shouted! What rejoicing!
How the old bell shook the air,
Till the clang of freedom ruffled
The calm, gliding Delaware!
How the bonfires and the torches
Illumed the night's repose,
And from the flames, like Phoenix,
Fair Liberty arose!

That old bell now is silent,
And hush'd its iron tongue,
But the spirit it awakened
Still lives,—forever young
And while we greet the sunlight,
On the fourth of each July
We'll ne'er forget the bellman,
Who, twixt the earth and sky,
Rung out our independence
Which, please God, shall never die!

STAND BY THE FLAG.

Stand by the flag! on land and ocean billow,
By it your fathers stood, unmoved and true;
Living, defended, lying, from their pillow,
With their last blessing, passed it on to you.
The lines that divide us are written in water,
The love that unites us is cut deep as rock.

Thus by friendship's ties united,
We will change the bloody past
Into golden links of union,
Blending all in love at last.

Thus beneath the one broad banner,
Flag of the true, the brave the free,
We will build anew the Union,
Fortress of our Liberty

FREEDOM'S STANDARD.

God bless our star-gemmed banner,
Shake its folds out to the breeze,
From church, from fort, from housetop,
Over the city, on the seas.

The die is cast, the storm at last
Has broken in its might,
Unfurl the starry banner,
And may God defend the right.

Then bless our banner, God of hosts!
Watch o'er each starry fold
'Tis Freedom's standard, tried and proved
On many a field of old.

And Thou, who long has blessed us,
Now bless us yet again,
And crown our cause with victory,
And keep our flag from stain.

When Will the Ships Be Built?

From the Kansas City Star

Of course it is encouraging to learn that the House voted on the naval bill. If one didn't recall that congress has been in session six months it would look almost like speed. But having been given this information by the House leaders, the country would like a little more from some quarter.

It would like to know when the ships authorized by the bill are going to be built. It recalls that in March, 1915, congress authorized two battleships. How far along are those battle ships today, 15 months later? The keel of neither has yet been laid. There is a prospect that the keel of one will be laid next September—17 months after authorization. For a start on the other no date has been fixed. If these ships take the water in 1921 it will be the best that can now be expected.

Must 17 months again elapse between the present authorizations and a beginning of construction? Very probably unless the navy department takes some lessons in preparedness. The two ships provided for in 1915 were ordered built at navy yards instead of in private plants. The order was made for reasons of economy, the bids of the private builders exceeding by a small amount the appropriations authorized. Whether the navy department was aware of it beforehand or not, the fact developed that no government yard was equipped to take the keels of the new ships, and before they could be laid the "ways" had to be fixed at a cost of some $600,000 and many months of time. If the ships on the new building program are to be constructed at government yards, will this history be repeated?

Six months to get a naval bill ready! Seventeen months to get a navy yard ready to build a ship! It may be a non-expert opinion, but many people will agree that congress ought to have its "ways" fixed as well as the navy yards.

The Queen's Gift Book, a remarkable anthology from the best British writers, on which authors and illustrators have collaborated with great enthusiasm, is meeting an unprecedented demand in England, and the proceeds, which will be devoted to the Queen Mary convalescent hospitals, will be large.

E. H. Greeley, of Ellsworth, Me., first drove over the road from Columbia Falls to Ellsworth, a distance of 44 miles, May 10, 1842, when he was 10 years old, this year, on the same date, Mr Greeley, at the age of 84, made the same drive. The trip took six hours and Mr. Greeley did it without a stop.

RODNEY'S RIDE.

On the Third day of July, 1776, Caesar Rodney rode on horseback from St. James' Neck, below Dover, Delaware, to Philadelphia, in a driving rain storm, for the purpose of voting for the Declaration of Independence.

In that soft mid-land where the breezes bear
The North and South on the genial air,
Through the county of Kent, on affairs of State,
Rode Caesar Rodney, the delegate.

Burly and big, and bold and bluff,
In his three-cornered hat and coat of snuff,
A foe to King George and the English State,
Was Caesar Rodney, the delegate.

Into Dover village he rode apace,
And his kinfolk knew from his anxious face,
It was matter grave that brought him there,
To the counties three upon the Delaware.

"Money and men we must have," he said,
"Or the Congress falls and our cause is dead,
Give us both and the King shall not work his will.
We are men, since the blood of Bunker Hill."

Comes a rider swift on a panting bay;
"Ho, Rodney, ho! you must save the day,
For the Congress halts at a deed so great,
And your vote alone may decide its fate."

Answered Rodney then: "I will ride with speed,
It is Liberty's stress; it is Freedom's need."
"When stands it?" "Tonight." "Not a moment to spare,
But ride like the wind from the Delaware."

"Ho, saddle the black! I've but half a day,
And the Congress sits eighty miles away—
But I'll be in time, if God grants me grace,
To shake my first in King George's face."

He is up; he is off! and the black horse flies
On the northward road ere the "God-speed" dies,
It is gallop and spur, as the leagues they clear,
And the clustering mile-stones move a-rear.

It is two of the clock; and the fleet hoofs fling
The Fieldboro's dust with a clang and a cling,
It is three, and he gallops with slack rein where
The road winds down to the Delaware.

Four and he spurs into New Castle town,
From his panting steed he gets him down—
"A fresh one quick! and not a moment's wait!"
And off speeds Rodney, the delegate.

It is five; and the beams of the western sun
Tinge the spires of Wilmington, gold and dun,
Six, and the dust of Chester street
Flies back in a cloud from his courser's feet.

It is seven; the horse-boat broad of beam,
At the Schuylkill ferry crawls over the stream—
And at seven fifteen by the Rittenhouse clock,
He flings his reins to the tavern jock.

The Congress is met; the debate's begun,
And Liberty lags for the vote of one—
When into the hall, not a moment late,
Walks Caesar Rodney, the delegate.

Not a moment late! and that half day's ride
Forwards the world with a mighty stride,
For the act was passed, ere the midnight stroke
O'er the Quaker City its echoes woke.

At Tyranny's feet was the gauntlet flung
"We are free!" all the bells through the colonies rung,
And the sons of the free may recall with pride,
The day of Delegate Rodney's ride.

Queen Emma Was Kind.

The mother of the present queen of Holland married King William when the king was pretty well along in years. It was his second matrimonial adventure. He was so pleased with it that one day he purchased a tea set of costly porcelain as a gift for his queen. He felt that it was quite an extravagance and threatened to discharge any servant who was careless enough to break a part of the set.

One day a man who had been in the service of the royal house for many years, had the misfortune to break one of the precious cups. He was heartbroken. Tearfully he went to Queen Emma and told her his story. The sympathetic queen took the broken pieces and put them together, saying; I think we can fix that. Just paste it together with cement. The edges are smooth and won't show much. Leave the rest to me. I'll do what I can to save you."

When the royal family sat down to tea the next time, the injured cup was at Queen Emma's place. The queen pretending to be very thirsty, drank all the tea at once and then, as if struck with a sudden idea, she turned quickly in her chair toward the king and her arm swept the cup to the floor. As it crashed into 1,000 pieces the queen affected an expression of deepest regret and said timidly: "There, your majesty, see what an awkward servant I am. Now, the only thing you can do is to dismiss me from your service."

But William was in a happy mood; seeing how grieved his wife appeared, he made light of the loss and consoled her affectionately, while the old servant stood trembling by, thanking his good fortune for a mistress whose tact and kindness had saved him his position.

Probably the largest gas well ever struck in Oklahoma was brought in recently at Fox pool, south of Cushing, a gusher which now spouts approximately 100,000,000 cubic feet a day, enough for a city of 100,000 people.

An unlimited number of positive films of moving pictures can be made from a single photographic negative. After positives of sufficient number to supply the exchanges throughout the country have been made, the negative is usually kept by the producing company. Additional positives can be made at any time. The pictures that appear in a scratched condition are films that have been exhibited considerably. These "second run" films usually cost the exhibitor less than the films when they are first released. The life of the films is usually sufficient to supply the demand of the theaters without printing additional positives.

COMPLETE OVERTHROW FOR GREEK MINISTRY

King Forced to Demobilize Aruy and Call For Election of New Chamber.

London, June 24.—The British government last night issued the full text of the entente allies' note to Greece. It contains four demands, as follows:

First—Real and complete demobilization of the Greek army, which must, with the least possible delay, be placed on a peace footing.

Second—The immediate replacing of the present Greek cabinet by a business cabinet having no political colors and offering all necessary guarantees for the application of benevolent neutrality toward the allied powers and sincere consultation of the national wishes.

Third—The immediate dissolution of the chamber, followed by new elections after the period required by the constitution and after general demobilization has restored the electoral body to normal conditions.

Fourth—Replacement of certain police functionaries whose attitude inspired by foreign influence has facilitated attempts against peaceful citizens as well as insults against the allied legations and those under their jurisdiction.

TREVINO CLAIMS U.S. IS HOSTILE

Says Soldiers Have Ignored Mexican Rights—Ready to Fight For "Honor of My Country."

Chihuahua City, Mex., June 23.—Criticism of American military men, who he said, have caused all the trouble between Mexico and the United States, was made by Gen. Jacinto Trevino, military commander of the northeast, in an interview with the Associated Press today.

Trevino said that General Hugh Scott was evidently wrong when he told the Mexican conferees at the meeting in El Paso that the American militiamen, least of all factors in the United States, wished to fight against Mexico.

"The American militia has disobeyed the orders of its own chiefs, has never respected the feelings or the property of Mexican citizens and has contemptuously ignored the dispositions of the Mexican government," declared the general.

"I do not want war," said General Trevino, "and I am doing all in my power to control the situation, but if war is forced on the Mexican nation by the Americans, I am both ready and willing to do my duty, like every other faithful son, to uphold the honor and dignity of my country."

Officers arriving here today with the body of General Felix Gomez, who was killed in the Carrizal engagement, said that the American leaders evidently had instructed their men to concentrate their fire on the general who on account of his great bulk was an easy target. They said General Gomez was the first Mexican to fall with three bullets in his chest.

From Colonel Zuazua at Namiquipa comes the report that the Naminquipa bases has practically been abandoned and that the Americans have given the ranchers more than 200 rifles that were taken from the Villistas.

General Trevino is still treating with Contreras, Hernandez and other Villa leaders to come in and help expell the invaders.

Col. A. L. Smith, depot quartermaster for New York, is preparing for what is termed "a food exchange." The proposal is said to have the backing of Quartermaster General Sharp and Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, of the United States army.

Bandit Also Said to Have Been Seen In Chihuahua, Wearing Heavy Beard.

El Paso, Tex., June 23.—Francisco Villa has been in Juarez several times in the last four weeks, according to reports received by agents of the United States secret service here last night. This story was given some support by the arrival in El Paso, yesterday, of Mrs. Luz Villa, who subsequently was deported to Mexico. The same reports said that Villa was seen in a public plaza in Chihuahua City about three weeks ago, wearing a heavy black beard. Government agents while making every attempt to trace the origin of the rumor were inclined to place little credence in it.

JAPAN WILL GIVE CARRANZA NO AID

Will Send No Munitions Nor Assist In Any Other Way, According to Foreign Minister Ishii.

Tokio, Japan, June 24.—"Of course any claim that the Japanese government will assist Mexicans with munitions and arms is out of the question and absurd," said Baron Ishii, foreign minister, to a correspondent of the Associated Press, who asked him today for his views on the Mexican situation. The interview was sought on account of declarations attributed to Mexicans that assurances had been received from Japan that munitions and other assistance would be given to Mexico in event of war with the United States.

"As for private Japanese companies selling arms to Mexicans," the foreign minister continued, "I consider it extremely improbable. As you know all available rifles and guns are being furnished to Japan's allies to assist in bringing the European war to a successful issue. And I fancy, though I do not know, that munitions not available for our allies may have found their way to China during the revolutionary troubles.

Interests Too Great.

"Let me say this with all the emphasis and earnestness at my command," said the minister, swinging around in his chair. "The Japanese nation sincerely hopes that armed conflict between the United States and Mexico may be avoided. Japan's interest in America, North, Central and South, being entirely pacific and commercial. Any event bringing disturbances into the American market would be felt keenly in Japan. This is especially true at a moment when the whole European trade is virtually closed to Japan and the Chinese market is seriously upset."

Baron Ishii declared he had never heard of General Ramon Iturbe, a representative of General Carranza, who was reported several we ks ago to be on his way to Japan on a secret mission.

Japan's interest in Mexico, he said, was in charge of Secretary Ohta, formerly attached to the Japanese embassy at Washington. He said he had no advices from Secretary Ohta in regard to the present situation. Colonel Manuel Romero recently appointed minister to Japan by General Carranza, has reached this country, but has not had an audience with the emperor.

No War Orders There.

M. C. Tellez, the Mexican charge in an interview asserted emphatically that the Mexican government had ordered no munitions or arms in Japan and that no negotiations for such supplies were under way. The last Mexican transaction in Japan, he continued, was between General Huerta and the Mitsuit company in 1913.

In regard to General Iturbe, Senor Tellez heard recently that he had gone to Spain on a military mission. The report that the general was coming to Japan was groundless, he said.

As for Colonel Romero, Senor Tellez said he had arrived in Tokio a fortnight ago, announcing that he came in capacity of Mexican minister. It was Colonel Romero who negotiated the purchase of arms for General Huerta in 1913.

The Oriental steamship liner, Selvo Mary, which sailed on May 29 for South American ports, is due at San Francisco tomorrow, and at Salina Cruz, Mex., nine days later. Manager Asano said today that she carried no arms or munitions, and that the only freight shipment to Salina Cruz consisted of two cases of camphor, consigned to Foo Khing Tai, a Chinaman. He stated that the steamships of his line carried no munitions at any time and would refuse to transport a cargo of them.

The Nippon Yuen Kaisha (Japan Mail Steamship company) inaugurated last month a service to New York, via Panama, with the steamship Tsuhima Maru. A representative of the company said.

"The Tsuhima Maru transports no munitions. Our steamers never carry munitions to America."

U. S. Too Optimistic.

The press makes no mention of Mexican claims that munitions are procurable in Japan, but the Nichi Nichi Shimbun publishes a report from Berlin that Japan is giving support to Mexico. The opinion set forth in the press is that the United States is too optimistic regarding Mexico. It is observed that Japan should derive lessons as to how to treat China from the outcome of the American policies in regard to Mexico.

General Funston to Make No Move Until He Has Official Version of Carrizal Affair From Pershing.

SMALL FORCE HARD HIT

Reports of Stragglers Indicate Attack Was Unprovoked—Relief Troops Sent Out From Base.

Washington, D. C., June 23.—Secretary Baker made public today a report from General Pershing on the fight at Carrizal, based on personal questioning of men from the two troops of the Tenth cavalry engaged in the conflict. It was indicated that the attacks on the Americans were unprovoked, but gave no estimate of casualties on either side.

General Pershing had not had an opportunity to confer with any officer of the two companies, and Secretary Baker said that a definite conclusion as to where the blame rested could not be formed.

The report, which was taken to the White House earlier in the day and afterward laid before the cabinet, told substantially the same story carried in border press dispatches last night. It said the Mexican troops opened fire with a machine gun after a 20-minute conference between Captain Boyd, of Troop C, Tenth cavalry, commanding the detachment, and General Gomez, the Carranza commander at Carrizal.

Attack Unprovoked.

Secretary Baker's statement follows:

"The war department has received from General Funston the following, transmitted from General Pershing:

"Personally questioned troopers with reference to the Ahumada affair. Two troops 10th cavaly, Boyd's troop C, and Morey's K, joined on the night of the 20th at Ojo Santo Domingo. Marched to within one mile of Carrizal on the 21st. Captain Boyd in command arriving there at 7:30 a. m. Boyde sent in a Mexican guide to ask permission to pass through the town. Mexican guide returned with refusal from General Gomez. Then Gomez sent out note by orderly saying that Boyd might pass through the town providing he stopped for a conference.

"Then General Gomez himself came out and discussed the situation for about 20 minutes with Boyd. Meantime Mexican troops moving out from town, began surrounding Boyd's column. Gomez retired, and when he reached the right of his troops Mexicans began firing machine guns. Boyd then dismounted to fight on foot."

"General Pershing also reports that he has sent out cavalry to support and bring back the two troops in question."

San Antonio, Tex., June 24—Whether the little force of the Tenth United States cavalry under Capt. Charles T. Boyd fought their way out successfully through the ring of Mexican troops which had almost surrounded them at Carrizal, still was unknown at General Funston's headquarters today. No news from General Pershing had been received since last night's report based on the stories of stragglers from Carrizal.

Command Wiped Out.

Belief that the casualties suffered by Captain Boyd's command had been very heavy was expressed by army officers here. It was pointed out that, if 12 men had been killed as reported through Mexican sources, it would mean that from 35 to 40 had been wounded, according to the usual proportion.

These, with the number reported from Chihuahua to have been captured, would account for practically one troop or 50 per cent of the command. Indeed, from the reports available so far, it is probable that Captain Boyd's command was practically wiped out.

San Antonio, Tex., June 23.—General Funston early today awaited further details from General Pershing of the attack near Carrizal by a force of Mexicans, under Felix Gomez, on Troops C and K of the Tenth cavalry, under Capt. Charles S. Boyd. The final outcome of the battle was not made known in General Pershing's report, received at headquarters late last night, nor was any indication given of the number of casualties suffered by the little American force, which had been almost surrounded by a ring of Mexican troops. This report was based on the stories of several stragglers who had made their way back to the main column. These men, apparently soldiers not actively engaged, had made their escape before the fighting was over.

Attack Unprovoked.

According to the story told General Pershing by these stragglers, the attack was entirely unprovoked and was made after the Mexican forces had partly surrounded the Americans under cover of a parley between General Gomez and Captain Boyd. It was not until after the Mexicans had opened fire with a machine gun that Captain Boyd dismounted his command and returned the fire.

Apparently the men who made their way back to General Pershing's headquarters did not encounter the two squadrons of the Eleventh cavalry sent by General Pershing to reinforce the two troops of the Tenth and no report from this source had reached General Pershing.

General Funston pointed out a discrepancy in the report coming through Mexican sources to the effect that Captain Morey had been killed. The Mexican report stated that the American commander had been killed, while General Funston pointed out that Captain Boyd was the senior officer of Captain Morey and would have been in command.

Warned Against Aggression.

General Pershing's report stated that he had warned Captain Boyd that he was on a reconnoitering expedition only and that he was to use every precaution against precipitation of a clash with Mexican troops. The fact that these instructions had been given is taken by army officers here to substantiate the story of the stragglers that the attack was unprovoked by the Americans and made without warning

THE KLEMME TIMES

By M. M. Magner

Published every Thursday at Klemme, Iowa.

Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

Taxpayers' leagues have been formed in ten or twelve counties in Iowa, and a great many progressive and well-intending farmers have joined those leagues because they have been told by the two or three politicians who are organizing the leagues that a movement is on foot to pave all the country highways in the state of Iowa, —to bond the state for $170,000,000, or more, for the purpose of paying for these paved roads, and that the net result will be a tremendous increase in taxes.

These farmers have been told that there is so much red tape and supervision on the part of the highway commission that we are spending a great amount of the taxpayers' money to no advantage. These farmers have paid dues of one dollar a year into some of these leagues in order to contribute toward bringing about the abolishment of the highway commission and the resulting saving of that alleged "great amount of money." When these farmers realize that the highway commission is only costing the taxpayers about twenty-five cents apiece, and that they have joined an organization at a cost of one dollar a year, or even twenty-five cents a year, in order to bring about that saving, there is going to be a kick-back somewhere.

When the farmers of Iowa realize that the alleged saving of the cost of the commission is not the real purpose of endeavoring to have the commission eliminated, there will be a still further furor. That little instance at Atlantic, Iowa, about the middle of May, when Messrs. Doran and Pitt were endeavoring to organize one of their tax leagues in Cass county in order to influence the vote in the primary elections, is one that every farmer in Iowa should know and remember. The report of the meeting as contained in the Atlantic "News-Telegraph," included the following paragraph:

"Dave Long, a traveling man, who sells steel culvert pipe and road machinery to the county boards of supervisors, was the principal speaker. He gave a bitter talk against the state highway commission."

When the farmers of Iowa realize they have not only been paying dues into an organization whose ostensible purpose is to save taxpaying farmers twenty-five cents a year, and that the farmers have been spending their time and using their automobiles and teams to attend these meetings, and that after all the only big result of the elimination of the commission will be to give unprincipled bridge contractors and road material men a chance to unload inferior material or service at a high price, they will suggest that Messrs. Doran, Pitt and their co-laborers join the ranks of the exiled Iowans and renew their political scheming in some other state.

Mr. Pitt charges that "it is the belief of the Greater Iowa Association that the members of the boards of supervisors of the various counties of Iowa are ignorant, incompetent or dishonest." This statement is made by Mr. Pitt, for the sole purpose of creating a prejudice against the plan to get better roads in Iowa without any increased expenditure and without increasing the taxation. The Greater Iowa Association does not believe anything of the kind, and has repeatedly stated that it is the "system" that is to blame. If bridge companies and road material men are able to unload inferior material and service upon the boards of supervisors, at an exorbitant price, the association prefers to believe that it is not because the supervisors are incompetent or dishonest, but rather because the supervisors are not expert road or bridge engineers; they do not understand the technical details of specifications, and it is a relatively easy matter for a tricky and unprincipled salesman to get away with the taxpayers' money without giving the proper return.

Men who head the great industrial corporations of this country are seldom, if ever, technical experts in their own business. A railroad president may be an ideal executive, but when his road contemplates building tracks into some new territory, or building new bridges, he calls in his engineering department, and that engineering department works out the technical and scientific details. The engineering department prepares the specifications and calls for bids and the contracts are let by the president of the road,—having before him the recommendations of his engineering department.

It is so in every business of any magnitude,—and the expenditure of $13,500,000 a year in the state of Iowa for roads and bridges is certainly a business of some magnitude.

Therefore, boards of supervisors, if the expenditure of that $13,500,000 is to be efficiently and economically directed, should have available expert road and bridge engineers; the supervisors are in identically the same position as the president of a railroad. They are not supposed to have technical knowledge, and they have not the technical knowledge;—that is all there is to it.

SWEEP OUT THE FILTH

When a house floor is covered with filth all decent and self respecting people get a broom and commence to sweep.

Mexico is the house floor today and the United States is the man with the broom. It is time to sweep.

For five years anarchy has been prevailing in that country, and for five years each day has seen the prevailing conditions just a little worse than the day before. It has been a retrograde movement since the day President Diaz fled to France.

Today we are witnessing the assembling of an army of nearly a hundred thousand men, called to the colors because the president deems it wise to sweep the dirty Mexican floor.

This movement of troops to the Mexican border may be but the prelude to a general war with Mexico. If such is to be, then the American army should not be withdrawn until every vistage of filth has been swept from the republic to our south and a land once fair shall have been made over into a place of habitation for rational human beings.

It is not a pleasant task to undertake, but it seems to be a burden placed upon the shoulders of the American people. It will be accomplished without fuss or feathers or bluster or blow—accomplished as the people perform their routine duties of life, for such is the American spirit.

The Stars and Stripes should be respected wherever and whenever they are unfurled. Let us see that it is so.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

Preserving Foods.

A new method has been discovered, says an English paper, for preserving various food products, especially milk powder the idea being based upon placing the substance in a sealed vessel or packing case with inert gas, so that this latter prevents the usual spoiling of contents by the action of the air. In the French patented process the milk powder is packed in metal boxes of convenient size, which are entirely sealed except for a pinhole that is left at the top. A number of such boxes are put in a chamber and the air is exhausted by means of an air pump. When this operation is finished valves are opened which allow nitrogen to enter the chamber and fill up the several boxes. When opening up the chamber the boxes are quickly removed and the pinhole soldered before an appreciable amount of air has time to enter. In this way the contents of the boxes are kept in an atmosphere of inert gas, and the process is thus practical from an industrial standpoint.

Honk! Honk.

The fatalities due to automobile accidents are distressing enough, but one encouraging fact in connection with them, as stated in a government report, is that during the last five years the number of fatal accidents has not increased nearly as fast as the number of cars. The cars have increased 775 per cent, while fatalities have increased only 258 per cent. This seems to indicate more careful driving at present

"I'll tell you, Duane," she said, earnestly. "I'm sure glad if you mean to bide here awhile. I'm a miserable woman, Duane. I'm an outlaw's wife, and I hate him and the life I have to lead. I come of a good family in Brownsville. I never knew Bland was an outlaw till long after he married me. We were separated at times, and I imagined he was away on business. But the truth came out. Bland shot my cousin, who told me. My family cast me off, and I had to flee with Bland. I was only 18 then. I've lived here since I never see a decent woman or man. I never hear anything about my old home or folks or friends. I'm buried here—buried alive with a lot of thieves and murderers. Can you blame me for being glad to see a young fellow—a gentleman—like the boys I used to go with" I tell you it makes me feel full—I want to cry. I'm sick for somebody to talk to. I have no children, thank God' If I had I'd not stay here. I'm sick of this hole. I'm lonely—"

There appeared to be no doubt about the truth of all this. Genuine emotion checked, then halted the hurried speech. She broke down and cried. It seemed strange to Duane that an outlaw's wife—and a woman who fitted her consort and the wild nature of their surroundings—should have weakness enough to weep. Duane believed and pitied her.

"I'm sorry for you," he said.

"Don't be sorry for me," she said. "That only makes me see the—the difference between you and me. And don't pay any attention to what these outlaws say about me. They're ignorant. They couldn't understand me. You'll hear that Bland killed men who ran after me. But that's a lie. Bland, like all the other outlaws along this river, is always looking for somebody to kill. He swears not, but I don't believe him. He explains that gunplay gravitates to men who are the real thing—that it is provoked by the four-flushes, the bad men I don't know. All I know is that somebody is being killed every other day He hated Spence before Spence ever saw me."

"Would Bland object if I called on you occasionally?" inquired Duane.

"No, he wouldn't. He likes me to have friends Ask him yourself when he comes back. The trouble has been that two or three of his men fell in love with me, and when half drunk got to fighting You're not going to do that."

"I'm not going to get half drunk, that's certain, replied Duane.

He was surprised to see her eyes dilate, then glow with fire Before she could reply Euchre returned to the porch, and that put an end to the conversation

Duane was content to let the matter rest there, and had little more to say. Euchre and Mrs. Bland talked and joked, while Duane listened. He tried to form some estimate of her character Manifestly she had suffered a wrong, if not worse, at Bland's hands. She was bitter, morbid, over-emotional. If she was a liar, which seemed likely enough, she was a frank one, and believed herself She had no cunning The thing which struck Duane so forcibly was that she thirsted for respect In that, better than in her weakness of vanity, he thought he had discovered a trait through which he could manage her

Once, while he was revolving these thoughts, he happened to glance into the house, and deep in the shadow of a corner he caught a pale gleam of Jennie's face with great, staring eyes on him She had been watching him, listening to what he said He saw from her expression that she had realized what had been so hard for her to believe. Watching his chance, he flashed a look at her, and then it seemed to him the change in her face was wonderful

Later, after he had left Mrs. Bland with a meaning "Adios—manana," and was walking along beside the old outlaw he found himself thinking of the girl instead of the woman, and of how he had seen her face blaze with hope and gratitude.

CHAPTER VII.

That night Duane was not troubled by ghosts haunting his waking and sleeping hours. He awoke feeling bright and eager, and grateful to Euchre for having put something worth while into his mind During breakfast, however, he was unusually thoughtful, working over the idea of how much or how little he would confide in th outlaw. He was aware of Euchre's scrutiny

"Wal," began the old man, at last, "how'd you make out with the kid?"

"Kid?" inquired Duane, tentatively.

"Jennie, I mean. What 'd you an' she talk about?"

"We had a little chat. You know you wanted me to cheer her up."

Euchre sat with coffee cup poised and narrow eyes studying Duane.

"Reckon you cheered her, all right. What I'm afeared of is mebbe you done the job too well."

"How so?"

"Wal, when I went in to Jen last night I thought she was half crazy. She was burstin' with excitement, an' the look in her eyes hurt me. She wouldn't tell me a darn word you said. But she hung onto my hands, an' showed every way without speakin' how she wanted to thank me for bringin' you over. Buck, it was plain to me thet you'd either gone the limit or else you'd been kinder prodigal of cheer an' hope. I'd hate to think you'd led Jennie to hope more'n ever would come true."

Euchre paused, and, as thede seemed no reply forthcoming, he went on:

"Buck, I've seen some outlaws whose word was good. Mine is. You can trust me. I trusted you, didn't I, takin' you over there an' puttin' you wise to my tryin' to help thet poor kid?"

Thus enjoined by Euchre, Duane began to tell the conversations with Jennie and Mrs. Bland word for word. Long before he had reached an end Euchre set down the coffee-cup and began to stare, and at the conclusion of the story his face lost some of its red color and beads of sweat stood out thickly on his brow.

"Wal, if thet doesn't floor me!" he ejaculated, blinking at Duane. "Young man, I figgered you was some swift, an' sure to make your mark on this river; but I reckon I missed your real calibre. So thet's what it means to be a man! I guess I'd forgot. Wal, I'm old, an' even if my heart was in the right place I never was built fer big stunts. Do you know what it'll take to do all you promised Jen?"

"I haven't any idea," replied Duane, gravely.

"You'll have to pull the wool over Kate Bland's eyes, an' even if she falls in love with you, which is shore likely, thet won't be easy. An' she'd kill you in a minnit, Buck, if she ever got wise. You ain't mistaken her none, are you?"

"Not me, Euchre. She's a woman, I'd fear her more than any man."

"Wal, you'll have to kill Bland an' Chess Alloway an' Rugg, an' mebbe some others, before you can ride off into the hills with thet girl."

"Why? Can't we plan to be nice to Mrs. Bland and then at an opportune time sneak off without any gun-play?"

"Don't see how on earth," returned Euchre, earnestly. "When Bland's away he leaves all kinds of spies an' scouts watchin' the valley trails. They've all got rifles. You couldn't get by them. But when the boss is home there's a difference. Only, of course, him an' Chess keep their eyes peeled. They both stay at home pretty much, except when they're playin' monte or poker over at Benson's. So I say the best bet is to pick out a good time in the afternoon, drift over careless-like with a couple of hosses, choke Mrs. Bland or knock her on the head, take Jennie with you, an' make a rush to get out of the valley. If you had luck you might pull thet stunt without throwin' a gun. But I reckon the best figgerin' would include dodgin' some lead an' leavin' at least Bland or Alloway dead behind you. I'm figgerin', of course, that when they come home an' find out you're visitin' Kate frequently, they'll just naturally look for results. Chess don't like you, for no reason except you're swift on the draw—mebbe swifter 'n him. That's the hell of this gun-play business. No one can ever tell who's the swifter of two gunmen till they meet. Thet fact holds a fascination mebbe you'll learn some day. Bland would treat you civil unless there was reason not to, an' then I don't believe he'd invite himself to a meetin' with you. He'd set Chess or Rugg to put you out of the way. Still Bland's no coward, an' if you came across him at a bad moment you'd have to be quicker 'n you was with Bosomer."

"All right. I'll meet what comes," said Duane, quietly. "The great point is to have horses ready and pick the right moment, then rush the trick through."

"Thet's the only chance for success. An' you can't do it alone."

"I'll have to. I wouldn't ask you to help me. Leave you behind!"

"Wal, I'll take my chances," replied Euchre, gruffly. "I'm goin' to help Jennie, you can gamble your last peso on thet. There's only four men in this camp who would shoot me—Bland an' his right-hand pards, an' thot rabit-faced Benson. If you happened to put out Bland and Chess, I'd stand a good show with the other two. Anyway, I'm old an' tired—what's the difference if I do get plugged? I can risk as much as you, Buck, even if I am afraid of gun-play You are correct, 'Hosses ready, the right minnit, then the trick.' Thet much 's settled. Now let's figger all the little details.

They talked and planned, though in truth it was Euchre who planned. Duane who listened and agreed While awaiting the return of Bland and his lieutenants it would be well for Duane to grow friendly with the other outlaws, to sit in a few games of monte, or show a willingness to spend a little money. The two schemers were to call upon Mrs. Bland every day—Euchre to carry messages of cheer and warning to Jennie, Duane to blind the elder woman at any cost. These preliminaries decided upon, they proceeded to put them into action.

No hard task was it to win the friendship of the most of those good-natured outlaws. They were used to men of a better order than theirs coming to the hidden camps and sooner or later sinking to their lower level. Besides, with them everything was easy come, easy go. That was why life itself went on so carelessly and usually ended so cheaply. There were men among them, however, that made Duane feel that terrible inexplicable wrath rise in his breast He could not bear to be near them He could not trust himself. He felt that any instant a word, a deed, something might call too deeply to that instinct he could no longer control. Jackrabbit Benson was one of these man. Because of him and other outlaws of his ilk Duane could scarcely ever forget the reality of things. This was a hidden valley, a robbers' den, a rendezvous for murderers, a wild place stained red by deeds of wild men. And because of that there was always a charged atmosphere. The merriest, idlest, most careless moment might in the flash of an eye end in ruthless and tragic action. In an assemblage of desperate characters it could not be otherwise. The terrible thing that Duane sensed was this. The valley was beautiful, sunny, fragrant, a place to dream in; the mountain-tops were always blue or gold rimmed, the yellow river slid slowly and majestically by, the birds sang in the cottonwoods, the horses grazed and pranced, children played and women longed for love, freedom, happiness, the outlaws rode in and out, free with money and speech, they lived comfortably in their adobe homes, smoked, talked, laughed, whiled away the idle hours—and all the time life there was wrung, and the simplest moment might be precipitated by that evil into the most awful of contrasts. Duane felt rather than saw a dark, brooding shadow over the valley.

Then, without any solicitation or encouragement from Duane, the Bland woman fell passionately in love with him. His conscience was never troubled about the beginning of that affair. She launched herself. It took no great perspicuity on his part to see that. And the thing which evidently held her in check was the newness, the strangeness, and for the moment the all-satisfying fact of his respect for her. Duane exerted himself to please, to amuse, to interest, to fascinate her, and always with deference. That was his strong point, and it had made his part easy so far. He believed he would carry the whole scheme through without involving himself any deeper.

He was playing at a game of love—playing with life and death! Sometimes he trembled, not that he feared Bland or Alloway or any other man, but at the depths of life he had come to see into. He was carried out of his old mood. Not once since this daring motive had stirred him had he been haunted by the phantom of Bain beside his bad. Rather had he been haunted by Jennie's sad face, her wistful smile, her eyes. He never was able to speak a word to her. What little communication he had with her was through Euchre, who carried short messages. But he caught glimpses of her every time he went to the Bland house. She contrived somehow to pass door or window, to give him a look when chance afforded. And Duane discovered with surprise that these moments were more thrilling to him than any with Mrs. Bland. Often Duane knew Jennie was sitting just inside the window, and then he felt inspired in his talk, and it was all made for her. So at least she came to know him while as yet she was almost a stranger. Jennie had been instructed by Euchre to listen, to understand that this was Duane's only chance to help keep her mind from constant worry, to gather the import of every word which had a double meaning.

Euchre said that the girl had begun to wither under the strain, to burn up with intense hope which had flamed within her. But all the difference Duane could see was a paler face and darker, more wonderful eyes. The eyes seemed to be entreating him to hurry, that time was flying, that soon it might be too late. Then there was another meaning in them, a light, a strange fire wholly inexplicible to Duane. It was only a flash gone in an instant. But he remembered it because he had never seen it in any other woman's eyes. And all through those waiting days he knew that Jennie's face, and especially the warm, fleeting glance she gave him, was responsible for a subtle and gradual change in him. This change, he fancied, was only that through remembrance of her he got rid of his pale, sickening ghosts.

One day a careless Mexican threw a lighted cigarette up into the brush matting that served as a ceiling for Benson's den, and there was a fire which left little more than the adobe walls standing. The result was that while repairs were being made there was no gambling and drinking. Time hung very heavily on the hands of some two score outlaws. Days passed by without a brawl, and Bland's valley saw more successive hours of peace than ever before. Duane, however, found the hours anything but empty. He spent more time at Mrs. Bland's; he walked miles on all the trails leading out of the valley; he had a care for the condition of his two horses.

Upon his return from the latest of these tramps, Euchre suggested that they go down to the river to the boat landing.

"Ferry couldn't run ashore this mornin'," said Euchre. "River gettin' low an' sand bars makin' it hard fer hosses. There's a greaser freight wagon stuck in the mud. I reckon we might hear news from the freighters. Bland's supposed to be in Mexico."

Nearly all the outlaws in camp were assembled on the river bank, lolling in the shade of the cottonwoods. The heat was oppressive Not an outlaw offered to help the freighters, who were trying to dig a heavily freighted wagon out of the quicksand Few outlaws would work for themselves, let alone for the despised Mexicans.

Duane and Euchre joined the lazy group and sat down with them Euchre lighted a black pipe, and, drawing his hat over his eyes, lay back in comfort after the manner of the majority of the outlaws. But Duane was alert, observing, thoughtful He never missed anything It was his belief that any moment an idle word might be of benefit to him Moreover, these rough men were always interesting

"Bland's been chased across the river" said one.

"Naw he's deliverin' cattle to thet Cuban ship,' replied another.

Big deal on, hey?"

"Some big Ruggs says the boss hed an order fer 15,000."

"Say, that order'll take a year to fill."

"Naw Hardin is in cahoots with Bland Between 'em they'll fill orders bigger'n thet"

"Wondered what Hardin was rustlin' in here fer."

Duane could not possibly attend to all the conversation among the outlaws. He endeavored to get the drift of talk nearest to him

"Kid Fuller's goin' to cash," said a sandy whiskered little outlaw

"So Jim was tellin' me. Blood poison, ain't it? Thet hole wasn't bad But he took the fever," rejoined a comrade.

"Deger says the Kid might pull through if he hed nursin'"

"Wal, Kate Bland ain't nursin' any shot up boys these days. She hasn't go time"

A laugh followed this sally, then came a penetrating silence Some of the outlaws glanced good naturedly at Duane. They bore him no ill will. Manifestly they were aware of Mrs. Bland's infatuation

"Pete, 'pears to me you've said thet before."

"Shore Wal, it's happened before."

This remark drew louder laughter and more significant glances at Duane. He did not choose to ignore them any longer

"Boys, poke all the fun you like at me, but don't mention any lady's name again. My hand is nervous and itchy these days."

He smiled as he spoke, and his speech was drawled, but the good humor in no wise weakened it Then his latter remark was significant to a class of men who from inclination and necessity practiced at gun drawing until they wore callous and sore places on their thumbs and inculcated in the very deeps of their nervous organization a habit that made even the simplest and most innocent motion of the hand end at or near the hip. There was something remarkable about a gun fighter's hand It never seemed to be gloved, never to be injured, never out of sight or in an awkward position

There were grizzled outlaws in that group, some of whom had many notches on their gun handles, and they, with their comrades, accorded Duane silence that carried conviction of the regard in which he was held

Duane could not recall any other instance where he had let fall a familiar speech to these men, and certainly he had never before hinted of his possibilities. He saw instantly that he could not have done better.

"Orful hot, ain't it?" remarked Bill Black, presently. Bill could not keep quiet for long. He was a typical Texas desperado, had never been anything else. He was stoop shouldered and bow legged from much riding; a wiry little man, all muscle, with a square head, a hard face partly black from scrubby bear and red from sun, and a bright, roving, cruel eye. His shirt was open at the neck, showing a grizzled breast.

"Is there any guy in this heah outfit sport enough to go swimmin'?" he asked.

"My Gawd, Bill, you ain't agoin' to wash!", exclaimed a comrade.

This raised a laugh, in which Bill joined. But no one seemed eager to join him in a bath.

"Laziest outfit I ever rustled with," went on Bill, discontentedly. "Nuthin' to do! Say, if nobody wants to swim, maybe some of you'll gamble?"

He produced a dirty pack of cards and waved them at the motionless crowd.

"Bill, you're too good at cards," replied a lanky outlaw.

"Now, Jasper, you say thet powerful sweet, an' you look sweet, er I might take it to heart," replied Black, with a sudden change of tone.

Here it was again—that upflashing passion. What Jasper saw fit to reply would mollify the outlaw or it would not. There was an even balance.

"No offense, Bill," said Jasper placidly, without moving.

Bill grunted and forgot Jasper. But he seemed restless and dissatisfied. Duane knew him to be an inveterate gambler. And, as Benson's place was out of running order, Black was like a fish on dry land.

"Wal, if youall are afraid of the cairds, what will you bet on?" he asked, in disgust.

"Bill, I'll play you a game of mumbly peg fer two bits," replied one.

Black eagerly accepted. Betting to him was a serious matter. The game obsessed him, not the stakes. He entered into the mumbly peg contest with a thoughtful mien and a corded brow. He won. Other comrades tried their luck with him and lost. Finally, when Bill had exhausted their supply of two-bit pieces or their desire for that particular game, he offered to get on anything.

"She the turtle-dove there?" he said, pointing. "I'll bet he'll scare at one stone or he won't. Five pesos he'll fly or he won't fly when some one chucks a stone. Who'll take me up?"

That appeared to be more than the gambling spirit of several outlaws could withstand.

"That thet. Easy money," said one.

"Who's goin' to chuck the stone?" asked another.

"Anybody," replied Bill.

"Wal, I'll bet you I can scare him with one stone," said the first outlaw.

"We're in on thet, Jim to fire the darnick," chimed in the others.

The money was put up, the stone thrown. The turtle-dove took flight, to the great joy of all the outlaws except Bill.

"I'll bet you-all he'll come back to thet tree inside of five minnits," he offered, imperturbably.

Hereupon the outlaws did not show any laziness in their alacrity to cover Bill's money as it lay on the grass. Somebody had a watch, and they all sat down, dividing attention between the timepiece and the tree. The minutes dragged by to the accompaniment of various jocular remarks anent a fool and his money. When four and three-quarter minutes had passed a turtle-dove alighted in the cottonwood. Then ensued an impressive silence while Bill calmly pocketed the 50 dollars.

"But it hain't the same dove!" exclaimed one outlaw, excitedly. "This 'n' is smaller, dustier, not so purple."

Bill eyed the speaker loftily.

"Wal, you'll have to ketch the other one to prove thet. Sabe, pard? Now I'll bet any gent heah the 50 I won thot I can scare thet dove with one stone."

No one offered to take his wager.

"Wall, then, I'll bet any of you even money thet you can't scare him with one stone."

Not proof against this chance, the outlaws made up a purse, in no wise disconcerted by Bill's contemptuous allusions to their banding together. The stone was thrown. The dove did not fly. Thereafter, in regard to that bird, Bill was unable to coax or scorn his comrades into any kind of wager.

He tried them with a multiplicity of offers, and in vain. Then he appeared at a loss for some unusual and seductive wager. Presently a little ragged Mexican boy came along the river trail, a particularly starved and poor-looking little fellow. Bill called to him and gave him a handful of silver coins. Speechless, dazed, he went his way hugging the money.

"I'll bet he drops some before he gits to the road," declared Bill. "I'll bet he runs. Hurry, you four-flush gamblers."

Bill failed to interest any of his companions, and forthwith became sullen and silent. Strangely his good humor departed in spite of the fact that he had won considerable.

Duane, watching the disgruntled outlaw, marveled at him and wondered what was in his mind. These men were more variable than children, as unstable as water, as dangerous as dynamite.

"Bill, I'll bet you ten you can't spill whatever's in the bucket thet peon's packin'," said the outlaw called Jim.

Black's head came up with the action of a hawk about to swoop.

Duane glanced from Black to the road, where he saw a crippled peon carrying a tin bucket toward the river. This peon was a half-witted Indian who lived in a shack and did odd jobs for the Mexicans. Duane had met him often.

"Jim, I'll take you up," replied Black.

Something, perhaps a harshness in his voice, caused Duane to whirl. He caught a leaping gleam in the outlaw's eye.

"Aw, Bill; thet's too fur a shot," said Jasper, as Black rested an elbow on his knee and sighted over the long, heavy Colt. The distance to the peon was about 50 paces, too far for even the most expert shot to hit a moving object so small as a bucket.

Duane, marvelously keen in the alignment of sights was positive that Black held too high. Another look at the hard face, now tense and dark with blood, confirmed Duane's suspicion that the outlaw was not aiming at the bucket at all. Duane leaped and struck the leveled gun out of his hand. Another outlaw picked it up.

Black fell back astounded. Deprived of his weapon, he did not seem the same man, or else he was cowed by Duane's significant and formidable front. Sullenly he turned away without even asking for his gun.

CHAPTER VIII.

What a contrast, Duane thought, the evening of that day presented to the state of his soul! The sunset lingered in golden glory over the distant Mexican mountains; twilight came slowly; a faint breeze blew from the river cool and sweet; the late cooing of a dove and the tinkle of a cowbell were the only sounds; a serene and tranquil peace lay over the valley.

Inside Duane's body there was strife. This third facing of a desperate man had thrown him off his balance. It had not been fatal, but it threatened so much. The better side of his nature seemed to urge him to die rather than to go on fighting or opposing ignorant, unfortunate, savage men. But the perversity of him was so great that it dwarfed reason, conscience. He could not resist it. He felt something dying in him. He suffered. Hope seemed far away. Despair had seized upon him and was driving him into a reckless mood when he thought of Jennie.

He had forgotten her. He had forgotten that he had promised to save her. He had forgotten that he meant to snuff out as many lives as might stand between her and freedom. The very remembrance sheered off his morbid introspection. She made a difference How strange for him to realize that! He felt grateful to her. He had been forced into outlawry; she had been stolen from her people and carried into captivity. They had met in the river fastness, he to instil hope into her despairing life, she to be the means, perhaps, of keeping him from sinking to the level of her captors. He became conscious of a strong and beating desire to see her, talk with her.

These thoughts had run through his mind while on his way to Mrs. Bland's house. He had left Euchre go on ahead because he wanted more time to compose himself. Darkness had about set in when he reached his destination. There was no light in the house. Mrs. Bland was waiting for him on the porch.

Mosul's Fortunes.

Mosul, one of the cities of Mesopotamia which entertained high expectations of revived commercial importance as a result of the stimulus to be afforded by the completion of the trade artery of the near east, the Hejdad railway, has been brought suddenly into the foreground of the war by the Russian operations, and are reported to be duplicating their successes achieved previously at Erzerum and Trebizond

This town, of about 50,000 people situated on the right bank of the Tigris, 220 miles above Bagdad, just opposite the extensive ruins of the great Assyrian capital of Nineveh. Its great mosque, with its odd leaning minaret, is the chief architectural feature of this otherwise unimportant looking city.

The Suez canal long ago diverted much of Mosul's caravan commerce, but the town is still a distributing point for northern Mesopotamia. Suggesting in importance the locally manufactured woolen and cotton fabrics which received the name of "muslin" from the city, the chief article of export today is gallnuts, gathered in the adjacent mountains.

One of the peculiarities of Mosul is the bridge over the Tigris, connecting this one-time suburb of ancient Nineveh with the ruins of the parent city. Orfe-sixth of the bridge is an old stone span which joines the right bank with a small island. Beyond the island the traveler crosses the wider branch of the river by means of a pontoon or boat bridge.

As the high waters of May are receding the Tigris will soon cause the silt enriched islands around Mosul and by midsummer there will be a bountiful harvest of melons and other fruit, provided the natives have had time during their preparations for defense against the grand duke's army to plant their customary crops.

Among the places of interest pointed out to the traveler in this section of Mesopotamia is the tomb of Jonah, recalling vividly to mind the history of the mighty metropolis, founded, supposedly, by Ninus and the famed Semiramis more than 2,000 years before the Christian era, and to which the prophet Jonah had been sent with a warning at the time of his adventure with the "great fish."

Mosul has undergone many vicissitudes since its capture by the Arabs in the seventh century. Syrians and Kurdish hordes held it successively during the Tenth and Eleventh centuries, during which came a final flare of splendor under the rulerships of the remarkable General Zengi. It was this amir who launched from Mosul the first counter crusade against the "Latin Christians" in Palestine.

The final accomplishment of the Mosul amir's crusade fell to the lot of Saladin, son of one of Zengi's generals and a Mahometan ruler of many exceptional virtues.

Definition of a Standpatter.

From the Kansas City Star.

What is a standpatter? From his standpoint he is the bulwark of society who is on the job to save the institutions worked out by the wisdom of the ages from the assaults of those who would destroy them. The progressive regards as one who can always be depended to oppose progress.

Perhaps he might be described more accurately as the man who persists in lighting his house by candles instead of electricity because he believes candles a worthy institution and should be perpetuated. The progressive, in distinguishing from the standpatter, looks on both candles and electricity as devised for the light, and prefers electric light as more the purpose rather better.

The standpatter feels that the constitution and the present industrial organization are the final results of civilization. The progressive looks on them as a step for producing results. The standpatter feels that any interference with the present social arrangements is needless evil. The progressive would preserve the tools only so long as they seem adequate to produce the best possible results.

The standpatter has a horror at any suggestion to amend the constitution so as to provide insurance of various sorts for workers. These changes seem to him to interfere with the very foundations of modern lift. The progressive believes the constitution and the present happy lucky industrial system have achieved some wonderful results. But if there is an adjustment to achieve better results he is ready to adjust them.

German Women Police.

From the Pathfinder.

Enlistments for the army have greatly reduced the Berlin police force, so a special corps of women, known as "the watch on the Spree," has been organized for night duty. The majority of the women in the corps belong to the working classes or gymnastic instructors. All are of powerful build and are physically able to cope with almost any lawbreaker. The women have assigned their own uniforms. Each member is accompanied by a dog while on duty. They work in two shifts, from 6 at night to midnight and the other from midnight to 6 in the morning.

Fostering Talent.

From the Washington Star.

"Your daughter has a wonderful voice. You ought to cultivate it."

"What for? A voice doesn't show in moving pictures. But I've got a girl with a funny walk whom I expect to be drawing $1,000 a week one of these days."

Preparedness.

Along with the proof of our char-
as a nation, must go the proof our power to play the part that leitely belongs to us. The people the United States love peace. They ect the rights and covet the friend-of all other nations. They desire r any additional territory nor advantage which cannot be peace-gained by their skill, their indusor their enterprise; but they in-upon having absolute freedom of nal life and policy and feel that owe it to themselves and to the of spirited independence, which it their sole ambition to play, that they render themselves secure nst the hazard of interference from quarter and should be able to pro-their rights upon the seas or in part of the world. We, therefore, the maintenance of an army adequate to the requirements of
, of safety and of the protection the nation's rights, the fullest dement of modern methods of sea defense and the maintenance of dequate reserve of citizens trained rms and prepared to safeguard the e and territory of the United s against any danger of hostile which may unexpectedly arise;
a fixed policy for the continuous pment of a navy worthy to supthe great naval traditions of the d States, and fully equal to the rnational tasks which the United s hopes and expects to take a in performing. The plans and en-ment of the present congress af-substantial proof of our purpose
this exigent matter.

Neutrality and U. S. Interests.

The democratic administration has ughout the present war scrupulous-and successfully held to the old paths neutrality and of the peaceful pur-of the legitimate objects of our nal life, which statesmen of all parties and creeds have prescribed for themselves in America since the beginning of our history. But the circumstances of the last two years have revealed necessities of international action, which no former generation can have forseen. We hold that it is the duty of the United States to use its power, not only to make itself safe at home, but also to make secure its just interests throughout the world and both for this end and in the interest of humanity to assist the world in securing settled peace and justice.

For League of Nations.

"We believe that every people has the right to choose the sovereignty under which it shall live, that the small states of the world have a right to enjoy from other nations the same respect for their sovereignty and for their territorial integrity that great and powerful nations expect and insist upon and that the world has a right to be free from every disturbance of its peace that has its origin in aggression or disregard of the rights of peoples and nations, and we believe that the time has come when it is the duty of the United States to join with the other nations of the world in any feasible association that will effectively serve these principles, to maintain inviolate and complete security of the high way of the seas for the common and unhindered use of all nations.

Basis For World League.

"The present administration has consistently sought to act upon and realize in its conduct of the foreign affairs of the nation the principles that should be the object of the association of the nations formed to secure the peace of the world and then the maintenance of national and individual rights. It was followed the highest American tradition. It has preferred respect for the fundamental rights of smaller states even to property interests, and has secured the friendship of the people of these states for the United States by refusing to make a more material interest an excuse for the assertion of our superior power against the dignity of their soverign independence. It has regarded the lives of its citizens and the claims of humanity as of greater moment than material rights and peace as the best basis for the just settlement of commercial claims. It has made the honor and ideals of the United States its standard alike in negotiation and action.

Pan Americanism.

"We recognize now as we have always recognized, a definite and common interest between the United States with the other peoples and republicans of the western hemisphere in all matters of national independence and free development. We favor the establishment and maintenance of the closest relations of amity and mutual helpfulness between the United States and the other republics of the American continents for the support of peace and the promotion of commerce among those states. To that end we favor all measures which may be necessary to facilitate intimate intercourse and promote commerce between the United States and her neighbors to the south of us, and such international understandings as may be practicable and suitable to accomplish these ends.

We commend the action of the democratic administration in holding the Pan-American financial conference at Washington in May, 1915, and organizing the international high commission which represented the United States in the recent meeting of representatives of the Latin-American republics at Buenos Aires, April, 1916, which have greatly promoted the friendly relations between the people of the western hemisphere.

Monroe Doctrine.

The Monroe doctrine is reasserted as the principle of democratic faith That doctrine guarantees the independent republics of the two Americas against aggression from another continent It implies as well, the most scrupulous regard upon our part for the sovereignty of each of them.

Mexican Policy.

The want of a stable, responsible government in Mexico capable of repressing and punishing marauders and bandit bands, who have not only taken the lives and seized and destroyed the property of American citizens in that country, but have insolently invaded our soil, made war upon and murdered our people thereon, has rendered it necessary temporarily to occupy by our armed forces a portion of the territory of that friendly state. Until, by the restoration of law and order, therein, a repetition of such incursions is improbable, the necessity of their remaining will continue "Intervention, implying as it does, military subjugation, is revolting to the people of the United States, notwithstanding the provocation to that course has been great and should be resorted to, if at all, as a last resort. The stubborn resistance of the president and his advisers to every demand and suggestion to enter upon it, is creditable alike to them and to the people in whose name he speaks."

Merchant Marine.

"Immediate provision should be made for the development of the carrying trade of the United States. Our foreign commerce has in the past been subject to many unnecessary and vexatious obstacles in the way of legislation of republican congresses Until recent democratic tariff legislation, it was hampered by unreasonable burdens of taxation. Until the recent banking legislation it had at its disposal few instrumentalities of international credit and exchange. Until the formulation of the pending act to promote the construction of a merchant marine, it lacked even the prospect of adequate carriage by sea. We heartily indorse the purposes and policy of the pending shipping bill and favor all such additional measures of constructive or remedial legislation as may be necessary to restore our flag to the seas and to provide further facilities for our foreign commerce, particularly such laws as may be made to remove unfair conditions of competition in the dealings of American merchants and producers with competitors in foreign markets.

Conservation.

"For the safeguarding and quickening of the life of our own people we favor the conservation and development of the unnatural resources of the country through a policy which shall be positive rather than negative—a policy which shall not withhold such resources from development, but which, while permitting and encouraging their use, shall prevent both waste and monopoly in their exploitation, and we earnestly favor the passage of acts which will accomplish these objects, and we reaffirm the declaration of the platform of 1912 on this subject.

"The policy of reclaiming our arid lands is to be steadily adhered to.

The Administration and the Farmers.

"We favor the vigorous prosecution of investigations and plans to render agriculture more profitable and country life more healthful, comfortable and attractive and we believe that this should be a dominant aim of the nation, as well as of the states. With all its recent improvement, farming still lags behind other occupations in [illegible] islands as being in fulfillment of

"Safety First."

From the Saturday Evening Post.

Percy Ames, who is just back from the warring side of the world, says a mustering officer—a sergeant—met on the street of an English coast village a strapping, upstanding youngster of 21, or thereabouts. The noncom hailed him:

"See, 'ere, me lad," he said, "are you in good 'ealth?"

"I are," stated the youth.

"Are you married?"

"I aren't."

"Ave you any one dependent on you."

"I 'ave not."

"Then your king and country need you. Why don't you enlist?"

The youth stared at the sergeant, round eyed.

"Wot?" he said. "With this bloomin' war goin' on? You must think I'm a silly fool."

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

Had Her Safe.

At the amateur operatic performance of "The Mistletoe Bough"—in which, as you remember, the heroine hides in a cellar chest and is smothered to death—the lady who played this part was, vocally, a terrible flasco. Nevertheless, they struggled along until the scene where she climbed into the box—a real "property" kindly loaned for the occasion by John Smith, president of the local safe-deposit company. The lid snapped down with a click that was only too realistic.

A frightened stage manager rushed out to where the owner of the box sat and whispered:

"Gimme the key! The lid of your blooming box has sprung locked!"

"Is that woman going to sing any more?"

"Sure, she comes in as a ghost in the next act and sings two songs."

"That settles it," muttered old John Smith. "She can just stay there."

Nothing Left.

"You don't hear much lately about those terribly destructive tornadoes that used to be so prevalent throughout the Middle West."

"No, you don't. It must be that the politicians out there are using all the available supply of wind."

"I want cut rates on this job."

"What is it?"

"Trimming my trees and hedges."

Salvini's Descendants.

Salvini, the great Italian tragedian, made it a condition that none of his sons should act in Italy so long as he remained on the stage. So Gustavo was banished to the other countries of the continent and acted in Russia and Austria with some successes. Alexander learned the English language and played in this country until he died at an early age. Tomaso is now an actor in Italy and is said to have inherited to a greater degree than any of his brothers the talents of his father. Salvini was married twice; first to Clementine Cazzola, an eminent Italian actress, who died, leaving him three small children. Many years later he married an Englishwoman named Lottie Sharp, by whom he had two children. His grandchildren have attracted attention in art and other circles in Italy.

Unlike common corn flakes, the New Post Toasties don't mush down when milk or cream is added.

And they have a charming new flavour—delicious, different, the true essence of the corn—not found in corn flakes heretofore.

The intense heat of the new process of manufacture raises tiny bubbles on each delicious brown flake and these little puffs are the identifying feature.

These new flakes are firmer, crisper, and don't crumble in the package—in comparison, ordinary corn flakes are as "chaff."

PUT ON THE OTHER PEDAL

This is the time when the national campaign should be fought out on sane and gentlemanly lines--where brothers may retain brothers though they vote for different men

With war confronting us in Mexico, and the possibility of the ultimate entry of Japan into the fray, we can not afford as a nation to have a party hatred and personal animosity injected into the campaign. We have need of every ounce of patriotism we can call into being if we are to escape even a portion of the horrors of the war across the water

It is right that every American citizen should exercise his right to vote his own sentiments at the polls in November, but let us remain friends and brothers and united citizens while so doing.

For once at least in its history the people and candidates of the United States should conduct a national campaign without stooping to personal villification and abuse.

While voting in accordance with our inalienable right to free thought and franchise, we should remember that our neighbor of the other political faith has the same right to his views, and they should be voiced at the polls without bias or predjudice from either source,

Make it a campaign of gentlemen between gentlemen, and for gentlemen, and we will all be better gentlemen when the vote is announced.

PAIN'S FIRE WORKS

The Fourth of July Committee has contracted with Pain's Fire Work People to put on a $1000.00 display of fire works on the lake during the evening.

The display is to be of the same magnitude as the North Iowa Fair, Mason City for the past three years-except all features will be mdae for the lake display.

I, Thos. H. Thompson, Treasurer of Hancock County, Iowa, do hereby certify that the report given above is a correct summary of the business transacted by me as said Treasurer during the period therein specified.

THOS. H. THOMPSON,
County Treasurer

Semi-Annual report of Thos. H. Thompson, treasurer of Hancock county, Iowa, for the period from January 1st, 1916 to May 31st, 1916, inclusive.

ORIGINAL NOTICE

In the District Court of Iowa in and for Hancock County, October Term, 1916.

Hamery & Nelson, plaintiffs, vs. E. P. Hanson, county auditor of Hancock County, Iowa, Frank P. Oleson, A. W. Dana, Fred Stork, L. M. Naser, and Mark Backman, members of the board of supervisors of said county; Nellie Walsh et al., defendants.

To said defendant Nellie Walsh:

You are hereby notified that there is now on file in the office of the clerk of the district court of Hancock County, Iowa, the verified petition of plaintiffs, claiming that plaintiffs made a contract with the auditor and board of supervisors of Hancock County for the construction of drainage District No. 44 which contract is in force; that plaintiffs sub-let a portion thereof to Nels Myking, who performed a part thereof and received 80 per cent of his compensation and thereafter abandoned his said work unfinished. That divers persons, including defendant Nellie Walsh, filed claims with the auditor against the funds to be used for the payment for said ditch. That the said Nellie Walsh filed such claim for cooking for the said Myking, in the sum of $177.91. That said claim was filed too late; is not properly itemized; is not for any items furnished plaintiffs; and is not a valid claim against plaintiff and should not be paid by the said Auditor out of said funds.

Said petition prays that the court decree that said claim is invalid to hold any fund due or to be due plaintiffs from said district and does not justify with holding any part thereof from plaintiffs, that said Board and Auditor are not justified in paying same, and that same is junior to plaintiff's claim against said funds, and for equitable relief.

For particulars see petition on file

And unless you appear and defend before noon of the second day of the October term of the District Court of Hancock County Iowa, which commence and will be held at the court house in Garner, Iowa, on the 9th day of October, 1916, default will be taken against you and judgment rendered herein as by law provided.

THOMPSON & LOTH,
Attorneys for Plaintiff.

Dated this 1st day of June, 1916.

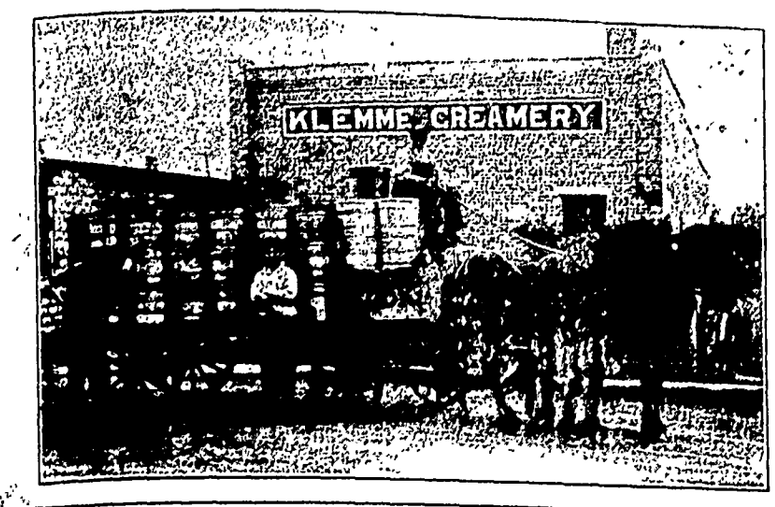
Why It Pays To Trade With Firms That Advertise
¶ Advertising creates sales. The modern business man knows this; he also knows he must depend upon many sales with a small profit rather than on a few with big profits. The world knows the firm that advertises most can sell cheapest.

VOLUME XX. NUMBER 44 KLEMME, IOWA, THURSDAY, JULY 6, 1916. $1 50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE

A Real "Live Wire" Local Institution



A Three Day's Business Ready for Shipment

The above picture was taken June 15, 1916, showing one shipment of butter, representing three days business and netted the local creamery the neat sum of $1,384.83 from the New York market.

The Klemme creamery was opened for business on the 22nd of September 1913, less than three years ago and showed a good business from the start, but the growth in business has been nothing short of sensational. The creamery has now close to three hundred patrons and has reached a point where they are turning down business rather than take any more, and in order to take care of the increased business which they would be able to secure, the directors may decide to put on a night shift. A large amount of the success of the business is due to the efficient and untiring efforts of manager, A. D, Gimer, and President, C. A. Arnold, The directors are also entitled to mention. There is not any question but that the Klemme creamery is one of the foremost if not leader of any creamery in Northern Iowa and is an institution which we can all point to with just pride The total amount of business transacted in 1915-16 will run close to $100,000 00

The make of butter for the month of June totals 640 tubs or 40,960 lbs of butter which brought $11,520 on the New York Market. The local creamery's product always sells at a premium The above business shows an increase of thirty three per cent over 1915. Klemme paid 31 cents for June butterfat which was from one to three cents per pound more than any other creamery in this neighborhood. We say, can you beat it?

The local test association comes in for a share of the credit of the increased amount of business as several of the members have been weeding out the "robber" and adding profit producing animals to their herd which means larger cream checks. While others have not only decreased their herds but are drawing larger checks and milking less cows The test association is bound to mean many more dollars of profit to its membership if they take akvantage of the opportunities which it presents.

The following list of patrons, one hundred and eight in number who received at least $30 00 for May butterfat is ample proof that every statement made above is absolutely and correct. The June list will show a much larger number of patrons than this list, Let's all boost for a two hundred class in this list.

RINGLING BROTHERS COMING THIS WAY

World's Biggest Circus and Spectacle "Cinderella" Announced for Early Date.

Announcement is made that on Thursday, July 13, Ringling Bros. circus will give afternoon and night performances at Mason City.

The famous showmen are this season presenting an all new and wonderful program. The tremendous fairyland spectacle, "Cinderella," will appeal to both young and old. More than 1000 persons take part in it. It is easily the biggest spectacle Ringling Bros. have ever staged and its glorious "Ballet of the Fairies," with 300 dancing girls, is in itself worth going many miles to see. Following "Cinderella" 400 arenic artists appear in the main tent program. Because of the great European war the Ringlings have secured scores of circus performers never before seen in America. An entire trained animal show has been made a part of the main tent program this season. The menagerie now numbers 1009 wild animals. The elephants, including "Big Bingo," the earth's largest pachyderm, have been increased. There will be 60 clowns and a big free three-mile street parade show day morning.

THE KLEMME TIMES

KLEMME, IOWA

A new method has been discovered, says an English paper, for preserving various food products, especially milk powder, the idea being based upon placing the substance in a sealed vessel or packing case with inert gas, so that this latter prevents the usual spoiling of contents by the action of the air. In the French patented process the milk powder is packed in metal boxes of convenient size, which are entirely sealed except for a pinhole that is left at the top. A number of such boxes are put in a chamber and the air is exhausted by means of an air pump. When this operation is finished valves are opened which allow nitrogen to enter the chamber and fill up the several boxes. When opening up the chamber the boxes are quickly removed and the pinhole soldered before an appreciable amount of air has time to enter. In this way the contents of the boxes are kept in an atmosphere of inert gas, and the process is thus practical from an industrial standpoint.

Des Moines, Ia., July 1.—Because they refused to take the oath of allegiance to the United States and consent to fight on the Mexican border, five privates in company L, of Council Bluffs, were stripped of their uniforms and drummed out of camp in disgrace.

When the faint hearted militiamen stepped out of line as the call was sounded they were surrounded by other members of company L.

The men were grabbed, overpowered and thrown to the ground. Their phaki uniforms were removed, their slouch hats were seized, and every bit of army equipment was preempted

TOUGH LIFE AHEAD FOR 'SLACKERS' WHO WILL NOT TAKE OATH

Major Philpot Gives Them Job of Doing "Dirty Work" In Camp.

Des Moines, Ia., July 1.—War is hell, but it's worse than war to be a "slacker" under Maj. S. B. Philpot, of the Second regiment.

The major yesterday made "slacking" the most disagreeable thing about Camp Dodge. And he also put the Second regiment on record as having fewer soldiers who finally refused the second oath than any of the three regiments.

It all began when in the First battalion in the regiment there were 12 men who dropped out of rank when the oath was administered. The major, a veteran of British army service in the Boer war and a soldier by birth, viewed the ceremonies. By the time the last man had fallen out of the line the major was so enraged he could hardly restrain himself.

Jeers of No Consequence.

The men had little time to pay attention to the jeers of their companions, however, before the major decided upon a method of saving more of them to the regiment.

"Sergeant Kelly," he ordered, "take those 12 men to the top of that hill, make 'em cut heavy logs and carry 'em back here and build a bridge across this ditch. Be sure the logs are heavy, and be sure the men carry them. The mules are too busy to haul logs."

Find Job Difficult.

His orders were followed. Part of the time the major followed the detail. The men were not allowed a moment's rest. They walked down the hillside with the heavy logs. They were not even given a breathing respite. As soon as they reached the bottom they were ordered to put the logs in position, and the positions they chose didn't suit the major until they had been changed several times.

The men struggled and sweat and sweat and struggled. The hot June sun dried up the perspiration as fast as it appeared, the men didn't have time to wipe it off.

Half an hour after they had refused to serve the president 10 of the first detail of 12 had changed their minds and went back to the mustering line.

But as fast as the men went back others came on. Companies B, C and F, from Ida Grove, Webster City and Fort Dodge respectively, had no slackers, but the other companies made up for them. And as fast as the men came on the major would put them at work—"the dirtiest, hardest work," as he put it.

If the major has his way he will take the "slackers" to the border and make them do the dirty work for the other men. He will ask the war department for that privilege, he said yesterday

"There's that fellow in the blue suit," he interrupted himself. "He's an ex-regular. Wouldn't take the oath If I don't make him wish he was in Halifax my name ain't Philpot!"

CORN GOOD BUT SLOW; GRAINS IN GOOD SHAPE

The weekly bulletin of the Iowa weather and crop service for the week ending June 27, follows

The week as a whole was cool, cloudy and showery, but the last three days gave much higher temperature and more sunshine. The average daily deficiency of temperature for the week was about five degrees, and, though showers were frequent, the rainfall was generally below the normal, except in the southern counties where there was an excess of moisture Over the larger part of the state rapid progress was made in cultivating corn, and most of it has been plowed the second time and in a few localities the third cultivation has begun The fields are generally clear, and the corn has a good color, but is small and backward. Some of the acreage intended for corn in the southeastern counties has not been planted on account of continued wet weather, and will be devoted to Soudan grass, millet or cowpeas. All spring sown grains are generally in good condition and give promise of good yields, though in many localities oats are heading short. More reports are received of red rust in winter wheat in the southern counties. Some clover hay was cut. Potatoes are doing well, notwithstanding the fact that bugs are numerous Several local wind squalls did considerable damage to small buildings and trees and blew off many apples and plums.

JUDGE WILL DECIDE WHETHER YOUNG MAN BELONGS TO GUARDS

Youth Says He Joined Only For Camp—Officer Denies It.

Des Moines, Ia., June 30.—Whether Donald Parker will have to go to the Mexican border with the field hospital corps of the Iowa national guard will be decided by Judge W. S. Ayres next Saturday.

Following a hearing on the [illegible] in the habeas corpus proceedings brought in behalf of young Parker, who was ordered to camp with the guard, but who claims he is not a member of the militia, Judge Ayres took the matter under advisement late yesterday afternoon.

The day was spent yesterday taking testimony for the young man and for officers of the militia and for Sheriff John Griffin, who, as an officer of the state placed young Parker under arrest when he failed to answer the call for mobilization.

The young man claims he and other men enlisted for the 1914 encampment of the guard and that when they went in they were told they would be discharged just as soon as the emcampment was over.

Parker claimed that he was only 16 years old at the time of his enlistment, therefore too young for military service and that under the law he cannot be held, that his enlistment is illegal.

Maj Thomas Duhigg, officer in charge of the field hospital corps, and the officer who enlisted Parker, swore that Parker's application for entry to the militia showed he was 18 years old. The officer also testified that he told Parker the only way he could secure his discharge from the militia after the encampment was by him leaving the city, or state, or had business that prevented him from serving in the militia.

AUTOS VS. BATHTUBS; LATTER OUTNUMBERED IN HAWKEYE STATE

Professor Reports That a Motor Is Deemed More Important.

Ames, Ia., June 29.—Should a farmer buy an automobile when he does not have a bathtub in the house? This is the question that is raised by Dr. John Ise, of the department of economics of Iowa State college, after estimating that there are not half as many of the modern bathing devices in Iowa as there are of the modern ways of joy riding. While figures are not available for the whole state, information from certain counties shows this to be true.

In Orange township, Blackhawk county, which is an unusually wealthy and cultured community, there are just a few more than half as many bathtubs as autos. In most parts of the state there can be nothing like this number.

"Iowa has done a lot of boasting about her number of automobiles. Is it too much to hope that some day she may regard bathtub statistics of equal importance?" asks Dr. Ise.

Fort Dodge, Ia., June 29.—Fort Dodge gave 202 young men to the state militia. Companies F and C and five officers left at 11 02 a. m. for Des Moines. Their leaving was the occasion of the biggest ovation ever witnessed in Fort Dodge. All the business houses of the city were closed. Headed by the band, all the clergymen of the city and the directors of the Commercial club the guardsmen were taken to the train. A crowd of 10,000 joined in the leave taking. There were few smiles and no laughs in all this number, and even the cheering that sped them on their way did not raise the spirit of gloom that pervaded the entire assembly.

Just before the train pulled out E. G. Larson, one of the best known citizens, presented each of the companies F and G with $100. He said he had been to war himself and knew what it meant. The soldiers were decorated with flowers and fortified with cigars, the gifts of citizens. A dance given in the benefit of the companies Saturday gave an additional $60 for the needs of the boys. AMERICANS ASSAILED BY BRAZILIAN DEPUTY

Rio Janeiro, June 27.—The keen interest with which Brazil is following the developments of the crisis between the United States and Mexico, received a new impetus today following a spirited discussion in the chamber of deputies during which an opposition deputy made a bitter attack on the United States.

The discussion was opened by this deputy who, commenting on the last note sent to Mexico, by Secretary Lansing, declared he was astonished that the United States should make difficulties in accepting the explanations of Mexico, while promptly accepting those of Germany in regard to the submarine war. The speaker asserted that Germany was continuing its under sea campaign in violation of its promise at Washington, and that the United States did not dare to protest. He concluded by expressing the hope that Brazil would continue to defend the principle of the sovereignty of all countries. Deputy Souza Silva, speaking for the government, defended the international policy of administration and declared that Brazil stood firmly for the solidtary and fraternity of the American nations. Deputy Souza denied reports that the voyage of Dr. Lauro Muller, minister of foreign affairs to the United States, had to do with the Mexican situation.

Demand Early Reply.

A brief talk followed during which Mr Lansing took occasion to make it plain that the Washington government expected an early reply to its note forwarded to Mexico last Sunday The ambassador was impressed with the fact that the state was growing impatient at the delay

All members of the cabinet agreed after the meeting that both the situation and the policy of the United States was unchanged as a result of recent developments.

The release of the captured troops has delayed military action but not relieved the critical diplomatic situation now existing Several reports from Special Agent Rodgers referring to refugees or routine matters did not mention the Mexican note He has had no light to shed on the course Carranza would take.

Censorship Order.

The war department censorship order follows

"In view of the fact that general knowledge of troop movements en route to the border or in Texas might result in some malicious act that might seriously hamper these movements and also might result in unnecessary loss of life among troops it is directed that all concerned be instructed to the effect that no information is to movements of troops is to be given to representatives of the press or to any persons than the officials of the War Department concerned, or the representatives of the American Railway association at the various department headquarters and mobilization concentration points

The new press censorship of the war department issued today provides that guns, ammunition, planes on the border have been secured and are being sent forward

MOST OF AMERICAN DEAD ARE BURIED AT CARRIZAL

El Paso, Tex June 30 All but a few of the Americans who fell at Carrizal including the bodies of Captain Boyd and Lieutenant Adair have been buried in the Carrizal cemetery so government officials were informed here today by an American who has just returned from that district The few unburied lay on the outskirts of the field and apparently had been overlooked

From the same source, the Carranza casualties in the fight were put at 26 killed and 50 wounded The Mexicans also lost 35 horses killed

TENSION AT EL PASO IS RELIEVED BY NEW TURN

El Paso, Tex., June 30 —Tension which had gripped the border since the Carrizal encounter relaxed perceptibly today as a result of the safe return to the American side of the 23 troopers of the Tenth cavalry and the American scout taken prisoner in the engagement.

Stories told by the soldiers that they had suffered no ill-treatment at the hands of the troopers of the de facto government of Mexico and that every effort had been made to control violence, manifested by the inflamed civil population at Villa Ahumada, and Chihuahua City, where the prisoners were stoned and jeered had marked effect here.

In official circles in Juarez, the Mexican city across the Rio Grande news dispatches that the return of the negro soldiers had averted the possibility of immediate retaliatory steps by the United States were received with obvious satisfaction. Andres Garcia, Mexican consul at El Paso, expressed himself as believing that the first step looking toward a peaceful solution of the problem has been taken and that others would follow shortly.

At the request of General George Bell, jr., commanding the El Paso military district, Mr. Garcia today made preliminary arrangements for the return at the expense of the American government, to the United States for burial, of the bodies of the American soldiers killed at Carrizal. No accurate figures on the dead are available, but the estimate is 15 and it is believed all were killed.

At the Fort Bliss hospital, where the 23 troopers who were brought from Chihuahua are being held, it was stated that it probably will be several days before it can be determined whether any of the soldiers contracted any of the diseases rampant in some districts in northern Mexico, and before they can be returned to their troops.

GREAT HOSPITALS READY ON BORDER

Arrangements Made to Handle Thousands of Cases—29 Field Hospital Companies Soon to Be In Service.

San Antonio Tex. June 30 —Adequate preparation to preserve the health of troops now moving to the border and to care for the sick and those who might be wounded in event of a clash with Mexico, practically have been completed

Base hospitals capable of caring for 500 patients each were established at San Antonio and Fort Bliss. There is also a smaller base hospital at Douglas Ariz Arrangements have been made to establish other base hospitals at Fort Crockett, near Galveston, Eagle Pass, Laredo and Nogales. Camp hospitals have been established all along the border

In the regular army there are seven field hospital companies, and seven ambulance companies The national guard will add to this force 22 field hospitals and 22 ambulance companies. Steps have been taken to equip all field ambulance companies with motor ambulances and each field hospital will be given a motor truck

A report reached Fort Sam Houston late last night that bandits had made a raid on the bridge guard at MacDona, Tex but later it was learned that the report was untrue and grew out of a fight between the two soldiers of the guard in which both were wounded.

FEAR OF ATTACKS ON TROOP TRAINS

Funston Orders Movements Be Kept Secret Because of Plots to Wreck Guard Transports.

San Antonio, Tex., June 30.—While thousands of National Guardsmen were moving over converging lines today toward border stations, extraordinary precautions were being taken to prevent the exact routings and schedules of the numerous special trains from becoming widely known. General Funston was instructed by the secretary of war to exercise the utmost precaution in concealing details of the mobilization. General managers of all railroads carrying troops have been instructed not to make public the movement of trains. It was explained at headquarters that these measures were taken to render more difficult any attempt that might be made to wreck trains. Information obtained by the intelligence officers has indicated that such an attempt might be made.

It was hoped at General Funston's headquarters that the greater part of the troops now moving would be on the border by Saturday night and that early in the coming week such disposition would be effected as to render available for prompt action the heavily reinforced army along the international line.

Reports from General Pershing and from officers at border points contain no indication of hostilities by Mexican troops. Reports that a strong Mexican force had interrupted General Pershing's lines of communication were denied.

PART OF TROOPS ARE READY; OTHERS WON'T TAKE OATH

Lincoln, Neb., June 30.—The Fourth Nebraska regiment will be fully mustered and physically examined and ready to begin its journey to the border by noon today, according to officials this morning. All were examined yesterday but two companies. The mustering of the Fifth regiment has been delayed on account of the refusal of about half of a company from Gothenburg to take the oath. It was said this morning that most of the company had decided to comply and that the mustering of this regiment would be complete today.

EASTERN GUARD TROOPS ROUTED THROUGH CHICAGO

Chicago, June 30.—Chicago continude today to be the "change cars" or rather "change roads" point in the movement of federalized national guards from the eastern department, United States army, to the Mexican border. During the night the First Connecticut cavalry and the Connecticut signal corps arrived on the Nickel Plate railroad and transferred to the Chicago Great Western tracks. Shortly afterward battalions one, two and three of the Eighth Massachusetts infantry came in over the Nickel Plate and switched to the Chicago & Alton road.

Pennsylvania troops are due today over the Chicago & Eastern railroad. It was said that the national guards from West Virginia may also pass through this city late this afternoon.

TO PROVIDE RELIEF.

Roswell, N. M., June 20.—The $500 spent annually by the city for Fourth of July celebrations, will be devoted to a fund for pensioning dependents of its national guard contingent now in federal service, it was announced today.

CLEMENCY IS URGED FOR BRITISH TRAITOR

Manchester Guardian Suggests Casement Be Saved From Death.

London, July 1.—The Manchester Guardian, one of the most influential papers in the country makes a direct plea for clemency for Sir Roger Casement.

While admitting that no other sentence but that of death could have been pronounced by the court, the Guardian says:

"Casement was a fanatic and his crime like those of many other fanatics are free from the taint of sordidness and meanness. The death penalty will do nothing to kill such dreams as his. Rather, it will give them life.

"For the sake of the new Ireland, which we hope to see, it is a moment for clemency."

An indirect plea for mercy is made by other papers on the grounds that the execution of Casement would not assist in settling the Irish problem.

Washington, June 30.—A resolution requesting the president to ask the British government for a stay of execution of Sir Roger Casement, the Irish leader convicted of treason yesterday in London, pending presentation of new facts was introduced in the Senate today by Senator Martine, of New Jersey

It was referred to the foreign relations committee.

WILSON WILL NOT APPOINT COLONEL

No Chance For Teddy and Wood to Win Military Glory Under Present Administration.

Washington, D. C., July 1.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will not be permitted by President Wilson or the present administration to lead as a major general a division of volunteers to the defense of the border, even though Colonel Roosevelt should organize such a division.

Neither will Major General Wood, who ranks the other active major generals of the army, be sent to command on the border or to head a division into Mexico, should war come.

Political considerations have cut both of these leaders from the spotlight in any military emergencies that the country might have to face.

Congress cannot help because the president alone has the power to appoint the officers to command the volunteer troops that may be called or taken into the regular service, or to make details for the regular officers to important commands of regular troops engaged in active service.

Roosevelt Plan Out.

Friends of Colonel Roosevelt, hoping to move congress to accept his offer of a volunteer division, have discussed and rejected the possibility of naming Colonel Roosevelt by special act as major general in command of his volunteer division. Congress tried this once, but its action was held invalid.

Both Colonel Roosevelt and General Wood have become too active in connection with the Hughes campaign for President Wilson to allow any favors to be extended to them by the democratic administration. Colonel Roosevelt has been a constant critic of President Wilson, and his recent letter to the progressives, indorsing Hughes, did not please the Wilson people.

Counts Against Wood.

While General Wood has taken no active part in politics, the administration leaders have several counts against him. These started with the general's invitation a year ago to Colonel Roosevelt to attend the Plattsburg "rookie" camp, where General Wood was in charge.

The colonel made a speech criticising the democratic administration on that occasion, and General Wood was brought to book by the then secretary of war, Lindley M. Garrison, for having permitted the speech.

Since then General Wood has been a dinner guest with Colonel Roosevelt at important gatherings, which were given more or less political significance and still more recently he has been a caller on Mr. Hughes, following the latter's nomination for the presidency.

It is known here that Colonel Roosevelt has been organizing his volunteer division for more than two years, expecting need for it in war with Mexico. He has selected all his officers from the rank of retired regular army men or those who have been permitted to resign by the war department. His men for the division have been picked with an eye both to infantry and cavalry service that they might be more effective than were the rough riders of the Spanish-American war.

MANY SEEKING TO FIGHT UNDER COLONEL ROOSEVELT

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 30.—Applications for enlistment in a proposed voluntary army division which Col. Theodore Roosevelt is preparing to organize if there is a call for volunteers are so numerous that the colonel's secretary, Walter J. Hayes, issued today a statement in which he said:

"We have been literally deluged with telegrams and letters with applications from men who wish to join a volunteer division. It is physically impossible to reply individually to the organizations and to the men that have communicated with us, but I will see that their applications are carefully filed for future reference so that in the event of hostilities they can be apprised of what action is contemplated."

Offers of equipment include almost everything necessary from shoes and automobiles to aeroplanes.

FOUR VILLA BANDITS PUT TO DEATH TODAY

Deming, N. M., June 30.—Four Villistas who took part in the Columbus raid were executed by hanging in the county jail here today.

The men were put to death in pairs. Enzevio Renteria and Taurino Garcia were placed on the scaffold first. They were not pronounced dead until after 20 minutes had passed.

Jose Rangel and Juan Castillo, were next. Their necks were broken and death was almost instantaneous.

The four men were calm. Jose Rangel swaked a cigaret as the noose was adjusted.

HEAVY ARTILLERY BATTLE CONTINUES ON FRENCH FRONT

Germans Are Replying to Furious Bombardment—Trench Raids Are Executed By English Troops.

VERDUN DEBACLE GOES ON

Germans Take Works Only to Lose Them Again—Russians Overwhelm Austrian Lines.

Petrograd, June 30, (via London). The war office announced today the capture of the town of Obertine, south of the Dneister river, and villages north and south of that point.

British Headquarters, in France, (via London) July 1.—Activity continues and increases along the whole British front, the initiative, as heretofore resting almost entirely with the British. Besides a heavy bombardment of the enemy's positions which in some places did material damage, a dozen local raids have been executed since yesterday nearly all of which in addition to inflicting more or less serious casualties succeeded in the capture of prisoners.

The German reply to the British bombardment is still generally ineffective though in places the Germans have been very active, using large numbers of lachrymatory shells.

BRITISH OFFICER LOSSES NOW TOTALS 27,905 MEN

London, July 1.—Casualties among officers in the British army continue to pile up. Published lists for the month of May show that 466 were killed, 1,086 wounded and 55 missing—a total of 1,607. This brings the aggregate losses since the commencement of the war to 27,905, of whom 8,574 were killed or died of wounds, 17,424 were wounded and 1,907 are missing.

Losses during the month have been heaviest in the Indian contingent in Mesopotamia with 48 killed and 197 wounded. Canadians lost 33 killed and 80 wounded.

Among officers of high rank, Brigadier Generals Hogston, Heyworth, Rice and Morrison were killed or died of wounds; three other brigadier generals were wounded and 11 lieutenant colonels were killed.

GERMANS TAKE FRENCH WORKS, THEN LOSE THEM

Paris, July 1.—In a terrific attack upon the French positions east of Hill 304 in the Verdun sector the Germans captured a fortified work in the first line of the French trenches after the garrison had been literally buried under a storm of shells. The position was recaptured by a brilliant French counter attack, according to an official statement issued by the French war office today

The Germans also delivered a powerful attack on the French positions in Avocourt wood and west of Hill 304, but all their efforts are declared to have been checked with heavy losses to the attackers. Considerable activity is reported on the front from Nieuport to the Aisne.

RUSSIANS GAIN ACCESS TO CARPATHIAN PASSES

London, July 1.—Recent Russian successes in Gulicia and Bukowina have resulted, it is believed, in further demoralization of the Austrian defenders. The capture of the Kolomea-Lemberg railroad and the fall of Kolomea has given Russia easy access to the passes of the Carpathian mountains, leading to the planes of Hungary.

224,000 IN NEED.

New York, July 1.—Distribution of 1,000 oxen to 2,000 Armenian families in 46 villages of the Russian Caucasus was reported today by the American committee for Armenian and Syrian relief. These families were refugees who are returning to their homes following the advance of the Russian armies into Turkey. The consul added that there was still need for expenditure on a large scale. The committee estimates there are about 224,000 refugees in the Caucasus and in Persia.

RUSSIANS IN RETREAT SAYS TURKISH REPORT.

Constantinople, (via London) June 29.—Russian troops in Persia have withdrawn from their fortified positions near Kerind after two desperate attacks which were repulsed by the Turks, says today's official Turkish announcement. The Turkish troops are pursuing the enemy.

MAINE IS CENTER OF HOT POLITICAL FRAY

Election to Be Held There In September and Both Sides Seek First Blood.

Washington, July 1.—A fierce political struggle in Maine is presaged by the political experts in Washington.

The Maine election is held in September and the leaders of both parties, for the moral effect of victory there, are anxious to make the best possible showing in the state. This is one reason why the Pine Tree state will be a real battleground. Another strong reason is that because of the death of Senator Burleigh, two senators are to be elected from Maine this fall. It will be highly important to the republican plans for the capture of the Senate if they can elect these two senators, and, of course, equally important to the democrats to have these places.

BRING HOME REFUGEES.

Vera Cruz, June 30.—The Ward line steamer Monterey, with a capacity passenger list of American refugees, is expected to sail this afternoon. The steamer is anchored near the battleship Nebraska, on which refugees in large numbers have been quartered. The transfer of the passengers began this morning.

Was McClellan a Traitor?

In Harper's Magazine there are printed for the first time extracts from John Hay's diary, written when he was Lincoln's secretary. Writing in 1864, he recounts a story told him by Lincoln which reveals McClellan in a new light.

"On September 25, 1864, Hay records that a letter had just come from Nicolay, who was in New York, stating that Thurlow Weed, the dominant Republican leader in New York State, with whom Nicolay was to confer, had gone to Canada. When Hay showed the President the letter he said: 'I think I know where Mr. Weed has gone. I think he has gone to Vermont, not Canada. I will tell you what he is trying to do. I have not as yet told anybody.'

"And then Lincoln proceeded to unfold the following story of a remarkable intrigue:

"'Some time ago the Governor of Vermont came to me on "business of importance." He said I fixed an hour and he came. His name is Smith. He is, though you would not think it, a cousin of Baldy Smith. Baldy is large, blond, florid. The Governor is a little, dark sort of man. This is the story he told me, giving General Baldy Smith as his authority:

"'When Gen. McClellan was here at Washington in 1862 B Smith was very intimate with him. They had been together at West Point and friends. McClellan had asked for promotion for Baldy from the President and got it. They were close and confidential friends. When they went down to the Peninsula their same intimate relations continued, the General talking freely with Smith about all his plans and prospects, until one day Fernando Wood and one other Democratic politician from New York appeared in camp and passed some days with McClellan.

"'From the day this took place Smith saw, or thought he saw, that McClellan was treating him with unusual coldness and reserve. After a little while he mentioned this to McClellan, who, after some talk, told Baldy he had something to show him. He told him that these people who had recently visited him had been urging him to stand as an opposition candidate for President; that he had duly considered the thing over and had concluded to accept their proposition, and had written a letter which he [illegible] giving his idea of [illegible] so as to conciliate and impress the people of the South with the idea that our armies were intended merely to execute the laws and protect their [illegible] showing himself to [illegible] that the ancient [illegible]

"'He [illegible] to Baldy, who, after [illegible] said [illegible] General do you not see [illegible] this treason, and that it will [illegible] and all of us? After some [illegible] the General desired of the letter in Baldy's presence, and thanked him warmly for his frank and friendly counsel. After this he was again taken into the confidence of McClellan.

"'Immediately after the battle of Antietam Wood and his familiar came again and saw the General and again Baldy saw an immediate estrangement on the part of McClellan. He seemed to be anxious to get his intimate friends out of the way and to avoid opportunities of private conversation with them. Baldy he particularly kept employed on reconnoissance and such work. One night Smith was returning from some duty he had been performing and, seeing a light in McClellan's tent, he went in to report. He reported and was about to withdraw when the General requested him to remain. After every one was gone he told him those men had been there again and had renewed their proposition about the Presidency; that this time he had agreed to their proposition and had written them a letter according to their terms and pledging himself to carry on the war in the sense already indicated. This letter he read then and there to Baldy Smith.

"'Immediately thereafter B. Smith applied to be transferred from that army. At very nearly the same time other prominent men asked the same — Franklin, Burnside and others.

"'Now that letter must be in the possession of F. Wood, and it will not be impossible to get it. Mr Weed has, I think, gone to Vermont to see the Smiths about it.'

"Hay continues:

"'I was very much surprised at the story and expressed my surprise. I said I had always thought that McClellan's fault was a constitutional weakness and timidity, which prevented him from active and timely exertion, instead of any such deep-laid scheme of treachery and ambition.

"'The President replied: "After the battle of Antietam I went up to the field to try to get him to move, and came back thinking he would move at once. But when I got home he began to argue why he ought not to move. I peremptorily ordered him to advance. It was nineteen days before he put a man over the river. It was nine days longer before he got his army across, and then he stopped again, delaying on little pretexts of wanting this and that. I began to fear he was playing false—that he did not want to hurt the enemy. I saw how he could intercept the enemy on the way to Richmond. I determined to make that the test. If he let them get away I would remove him. He did so, and I relieved him.'"

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or side, headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The moment you feel an ache or pain begin, drink a glass of water with a teaspoonful of salts before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with [illegible] and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, neutralize the acids in urine, so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Adjuncts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

CLEAN UP AND PAINT UP NOW

CLEAN UP AND PAINT UP.

Let's Make Our Town Attractive, Sanitary and Safe.

An Editorial by BRUCE BARTON in "Every Week."

I have in mind two towns. Entering one, the railroad runs between two rows of dirty back yards filled with tin cans and rubbish. Entering the other, it passes houses neatly painted, back yards with flowers in them, and streets swept clean.

These two towns had the same population five years ago. But recently two new factories have moved to one of them; real estate values have advanced; new houses are being built, everybody is prosperous and happy.

And the residents of the other town cannot understand their "bad luck."

A real "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaign would have taken the "bad luck" town out of its rut.

This year more than 6,000 cities and towns in the United States are conducting "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaigns.

Many men and women go through life without ever doing anything for their community. "Clean Up and Paint Up" offers you your chance.

The greatest miracles of modern times have been performed with bonfires, drain pipes, soap and paint. The Philippines have been made a healthier place to live in than the average American town. Typhoid has been stamped out of Serbia. The Panama Canal zone has been transformed from a dismal, unhealthy swamp to a wholesome place for homes.

Last year Cleveland, in its "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaign, disposed of refuse sufficient to fill a train three and one-half miles long.

Another middle western town gathered its boys together, and, by offering a reward for each 100 tin cans, abolished its unsightly back yards in a single day.

"There is no better test of the civilization of a community than this: How much paint does it use?"

A wise man said that.

It is not given to you to found a religion or make a great invention or discover a new continent.

But you can make your town a cleaner, better place to live in. And by so doing you give a little push to the chariot of civilization.

"GREATER THAN FIRE LOSS"

By PROF. H. H. KING,
Kansas State Agricultural College.

Lack of paint causes a greater annual loss through deterioration than the aggregate Kansas fire loss for twelve months. Yes, there is much more reason for a real "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaign than the average layman would at first recognize.

Paint, as has often been said, serves more than the mere purpose of decoration. Its principal value lies in the fact that it prolongs the life of the surfaces painted.

Wood and iron on exposure to the air undergo a slow process of oxidation, which just as surely destroys them as though they were set on fire, the difference being the speed at which the reaction occurs.

We take out insurance to cover loss by fire and should just as surely put on paint to cover loss by decay. It takes very little calculation to discover the apparently astounding fact that the loss through lack of painting is greater in Kansas than the loss by fire.

When the property owner comes to a full realization of the true reason for painting there will be no need for public spirited people to back up a National Campaign for such a purpose.

CLEAN UP AND PAINT UP.

To Remove "For Rent" Signs.

[illegible] TOLEY
President [illegible]

It is [illegible] evident that houses which are for rent should be without tenants because in most cases such houses are unpainted, the surroundings untidy and the property out of repair.

[illegible] in any town largely due to the [illegible] of the individual citizens. If more people would turn out [illegible] and for them use simple signs [illegible] to rent. Lots would [illegible] according to size [illegible] other on [illegible] lots of [illegible] and [illegible] cities [illegible] shown a few cases of the desired size but the houses were not in good condition. It is true that some of the landlords say they are willing to make certain repairs [illegible] has been my experience after years [illegible] that it is best to rent [illegible] house in attractive shape first and you will quickly get a tenant.

Houses that are kept repaired and painted not only rent better, but greatly improve the looks of the city.

THERE'S WORK FOR ALL IN THIS CAMPAIGN

CLEAN UP AND PAINT UP.

Women Can Take a Leading Part In This Movement For Beautiful, Sanitary and Safe Home Towns.

By LOUISE KERPER, Chairman Civic Committee, Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs.

Women are housekeepers. They are apt to see more clearly the need of municipal housecleaning than are men. Through our clubs we have an excellent opportunity to lead in "Clean Up and Paint Up" work. Here are some pointers for women who would help [illegible] their community with a real "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaign.

Each campaign involves the renovation of the interiors of buildings as well as yards, streets and alleys.

The removal of all rubbish and useless things is most important.

Some revenue can be derived from the sale of waste paper.

During the "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaign is a good time to have rubbish cans placed upon street corners, for the deposit of paper.

Nothing will do more to improve the appearance of a town than the liberal use of paint.

Useless and unsightly outbuildings should be torn down.

Business houses need attention. Rubbish accumulates in cellars, under stairways, in storerooms, passageways and in the rear of hotels and restaurants. Look out for RATS here.

A clean yard is not sufficient; it should be pleasing to the eye. Plant grass and flower seeds. Sod bare spots in lawns. Plant shrubs, vines and trees. The thresholds of a town should be made inviting to the visitor.

This is a good time to find out about the sanitary ordinances of the town. How about the regulations in regard to garbage collection, the use of closed garbage cans, manure piles, spitting, toilets, etc.? Are they adequate? Are they enforced? Appoint a committee on this subject. Have the ordinance published and distributed widely.

It is very important that the "Clean Up and Paint Up" idea be impressed upon the minds of school children.

By THE EDITOR.

MONKEYS imitate. Sheep follow the leader. And most of us—men, women and children alike—are prone to do the same.

Imitation is bad for the monkey and bad for the sheep if the example followed is bad. But it is good for both if the leadership is safe. Just so with us mortals. Inspired by environment, we can think great thoughts and do things worth while. Depressed by environment, we can sink into the depths of despondency.

But, thanks to human powers of initiative, we can shape our environment. We can make it what we will, if we will. And so intimately are our own interests linked with those of our neighbors that when we improve our own surroundings, be it ever so little, we improve theirs.

Right there the monkey in man asserts itself.

Today your neighbor fixes up his yard, removes rubbish, plants flowers, trims his hedge, paints his house.

Tomorrow your own place looks sick. You never noticed before that a little cleaning up and painting up would accomplish so much in making home life happy and healthy through the long outdoor months of summer. So you get busy with the pruning shears, the rake, lawn mower and garden hose. You start a painter working on your house and outbuildings. Forthwith you, your wife and the kiddies begin to realize more fully the "joy of living" in the good old summer time.

Day after tomorrow other neighbors will begin to perk up their premises and their persons. Then others will follow their example, and so the spirit of spring's regeneration will spread from house to house and block to block.

But let's not wait for this creeping regeneration of our town. Let's organize immediately a continuous "Clean Up and Paint Up" campaign and make the refurbishing a thorough community movement. Our official community can help, and so can each civic organization, and the business men, and the women, and the children.

Let's make "Clean Up and Paint Up and Keep It Up" our slogan and live up to it.

Now we will all be busy as humming birds with our cleaning, painting and fixing

SPRINGTIME'S spirit is "catching" and we don't want Mother Nature to outdo us in dressing up. Get started early with this spring's overhauling—and get your supplies from us. We have everything you need for painting, beautifying and preserving your property.

Maybe your house would look better for a coat of paint; or possibly the fence, outbuildings or screens seem a little dingy in the bright spring sunshine. How about your floors? Are they showing heel-marks? And has some of the furniture been scratched up?

Painting, or varnishing, will not only beautify, it will make the wood last so much longer that it's actually cheaper to paint than not. Paint fills the cracks and holes where germs lurk, makes for sanitation. Spring calls for Paint. Heed the call of Spring!

A Galley o' Fun!

ALMOST-PHILOSOPHY.

A public official, we are told, should conduct himself in his first term as if it were his last, and no doubt he would, only for the fact that if he does it almost certainly is.

A farmer, while chopping out a bees' nest in a hollow tree, found a keg of whisky forty years old. Lots of men would like to cut out the booze in this way.

Diogenes took a lantern and went looking for an honest man. If he had taken an automobile lamp, and what goes with it, he'd have run into any number of them.

A bad correspondent sometimes makes a good husband.

All is vanity, but especially all book reviews.

EXTREME CASES.

"Bredren," said Parson Black, earnestly, "dere am some folks in which de still, small voice ob conscience keeps a-gettin' stiller and' smaller until at las' it 'd hab ter l'arn de deef an' dumb langwidge if it wants ter attract dir attention!"

BALLAD OF SOC'L MAINTENANCE.

The grocer duns us twice a day,
The butcher has his grievance, too,
The milkman wants his long-sought pay,
The landlord's in a dreadful stew;
The baker seems to have in view
One end—to dun us early, late;
But then—what would you have us do?
One must maintain one's social state!

The back-stair carpet wears away,
In fact, it's ragged—it's not new.
Of such we make no great display
To those who stroll our parlors through:
Our parlors to the chosen few
Present an air of riches great,
To our true plight they give no clue—
One must maintain one's social state!

In truth, we would not—could not—say
That we have found enjoyment true
In this our mode of life; but stay!
The system on us claps the screw!
The Wealthy-Wonders led the crew,
We scrimp and pinch and imitate—
What other course can we pursue?
One must maintain one's social state!

L'Envoi.

Around our good Dame Fashion drew
Her tinseled mantle. Lo! We wait
Upon our knees to catch the cue—
One must maintain one's social state!

AT THE BALL GAME.

He—I suppose you know what a rooter is?

She—Why, of course. A rooter is a man who acts as if he was crazy.

THE SUPREME TEST.

"You aspire to become our Professor of Modern Languages?" asked the President of the Board of Trustees of the Milledgeville College.

"Yes, sir," was the respectful answer of the applicant.

"Konnen Sie Deutsch sprechen?" asked the Professor sharply.

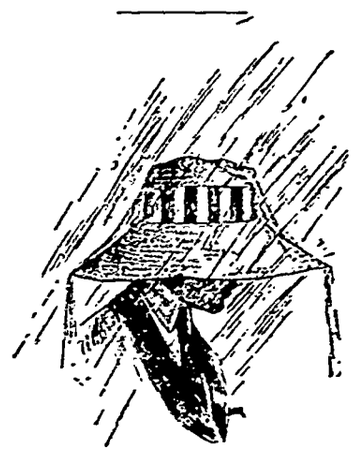
"Jawohl!" came the answer of the applicant, not to be taken off his guard thus easily.

"Parlez-vous francais?" demanded the interogator, giving the applicant no time for recovery.

"Oui," said the applicant. The President beamed with pleasure upon his fellow members of the Board.

"It seems," he said, addressing no one in particular, "that the gentleman is eminently qualified for the post. But," turning again to applicant, "there is one more question that I must ask you. What is the simian equivalent of fear as expressed in the monkey language as transcribed by Professor Garner?"

Realizing that he had failed in the supreme test, the applicant turned sadly away.



THE PANAMA CANAL.

SOMETHING TO HOLD HIM TO.

"Always be the same as you are now," he whispered to her tenderly, "and it is all I ask, my dearest one."

"And if I am, you will always love me?" she said, quietly.

"Yes," he answered her, "always."

She looked beyond him—into space. Only SHE knew that ere long she would be quiet different, for she was growing stout!

Then she smiled into his face. "And the more you see of me, the greater will be your love, will it not?" she asked.

"Yes," he answered, "I swear it!" And thus she was comforted.

DANIEL AND THE LIONS.

And it came to pass that Daniel was cast into the den of Lions by order of King Darius.

Early the next morning, King Darius went to the den, rolled away the stone, and called out: "Do the lions bite?"

"Not unreasonably," replied Daniel, who was well up in the general vernacular of the day.

"Good," ejaculated King Darius as he rolled back the stone. Whereupon he went forth and proclaimed to the multitude that the lion question had been solved.

Editor (suddenly awakening) — If there are any prominent people mixed up in it you might give us seven hundred words.

Murphy—No, indade! Whin Mullaney threw the brick there wasn't one man of thim would come out and fight.

She embraced him, and the sudden, violent, unfamiliar contact sent such a shock through him that he all but forgot the deep game he was playing. She, however, in her agitation did not notice his shrinking From her embrace and the tender, incoherent words that flowed with it he gathered that Euchre had acquainted her of his action with Black.

"He might have killed you!" she whispered, more clearly; and if Duane had ever heard love in a voice he heard it then It softened him After all, she was a woman, weak, fated through her nature, unfortunate in her experience of life, doomed to unhappiness and tragedy He met her advance so far that he returned the embrace and kissed her. Emotion such as she showed would have made any woman sweet, and she had a certain charm It was easy, even pleasant, to kiss her but Duane resolved that whatever her abandonment might become he would go no further than the lie she made him act

"Buck, you love me?" she whispered

"Yes, yes," he burst out, eager to get is over, and even as he spoke he caught the pale gleam of Jennie's face through the window He felt a shame he was glad she could not see Did she remember that she had promised not to misunderstand any action of his? What did she think of him, seeing him out there in the dusk with this bold woman in his arms? Somehow that dim sight of Jennie's pale face, the big dark eyes, thrilled him, inspired him to his hard task of the present.

"Listen, dear," he said to the woman, and he meant his words for the girl. "I'm going to take you away from this outlaw den if I have to kill Bland, Alloway, Rugg—anybody who stands in my path. You were dragged here. You are good—I know it. There's happiness for you somewhere—a home among good people who will care for you. Just wait till—"

His voice trailed off and failed from excess of emotion Kate Bland closed her eyes and leaned her head on his breast Duane felt her heart beat against his, conscience smote him a keen blow If she loved him so much But memory and understanding of her character hardened him again, and he gave her such commiseration as was due her sex, and no more.

"Boy, that's good of you," she whispered, "but it's too late I'm done for I can't leave Bland. All I ask is that you love me a little and stop your gun-throwing"

The moon had risen over the eastern bulge of dark mountain, and now the valley was flooded with mellow light, and shadows of cottonwoods wavered against the silver

Suddenly the clip-clop, clip clop of hoofs caused Duane to rise his head and listen Horses were coming down the road from the head of the valley. The hour was unusual for riders to come in Precisely the narrow, moonlit lane was crossed at its far end by black moving objects Two horses Duane discerned

"It's Bland!" whispered the woman grasping Duane with shaking hands "You must run' No he'd see you That 'd be worse It's Bland' I know his horse's trot'

"But you said he wouldn't mind my calling here" protested Duane, "Euchre's with me It'll be all right"

"Maybe so," she replied, with visible effort at self-control Manifestly she had a great fear of Bland. "If I could only think'"

Then she dragged Duane to the door, pushed him in

"Euchre, come out with me' Duane you stay with the girl' I'll tell Bland you're in love with her Jen, if you give us away I'll wring your neck"

The swift action and fierce whisper told Duane that Mrs. Bland was herself again Duane stepped close to Jennie who stood near the window. Neither spoke, but her hands were outstretched to meet his own They were small, trembling hands, cold as ice He held them close, trying to convey what he felt—that he would protest her She leaned against him, and they looked out of the window Duane felt calm and sure of himself. His most pronounced feeling besides that for the frightened girl was a curiosity as to how Mrs. Bland would rise to the occasion. He saw the riders dismount down the lane and wearily come forward. A boy led away the horses. Euchre, the old fox, was talking loud and with remarkable ease, considering what he claimed was his natural cowardice.

"—that was way back in the '60s about the time of the war," he was saying "Rustlin' cattle wasn't nuthin' then to what it is now An' times is rougher these days. This gun-throwin' has come to be a disease Men have an itch for the draw same as they used to have fer poker. The only real gambler outside of greasers we ever had here was Bill, an' I presume Bill is burnin' now."

The approaching outlaws, hearing voices, halted a rod or so from the porch. Then Mrs. Bland uttered an exclamation, ostensibly meant to express surprise, and hurried out to meet them. She greeted her husband warmly and gave welcome to the other man. Duane could not see well enough in the shadow to recognize Bland's companion, but he believed it was Alloway.

"Dog-tired we are and starved," said Bland, heavily. "Who's here with you.

"That's Euchre on the porch. Duane is inside at the window with Jen," replied Mrs. Bland.

"Duane!" he exclaimed. Then he whispered low—something Duane could not catch.

"Why, I asked him to come," said the chief's wife. She spoke easily and naturally and made no change in tone. "Jen has been ailing. She gets thinner and whiter every day. Duane came here one day with Euchre, saw Jen, and went loony over her pretty face, same as all you men. So I let him come."

Bland cursed low and deep under his breath. The other man made a violent action of some kind and apparently was quieted by a restraining hand.

"Kate, you let Duane make love to Jennie?" queried Bland, incredulously.

"Yes, I did," replied the wife stubbornly. "Why not? Jen's in love with him. If he takes her away and marries her she can be a decent woman."

Bland kept silent a moment, then his laugh pealed out loud and harsh.

"Chess, did you get that? Well, by God! what do you think of my wife?"

"She's lyin' or she's crazy," replied Alloway, and his voice carried an unpleasant ring.

Mrs. Bland promptly and indignantly told her husband's lieutenant to keep his mouth shut.

"Ho, ho, ho!" rolled out Bland's laugh.

Then he led the way to the porch, his spurs clinking, the weapons he was carrying rattling, and he flopped down on a bench.

"How are you, boss?" asked Euchre.

"Hello, old man. I'm well, but all in."

Alloway slowly walked on to the porch and leaned against the rail. He answered Euchre's greeting with a nod.

Mrs. Bland's full voice in eager questioning had a tendency to ease the situation. Bland replied briefly to her, reporting a remarkably successful trip

Duane thought it time to show himself He had a feeling that Bland and Alloway would let him go for the moment They were plainly nonplussed, and Alloway seemed sullen, brooding

Jennie," whispered Duane, "that was clever of Mrs Bland We'll keep up the deception Any day now be ready!"

She pressed close to him, and a barely audible "Hurry'" came breathing into his ear.

"Good night, Jennie," he said aloud. "Hope you feel better tomorrow."

Then he stepped out into the moonlight and spoke. Bland returned the greeting, and, though he was not amiable, he did not show resentment.

"Met Jasper as I rode in," said Bland, presently. "He told me you made Bill Black mad, and there's liable to be a fight. What did you go off the handle about?"

Duane explined the incident. "I'm sorry I happened to be there," he went on. "It wasn't my business."

"Scurvy trick that'd been," muttered Bland "You did right. All the same, Duane, I want you to stop quarreling with my men. If you were one of us—that'd be different. I can't keep my men from fighting. But I'm not called on to let an outsider hang around my camp and plug my rustlers."

"I guess I'll have to be hitting the trail for somewhere," said Duane.

"Why not join my band? You've got a bad start, already, Duane, and if I know this border you'll never be a respectable citizen again You're a born killer I know every bad man on this frontier More than one of them have told me that something exploded in their brain, and when sense came back there lay another dead man. It's not so with me. I've done a little shooting, too, but I never wanted to kill another man just to rid myself of the last one. My dead men don't sit on my chest at night That's the gun fighter's trouble. He's crazy He has to kill a new man he's driven to it to forget the last one"

"But I'm no gun fighter," protested Duane "Circumstances made me—"

"No doubt" interrupted Bland, with a laugh "Circumstances made me a rustler You don't know yourself. You're young; you've got a temper. Your father was one of the most dangerous men Texas ever had I don't see any other career for you Instead of going it alone a lone wolf, as the Texans say why not make friends with other outlaws? You'll live longer"

Euchre squirmed in his seat

'Boss I've been givin' the boy exactly that same line of talk That's why I took him in to bunk with me. If he makes pards among us there won't be any more trouble An' he'd be a grand feller fer the gang I've seen Wild Bill Hickok throw a gun, an' Billy the Kid, an' Hardin, an' Chess here all the fastest men on the border An' with apologies to present company I'm here to say Duane has them all skinned His draw is different You can't see how he does it"

Euchre's admiring praise served to create an effective little silence. Alloway shifted uneasily on his feet his spurs jangling faintly, and did not lift his head Bland seemed thoughtful.

"That's about the only qualification I have to make me eligible for your band" said Duane, easily

'It's good enough," replied Bland shortly "Will you consider the idea?"

'I'll think it over Good night"

He left the group, followed by Euchre When they reached the end of the lane, and before they had exchanged a word, Bland called Euchre back Duane proceeded slowly along the moonlit road to the cabin and sat down under the cottonwoods to wait for Euchre. The night was intense and quiet, a low hum of insects giving the effect of a congestion of life The beauty of the soaring moon, the ebony canons of shadow under the mountain, the melancholy serenity of the perfect night, made Duane shudder in the realization of how far aloof he now was from enjoyment of these things Never again so long as he lived could he be natural His mind was clouded. His eye and ear henceforth must register impressions of nature, but the joy of them had fled

Still, as he sat there with a foreboding of more and darker work ahead of him, there was yet a strange sweetness left to him, and it lay in thought of Jennie The pressure of her cold little hands lingered in his. He did not think of her as a woman, and he did not analyze his feelings. He just had vague, dreamy thoughts and imaginations that were interspersed in the constant and stern revolving of plans to save her.

A suffling step roused him. Euchre's dark figure came crossing the moonlit grass under the cottonwoods. The moment the outlaw reached him Duane saw that he was laboring under great excitement. It scarcely affected Duane. He seemed to be acquiring patience, calmness, strength.

"Bland kept you pretty long," he said.

"Whait till I git my breath," replied Euchre. He sat silent a little while, fanning himself with a sombrero, though the night was cool, and then he went into the cabin to return presently with a lighted pipe.

"Fine night," he said; and his tone further acquainted Duane with Euchre's quaint humor. "Fine night for love affairs, by gum!"

"I'd noticed that," rejoined Duane.

"Wal, I'm a son of a gun if I didn't stand an' watch Bland choke his wife till her tongue stuck out an' she got black in the face."

"No!" ejaculated Duane.

"Hope to die if I didn't. Buck, listen to this here yarn. When I got back to the porch I seen Bland was wakin' up. He'd been too fagged out to figger much. Alloway an' Kate had gone in the house, where they lit up the lamps. I heard Kate's high voice, but Alloway never chirped. He's not the talkin' kind, an' he's damn dangerous when he's that way. Bland asked me some questions right from the shoulder. I was ready for them, an' I swore the moon was green cheese. He was satisfied Bland always trusted me, an' liked me, too, I reckon. I hated to lie black thet way, But he's a hard man with bad intentions toward Jennie, an' I'd double-cross him any day.

"Then we went into the house. Jennie had gone to her little room, an' Bland called her to come out. She said she was undressin.' An' he ordered her to put her clothes back on. Then, Buck, his next move was some surprisin'. He deliberately throwed a gun on Kate. Yes sir, he pointed his big blue Colt right at her, an' he says:

"'I've a mind to blow out your brains.'

"'Go ahead,' says Kate, cool as could be.

"'You lied to me,' he roars.

"Kate laughed in his face. Bland slammed the gun down an' made a grab fer her. She fought him, but wasn't a match fer him, an' he got her by the throat. He choked her till I thought she was strangled. Alloway made him stop. She flopped down on the bed an' gasped fer a while. When she come to them hard-shelled cusses went after her, trying to make her give herself away. I think Bland was jealous. He suspected she'd got thick with you an' was foolin' him. I reckon thet's a sore feelin' for a man to have—to guess pretty nice, but not to be sure. Bland gave it up after a while. An' then he cussed an' raved at her One sayin' of his is worth pinnin' in your sombrero 'It ain't nuthin' to kill a man I don't need much fer thet But I want to know, you hussy!'

"Then he went in an' dragged poor Jen out. She'd had time to dress He was so mad he hurt her sore leg You knows Jen got thet injury fightin' off one of them devils in the dark An when I seen Bland twist her hurt leg I had a queer hot feelin' deep down in me an' fer the only time in my life I wished I was a gun-fighter

'Wal, Jen amazed me She was whiter n a sheet, an' her eyes were big and stary, but she had nerve Fust time I ever seen her show any

"'Jennie,' he said, 'my wife said Duane came here to see you I believe she's lyin' I think she's been carryin on with him, an I want to know If she's been an' you tell me the truth I'll let you go. I'll send you out to Huntsville, where you can communicate with your friends. I'll give you money'

"Thet must hev been a hell of a minnit fer Kate Bland. If ever I seen death in a man's eye I seen it in Bland's. He loves her. Thet's the strange part of it.

"'Has Duane been comin' here to see my wife?' Bland asked, fierce-like.

"'No, said Jennie

"'He's been after you?'

"'Yes.'

"'He has fallen in love with you' Kate said thet.'

"'I—I'm not—I don't know—he hasn't told me.'

"'But you're in love with him?'

"'Yes,' she said, an' Buck, if you only could have seen her' She throwed up her head, an' her eyes were full of fire Bland seemed dazed at sight of her An' Alloway, why, thet little skunk of an outlaw cried right out. He was hit plumb center He's in love with Jen An' the look of her then was enough to make any feller quit He jest slunk out of the room I told you, mebbe thet he'd been tryin' to git Bland to marry Jen to him. So even a tough like Alloway can love a woman'

"Bland stamped up an' down the room. He sure was dyin' hard

"'Jennie,' he said, once more turnin' to her 'You swear in fear of your life thet you're tellin' truth. Kate's not in love with Duane? She's let him come to see you? There's been nuthin' between them?'

"'No I swear,' answered Jennie as Bland sat down like a man licked

"'Go to bed, you white-faced' Bland choked on some word or other a bad one, I reckon—an he positively shook in his chair

'Jennie went then an Kate began to have hysterics An' your Uncle Euchre ducked his nut out of the door an' come home"

Duane did not have a word to say at the end of Euchre's long harangue He experienced relief As a matter of fact he had expected a good deal worse He thrilled at the thought of Jennie perjuring herself to save that abandoned woman What mysteries these feminine creatures were!

"Wal, there's where our little deal stands now," resumed Euchre meditatively. You know, Buck as well as me thet if you'd been some feller who hadn't shown he was a wonder with a gun you'd now be full of lead If you'd happen to kill Bland an' Alloway I reckon you'd be as safe on this here border as you would in Santone Such is gun fame in this land of the draw"

CHAPTER IX

Both men were awake early silent with the premonition of trouble ahead, thoughtful of the fact that the time for the long planned action was at hand. It was remarkable that a man so loquacious as Euchre could hold his tongue so long; and this was significant of the deadly nature of the intended deed During breakfast he said a few words customary in the service of food. At the conclusion of the meal he seemed to come to an end of deliberation.

"Buck, the sooner the better now," he declared with a glint in his eye. "The more time we use up now the less surprised Bland'll be"

"I'm ready when you are," replied Duane quietly, and he rose from the table.

"Wal, saddle up, then," went on Euchre, gruffly "Tie on them two packs I made, one fer each saddle You can't tell—mebbe either hoss will be carryin' double. It's good they're both big, strong hosses. Guess thet wasn't a wise move of your Uncle Euchre's—bringin' in your hosses an' havin' them ready?"

"Euchre, I hope you're not going to get in bad here. I'm afraid you are. Let me do the rest now," said Duane.

The old outlaw eyed him sarcastically.

"Thet'd be turrible now, wouldn't it? If you want to know, why, I'm in bad already. I didn't tell you thet Alloway called me last night. He's gettin' wise pretty quick."

"Euchre, you're going with me?" queried Duane, suddenly divining the truth.

"Wal, I reckon. Either to hell or safe over the mountain! I wisht I was a gun fighter. I hate to leave here without takin' a peg at Jackrabbit Benson. Now, Buck, you do some hard figgerin' while I go nosin' around. It's pretty early, which's all the better."

Euchre put on his sombrero, and as he went out Duane saw that he wore a gun and cartridge belt. It was the first time Duane had ever seen the outlaw armed.

Duane packed his few belongings into his saddlebags, and then carried the saddles out to the corral. An abundance of alfalfa in the corral showed that the horses had fared well. They had gotten almost fat during his stay in the valley. He watered them, put on the saddles loosely cinched, and then the bridles. His next move was to fill the two canvas water bottles. That done, he returned to the cabin to wait.

At the moment he felt no excitement or agitation of any kind. There was no more thinking and planning to do, the hour had arrived, and he was the hour had arrived perfectly ready. He understood perfectly the desperate chances he must take. His thoughts became confined to Euchre and the surprisingly loyalty and goodness in the hardened old outlaw. Time passed slowly. Duane kept glancing at his watch. He hoped to start the thing and get away before the outlaws were out of their beds. Finally he heard the shuffle of Euchre's boots on the hard path. The sound was quicker than usual.

When Euchre came around the corner of the cabin Duane was not so astounded as he was concerned to see the outlaw white and shaking. Sweat dripped from him. He had a wild look.

"Luck's ours—so—fur, Buck!" he panted.

"You don't look it," replied Duane.

"I'm turrible sick. Jest killed a man. Fust one I ever killed!"

"Who?" asked Duane, startled.

"Jackrabbit Benson. An' sick as I am, I'm gloryin' in it. I went nosin' round up the road. Saw Alloway goin' into Deger's. He's thick with the Degers. Reckon he's askin' questions. Anyway, I was sure glad to see him away from Bland's. An' he didn't see me. When I dropped into Benson's there wasn't nobody there but Jackrabbit an' some greasers he was startin' to work. Benson never had no use fer me. An' he up an' said he wouldn't give a two-bit piece fer my life. I asked him why

"'You're double crossin' the boss an' Chess,' he said

"Jack, what'd you give fer your own life?" I asked him

"He straightened up surprised an' mean lookin' An' I let him have it, plumb center' He wilted, an' the greasers run I reckon I'll never sleep again But I had to do it."

Duane asked if the shot had attracted any attention outside

"I didn't see anybody but the greasers, an' I sure looked sharp. Comin' back I cut across through the cottonwoods past Bland's cabin. I meant to keep out of sight, but somehow I had an idee I might find out if Bland was awake yet Sure enough, I run plumb into Beppo, the boy who tends Bland's hosses Beppo likes me An' when I inquired if his boss he said Bland had been up all night fightin' with the senora An, Buck, here's how I figger. Bland couldn't let up last night He was sore, an he went after Kate again, tryin' to wear her down. Jest as likely he might have went after Jennie, with wuss intentions. Anyway, he an' Kate must have had it hot an' heavy. We're pretty lucky"

"It seems so. Well, I'm going," said Duane, tersely.

"Lucky' I should smile! Bland's been up all night after a most draggin' ride home. He'll be fagged out this mornin', sleepy, sore, an' he won't be expectin' hell before breakfast. Now you walk over to his house. Meet him how you like. Thet's your game. But I'm suggestin', if he comes out an' you want to parley, you can jest say you'd thought over his proposition an' was ready to join his band, or you ain't. You'll have to kill him, an' it'd save time to go fer your gun on sight. Might be wise, too fer it's likely he'll do thet same."

"How about the horses?"

"I'll fetch them an' come along about two minutes behind you 'Pears to me you ought to have the job done an' Jennie outside by the time I git there Once on them hosses, we can ride out of camp before Alloway or anybody else gits into action Jennie ain't much heavier'n a rabbit. Thet big black will carry you both"

"All right. But once more let me persuade you to stay not to mix any more in this," said Duane, earnestly.

"Nope I'm goin' You heard what Benson told me. Alloway wou.dn't give me the benefit of any doubts Buck, a last word look out fer thet Bland woman'

Duane merely nodded, and then, saying that the horses were ready, he strode away through the grove Accounting for the short cut across grove and field, it was about five minutes' walk to Bland's house To Duane it seemed long in time and distance, and he had difficulty in restraining his pace. As he walked there came a gradual and subtle change in his feelings Again he was going out to meet a man in conflict. He could have avoided this meeting. But despite the fact of his coming encounter he had not as yet felt that hot, inexplicable rush of blood The motive of this deadly action was not personal, and somehow that made a difference

No outlaws were in sight. He saw several Mexican herders with cattle. Blue columns of smoke curled up over some of the cabins. The fragrant smell of it reminded Duane of his home and cutting wood for the stove He noted a cloud of creamy mist rising above the river, dissolving in the sunlight

Then he entered Bland's lane

While yet some distance from the cabin, he heard loud, angry voices of man and woman Bland and Kate still quarreling' He took a quick survey of the surroundings. There was now not even a Mexican in sight Then he hurried a little Halfway down the lane he turned his head to peer through the cottonwoods This time he saw Euchre coming with the horses There was no indication that the old outlaw might lose his nerve at the end Duane had feared this.

Duane now changed his walk to a leisurely saunter He reached the porch, and then distinguished what was said inside the cabin

"If you do, Bland, by heaven I'll fix you and her'" That was panted out in Kate Bland's full voice

"Let me loose' I'm going in there, I tell you'" replied Bland, hoarsely.

"What for'"

"I want to make a little love to her. Ha' ha' It 'll be fun to have the laugh on her new lover."

"You lie'" cried Kate Bland.

"I'm not saying what I'll do to her afterwards'" His voice grew hoarser with passion. "Let me go now!"

"No' no' I won't let you go. You'll choke the—the truth out of her—you'll kill her."

"The truth!" hissed Bland.

"Yes. I lied. Jen lied. But she lied to save me. You needn't—murder her—for that."

Bland cursed horribly. Then followed a wrestling sound of bodies in violent straining contact—the scrape of feet—the jangle of spurs—a crash of sliding table or chair, and then the cry of a woman in pain.

Duane stepped into the open door, inside the room. Kate Bland lay half across a table where she had been flung, and she was trying to get to her feet. Bland's back was turned. He had opened the door into Jennie's room and had one foot across the threshold. Duane caught the girl's low, shuddering cry. Then he called out loud and clear.

With cat-like swiftness Bland wheeled, then froze on the threshold. His sight, quick as his action, caught Duane's menacing, unmistakable position.

Bland's big frame filled the door. He was in a bad place to reach for his gun. But he would not have time for a step. Duane read in his eyes the desperate calculation of chances. For a fleeing instant Bland shifted his glance to his wife. Then his whole body seemed to vibrate with the swing of his arm.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Why do the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or testimonial. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the writer who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

Caustic Rebuke.

There is loud chuckling in British naval circles over the latest story "Somewhere in the North sea" a certain flotilla was ordered to proceed to sea for gunnery practice During the practice a heavy fog came on, and the ship whose turn it was to fire did not sight the target until with 300 yards range. She immediately opened fire and blew the target clean out of the water. The senior officer of the flotilla, who is noted for his caustic tongue, thereupon made the following signal to the vessel in question: "S. O. to captain of ——: Why did you not proceed closer and bite it?"

Achy Joints Give Warning

A creaky joint often predicts rain. It may also mean that the kidneys are not filtering the poisonous uric acid from the blood. VICE PRESIDENT'S FOND OF CHILDREN

IN MILADY'S BOUDOIR.

Deodorizers For Dainty Women.

Salt baths for the entire body are excellent deodorizers. Empty a bag of salt in a tub and lave the body thoroughly, or make a strong solution in a wash basin and sponge the body surface.

Moist hands are an unpleasant affliction, and if the summer months produce this condition adopt the practice of using a little spirits of camphor in the water. If the condition persists, rub into the hands a lotion made of four ounces of cologne and half an ounce of tincture of belladonna, afterward powdering with rice powder.

Excessive perspiration of the feet is apt to produce corns between the toes in warm weather, after bathing and drying the body, powder thoroughly between the toes with cornstarch or good talcum powder. Perspiration also makes the feet so tender that they blister easily.

To ward off this catastrophe bathe with a lotion made with two ounces of bay rum and four grains of tannic acid. A very effective lotion for the feet which tends to [illegible] most scrupulous attention to all odorless of the body, may be [illegible] rubbing with the following [illegible] Powdered [illegible] ounce [illegible]

Sometimes [illegible] after the bath will [illegible] odor of perspiration and [illegible] rent its recurrence.

Don't forget that shoes as well as hose, absorb the perspiration from the feet and therefore should be treated well after resting and dust them inside with a disinfecting powder.

Does your child drink enough water? It should be known that water is the second great necessity for human existence, the first being air. It is estimated that man can live without air from two to 10 minutes, without water for three to five days, without food, 10 to 20 days. Just how much water each should consume is hard to determine, but a healthy individual requires from three to six pints of water daily.

Teach the children to drink water instead of visiting the soda fountain. Any pure water is healthy. The idea that the only place to obtain benefit from drinking water is to visit some famous 'spa' is preposterous.

The boy realizes that the other children are prepared to take advantage of him and the instinctive habit of self-protection common to all animals, makes him resent the attempt. In his efforts to maintain his own rights he is very likely to become insistent and dictatorial and he will not hesitate to take advantage of the fact that he is younger than the others, and so under the protection of his elders who he feels certain will be on his side, in the discussion.

A child is never too young to be taught that he must not be selfish and must ask no more than his rights. This habit of lording it over all his companions may increase as he grows older unless a wise mother can reason him out of it.

Keep Your Backbone Straight.

As far as looks are concerned you cannot improve on the good old fashioned straight backbone. It gaves your clothes a smartness that all the fad walks combined could never give. It gives you youth! What author has not written of the tall straight charms of his heroine? While the rounded shoulders and the protuding abdomen belong to creatures no longer young! Keep your backbone straight and the rest of your anatomy will take care of itself.

Let it curve either in or out, and like every other wrong it will bring its own punishment. You'll champ your lungs and damage your digestive organs. You won't be able to breathe correctly. Your stomach, liver, bowels and heart action will be disturbed.

On the side of looks there will be a caved in chest, which is most unattractive, and rounded shoulders with ugly and protruding wings. Your face will reflect the disordered condition of your internal organs. For no one is beautiful who is not healthy. You will be quite without grace of movement and repose in posture.

Now, the exercise that I am going to recommend to you who have acquired the 1915 spinal curve is the exercise of will power. It is guaranteed to cure according to the amount of exercise of will power you put into it. When you walk or when you stand or when you sit, think of the back of your neck and your spine as being one continued straight line supporting your head. And hold that position. Try it before your mirror once and see what it does for you in the way of physical improvement. Your chest will be up and out the way it should be; your chin will be held up so that no double chin will get a chance to hang therefrom. The contour of your throat will be wonderfully improved. Your abdomen will fall into correct position and your back will be symmetrical and straight so that when you place your hands across your shoulder blades there will be no protruding wings. A quieting repose which will not fail to have a soothing effect upon the nerves—will possess you, since the pressure on nerve centers will be relieved.

Improving Thin Arms.

The arm that is too thin and the one possessing a too generous roundity will both be improved by the judicious use of exercise and massage. More strenuous forms for reduction are required, while the woman trying to coax on contour will proceed with deliberate calm so that she will not needlessly burn out tissue.

An excellent wringing arm movement that removes superfluous flesh and develops unused muscles in a slender arm is practiced with the four fingers of the right hand clasping the [illegible] left arm with the thumb [illegible] for support. Now move the flesh on the arm toward the left, at the same time turning the arm in the opposite direction so that a firm resistance follows. Start near the shoulder and continue downwards to the wrist so that the entire arm is treated. Repeat three times on each arm. While the grasp should be firm, in no case should it be so rough as to cause the arms to become red. The work is greatly facilitated by using a massage cream or olive oil for contour building.

Tennis, golf, rowing, swimming, all tend to develop the muscles of the arms, but it should be wisely remembered that unless both arms are given equal share of exercise the right arm will be correspondingly larger and better developed. Opening and closing fingers, forming a fist and any circular wrist movement, especially where resistance is used, has a surprising way of making for contour, for either fat or thin arms.

Another means of rounding the arms and filling in the mean hollows is the local application of rich creams and warm oil baths. Warm olive or almond oil employed independently, are excellent, also the rubbing of cream or saturating medicated gauze with oil and binding up the arms. Before massaging the arms they should be bathed in warm water with soap or prepared almond meal, the virtues of which have often been extolled in this department. A brush is better than a cloth but should be used with care.

Inflamed "Beauty Spots."

"Beauty spots" are the names given to disfiguring little blemishes which seem to play havoc with complexions. You may lessen the inflamed appearance of a "beauty spot" by the application of a lotion, but you can only remove it and the cause, as well as the probability of a further appearance of the eruptions, by getting the blood into a healthy state.

Eat fruit at every meal and plenty of it. Drink copious draughts of cold water, fresh filtered. Take a constitutional and a brisk rub down before breakfast every morning. The very best cure for a case of nerves is to keep busy. If you cannot find any work of your own help some friend who has more to do than she can possibly accomplish. Be really interested in everything you do and do it with all your might. You never heard of a washerwoman being nervous.

Nervous women are sure to have wrinkles, and you will never get rid of them until you get better control of your nerves. Massage will of course improve wrinkles, but you must help the massage by practicing facial repose. The sulphur treatment is very fine for removing dandruff. Following is the formula: To an ounce of sulphur add a quart of soft water and during intervals of several days agitate the mixture repeatedly. After the sulphur has settled to the bottom of the receptacle, use the clear liquid. Saturate the head with it every morning, and in a few weeks every trace of the dandruff will have disappeared. The hair will become soft and glossy, and there will be no more return of the old trouble. This remedy, however, will darken light hair.

Colored clothes should never be soaked. They should never be sprinkled, rolled for ironing and put in the basket with white clothes, for in spite of "setting" the color may be a bit contagious.

MANY AGENCIES AT WORK

Most Active Fight Against Tuberculosis Is Being Carried on at Numerous Points.

Statistics made public by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis show that nearly 3,000 agencies are now listed in the fight against tuberculosis in the United States, an increase of 1,600 per cent since 1904, when the national warfare on this disease was started. These figures are taken from a new tuberculosis directory issued by the association.

The list includes 557 sanatoria and hospitals, 158 tuberculosis boarding houses, 90 hospitals for the insane and 85 penal institutions making special provision for tuberculosis, 455 dispensaries, 310 open-air schools, and 1,324 antituberculosis associations and committees. To these are added 158 Canadian institutions and associations, making a total of 3,087. The directory also gives a summary of municipal and state legislation on tuberculosis.

When the national association was formed in 1904 and the first list of agencies was printed, only 188 organizations and institutions were found. The second edition of the directory in 1908 reported 640 different agencies; and 1,440 were listed in the third edition published in 1911. On the basis of the latter figures, the number of agencies in the antituberculosis movement has increased 115 per cent in the last five years.

Who Is the Boss?

The superintendent of a big department store in Boston conducts a school of salesmanship in his establishment, and one of the first questions he puts to his class of beginners is: "Who is the boss?"

After salesmen pupils have guessed every official about the establishment, the superintendent explains. "No, no, no; he is not the boss. The real boss in this store is the customer. It's the customer that you and I are here to please. It's the customer who pays your wages and mine. Now, if you are sitting behind your counter, doing nothing, and you see me coming, don't jump up; but if you see the customer—the boss—coming, jump! That always makes a deep impression."

The lesson is a good one to memorize.—Retailers' Journal.

Up to the Audience.

Mr. Seymour Hicks relates with great relish the following yarn:

When he was going to Richard III, the hump-backed king, a well-known dramatist remarked to him:

"Seymour, I hear you are going to play Richard?"

"Yes, I am," replied Mr. Hicks.

"Ah, well," the other remarked, thoughtfully, "you'll be saved some trouble in the make-up. You won't have to wear a hump."

"Why not?" Mr. Hicks asked, rather surprised.

"Oh, your audience will have that," was the prompt reply.

Their Part in the War.

Several young clubmen met recently and the question of the war became the chief topic of conversation. They felt awfully sorry for the poor soldiers in the trenches. "We ought to do something for them," said one. "So we should," advised another. A third member, in speaking of this a few days later, remarked, "So we drank their health all evening."—London Mail.

When a man goes into a restaurant and is given a tough fowl, he is very apt to lose his respect for old age.

People who are fond of music do not necessarily care for grand opera.

Conservative.

There was once a lady from Dexter, Ia., who spent five solid hours rooted to one spot on the rim of the Grand canyon, during which time the strong light of the desert afternoon melted into pools of turquoise and purple haze; the mile-long shadows flung themselves into the depths or went striding across the plateaus. . . . I'll be picking the pockets of my own soul here in a minute. But, anyway, I am trying to tell you that this lady from Iowa witnessed a sunset in the Grand canyon; and when night came she found her tongue.

"'It is highly gratifying,' she sighed. 'Yes—highly gratifying!'"

If you will not take my word for it take the word of the Iowa lady. She was cautious, even conservative; she did not overstate the case.—C. E. Van Loan, in the Saturday Evening Post.

Experimenting on Wheat.

The slender angular head of the wheat stalk with its needlelike barbs—the characteristic of the American-grown crop—is doomed, if Professor William F. Freedman, graduate of Cornell university, is successful in experiments in wheat production. Professor Freedman has at his disposal wheat specimens gathered from all quarters of the globe. Among these is the "bearless" and "forked-head" product of Russia. His experiments aim primarily to reproduce an acclimated American wheat that possesses the "beardless" and "forked-head" or tripodlike properties of the Russian stalk.

Electricity Kills Insects.

A process has just been developed in the department of agriculture by means of which insects and pests may be killed by electricity. The process consists in the application of salt water to the ground that is to be treated, and then causing a current of electricity to pass through the soil. The current generates a gas which will instantly kill all germs, larvae and insect pests in the soil, without in any way injuring the vegetation. A large area of ground can be treated by digging shallow trenches in which a powerful current can be developed.

NOT A FRIEND TO BE SOUGHT

Man Who Continually "Blows His Own Horn" Is as a General Principle to Be Avoided.

Beware of the person who is continually telling you of the good he's doing.

Something about that man is not right.

He has some reason for desiring to make you think him better than he is.

He either wants to work you into something, or he wants to reach someone else through you.

The man who does deeds of kindness, prompted by a heart which is right, seldom tells of them. He might mention one to an intimate friend, perhaps, but then only incidentally.

The man who gives, not because he really wants to do so, but because of some selfish desire, will never get credit any higher than his own roof. His desire for effect and his insincerity make him a man to be avoided—never trusted.

Look out for the man who wants you to turn his grindstone.

The Wheat Yield Tells the Story

of Western Canada's Rapid Progress

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The heavy crops in Western Canada have caused new records to be made in the handling of grains by railroads. For, while the movement of these heavy shipments has been wonderfully rapid, the resources of the different roads, despite enlarged equipments and increased facilities, have been strained as never before, and previous records have thus been broken in all directions.

The largest Canadian wheat shipments through New York ever known are reported for the period up to October 15th, upwards of four and a quarter million bushels being exported in less than six weeks, and this was but the overflow of shipments to Montreal, through which point shipments were much larger than to New York.

Yields as high as 60 bushels of wheat per acre are reported from all parts of the country; while yields of 45 bushels per acre are common.

Thousands of American farmers have taken part in this wonderful production. Land prices are still low and free homestead lands are easily secured in good localities, convenient to churches, schools, markets, railways, etc.

There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

A STRING OF OVERLANDS 860 MILES IN LENGTH

A statistician has gathered together some interesting data which show the magnitude of the automobile business. He took as a basis the Willys-Overland capacity of 1,000 cars per day and then figured out the average length of the various models approximately 14½ feet.

The factory's output on a single day would extend in a straight line for a distance of about 2½ miles, if the cars were placed end to end and touching each other.

In a year's time this stream of cars would be 860 miles long—an unbroken line of automobiles from Toledo to New York and then back again as far as Albany.

Even more startling were the figures compiled showing the value of the Overland's factory output. The enormous manufacturing facilities of plant enables it to ship out finished cars valued at approximately $900,000 every twenty-four hours. In a year's time at the rate of 1,000 cars per day, these shipments would represent over $200,000,000.

The sensational growth of the Willys-Overland Company during the last eight years has changed the factory from a few buildings, scattered over a seven-acre lot, to that of the largest individual automobile plant in the world. In less than a decade the Toledo institution has doubled and trebled in size, until today it boasts of 103 acres of floor space available for manufacturing purposes and gives employment to more than 17,000 men.

During this period of expansion, the out put of the factory has jumped from 12 cars a day to nearly 1,000 cars a day, or an increase of over 8,000 per cent in eight years This is a record never before equalled by any other producer of medium or high-priced motor cars.

Daily shipments that at one time required but three or four freight cars now leaves the Toledo plant in solid trainloads. At almost any time of the day these long freight trains can be seen, pulling out of the Overland yards, loaded with automobiles for all parts of the world

ORIGINAL NOTICE

In the District Court of Iowa in and for Hancock County, October Term, 1916.

Hamery & Nelson, plaintiffs, vs. E. P. Hanson, county auditor of Hancock County, Iowa, Frank P. Oleson, A. W. Dana, Fred Stork, L. M. Naser, and Mark Backman, members of the board of supervisors of said county; Nellie Walsh et al., defendants.

To said defendant Nellie Walsh:

You are hereby notified that there is now on file in the office of the clerk of the district court of Hancock County, Iowa, the verified petition of plaintiffs, claiming that plaintiffs made a contract with the auditor and board of supervisors of Hancock County for the construction of drainage District No. 44 which contract is in force; that plaintiffs sub-let a portion thereof to Nels Myking, who performed a part thereof and received 80 per cent of his compensation and thereafter abandoned his said work unfinished. That divers persons, including defendant Nellie Walsh, filed claims with the auditor against the funds to be used for the payment for said ditch. That the said Nellie Walsh filed such claim for cooking for the said Myking, in the sum of $177.91. That said claim was filed too late; is not properly itemized; is not for any items furnished plaintiffs; and is not a valid claim against plaintiff and should not be paid by the said Auditor out of said funds.

Said petition prays that the court decree that said claim is invalid to hold any fund due or to be due plaintiffs from said district and does not justify with holding any part thereof from plaintiffs, that said Board and Auditor are not justified in paying same, and that same is junior to plaintiff's claim against said funds, and for equitable relief.

For particulars see petition on file.

And unless you appear and defend before noon of the second day of the October term of the District Court of Hancock County Iowa, which commences and will be held at the court house in Garner, Iowa, on the 9th day of October, 1916, default will be taken against you and judgment rendered herein as by law provided.

THOMPSON & LOTH,
Attorneys for Plaintiff.
Dated this 1st day of June, 1916.

GOOD BLOOD WILL PAY WELL

Pure Bred Sire Increases Production Over 100 Per Cent Over That of Dam

There's a grade Guernsey cow on the dairy farm at Iowa State college that as a two year old, fresh for the first time, produced 2,617.5 pounds of milk and 319 05 pounds of cream, while her dam in three years averaged but 2,627.5 pounds of milk and 131.73 pounds of cream, and at her best produced but 3,028 6 pounds of milk and 149 95 pounds of cream The daughter thus gave 101 per cent more milk and 107 per cent more cream than the dam at her best, and 131 per cent more milk and 136 per cent more cream than the average of the dam.

The dam was one of the scrub cows brought from Arkansas in 1907 by the department of dairy husbandry to be used in a feeding and breeding experiment to determinate whether feed, care and pure blood could increase the production of the herd. The daughter was sired by the pure bred Guernsey bull at the head of the college Guernsey herd. The dam was but a calf when brought to Ames, so she had all her life the same care as her daughter

It was the pure bred sire that made the increase. The story of these two cows and the rest of the herd brought from Arkansas had just been told for the first time in bulletin No. 165, recently issued by the Iowa experiment station

LILLIAN BLANK DEAD

Lillian Blank youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs. T. R. Blank, died early Saturday morning, July 15, 1916, after a seven months illness Deceased was born at Hayfield, November 1, 1902, and had always resided with her parents here She has attended the Sunday School all her life and was one of its best scholars for faithful attendance, being also a member of the Methodist church at Hayfield. About seven months ago one of her limbs became affected which gradually grew worse, and although all that medical aid and loving hands could do for her, including trips to the Iowa City and Rochester hospitals, nothing could be done to stay the disease and early Saturday morning the death angel came as a relief after great suffering. Even though suffering greatly at the time, Lillian was continually doing some fancy work for her sisters or mother and to help some one was her earnest wish. She realized her condition and was prepared to go. There are left to mourn her loss her father, mother, six sisters and two brothers all residing near here, besides other relatives. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the house and also from the church. The services were conducted by Rev A. C Panzlau, assisted by his brother, J. J. Panzlau of Charles City, and interment was made in the Madison Township cemetery near Forest City.—Britt Tribune,

REPORTING TROUBLE

One of our subscribers in a nearby town had got had his telephone very long and every one of the family took a deep and abiding interest in it says the Lake City Graphic. On the outside they had noticed the wording, "report trouble to the chief operator, No. 900." It had been a hard morning and everything had gone wrong. Finally the lady of the house in desperation turned to the trusty telephone and called 600. "This is the chief operator," answered the chief sweetly. "Is this where your report trouble?" asked the lady. "Yes ma'am." "Well I only wanted to report that our cat got drowned in the cistern this morning: the baby is cutting a new tooth; the cook left without warning: we are out of sugar and starch; the stove pipe fell down; the milkman left only a pint instead of a quart today; the bread won't raise; my oldest child is coming down with the measles; we have only enough coal to last through the day; the paint gave out when I got only half over the dining room floor; the mainspring of the clock is broken; my three sister-in-laws are coming to visit tomorrow; the man hasn't called for the garbage for two weeks; our dog has the mange; the looking glass fell off the wall and broke to pieces; and I think my husband is taking considerable notice of a widow lady who lives next door. That's all today, but if anything happens later, I will call you up and tell you about it."

A LETTER FROM HARDING

The Manson Journal prints the following from Mr. Harding:

Mr. M. W. Fitz of this city has received from Lieutenant Governor Harding the following reply to a letter on the general subject of the persistent attacks being made upon Mr. Harding by certain daily papers on the alleged ground that his election as governor would bring back the saloon to Iowa, resolutions of the same tenor passed by certain Methodist efforts to discredit his candidacy.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 29, 1916.

Mr. M. W. Fitz.
Manson, Iowa.

Dear Mr. Fitz:

Your letter of the 10th instant to me and carbon copy of same date to Mr. Mark H. Evans, at hand. I want to thank you for the interest you take in this matter, and assure you it is appreciated.

So far as the wet and dry situation in Iowa is concerned, and the attack made upon me, I am not afraid. I have been absolutely clean in my personal habits on the question, and in an official way have done the things which would in my judgement, and in the judgement I am satisfied of 99 per cent of the temperance people of the state, result best for temperance. The resolutions that are being passed by certain Methodist conferences are all inspired from one source. The slips that are being sent out by certain men from Des Moines, whose activities can be traced to financial interest. If this old wet and dry fight is threshed over this time in a personal way against me, it will be the sixth state campaign that I have been through of this kind. The first time I was nominated over a candidate who had back of him the organization: the second time, I led my ticket, that is the head of it, by about 16,000 votes. The third time, I won easily in the primary and had about 48,000 votes more than my opponent in the general election: and in the last primary you remember very well the vote.

In my experience as a man and a lawyer, I found that when folks are lying there is not much occasion to be worried. The talk about my being wet, or my record being wet, is absolutely and wholly false, and of course will not stand the sunlight of analysis. When Lincoln first ran for president, so I am informed, there were 23 preachers in his home town and 21 were against him.

I am a member of the Methodist church, I beleive in the institution. I cannot let it dictate my politics, nor could you. I think I know how the resolutions were passed in the Oskaloosa conference. I don't care to say anything on this subject until I get all the evidence. Before the campaign is over, I trust we will be able to produce the facts so that a very large majority of the people will not believe what is charged by the radicals who are campaigning against me at this time. The little circulars that are being sent out for republicans to sign are being sent to me from over the entire state.

This is a republican year. The great issues are the tariff and prosperity, with perhaps some phase of the war situation. The saloon is gone from Iowa. The only danger of its coming back will be through the agitation of papers like the Register and Leader and men who are apparently financially interested in bringing it back. Outside of that it has few friends.

Your letter to M. Evans was along the right line, and I am satisfied, when the record is made up, they will be sorry that they have taken the course they have.

Cordially yours,
W. L. Harding.

One of the biggest legacies music has ever received is the $700,000 found recently left by Bryan Lathrop, of Chicago. The purpose of the bequest is expressed by Mr Lathrop as follows: "The city of Chicago now has universities, technical schools, museums and an unsurpassed orchestra, but it has no public school of music, such as the Conservatoire of Paris, and it is, in my opinion, very desirable that an institution should be founded in Chicago in which an education can be obtained in the higher branches of music and music composition, not inferior to that provided in the cities of Europe."

A bill will soon be brought up again in the Dutch parliament, it is reported, for putting through the project, so frequently agitated in Holland, of reclaiming the Zuyder Zee, the extent of which is estimated at 500,000 acres. The sum of $80,000,000 was to have been appropriated for this great work in 1914, but the war put an end to the scheme. Many Dutch papers are now pointing out that if the dam, projected as a preliminary to the reclamation, had been built, a recent flood catastrophe would have been averted.

The serious shortage of merchant vessels was again brought home to American manufacturers recently when some of them lost an order from the Argentine government amounting to $1,500,000 because of their inability to state definitely when delivery of their goods could be made. The American manufacturers even tried to buy the needed vessels, but failed, so the order went to English manufacturers.

Farmers of Crisfield, Del., received a severe blow for their coming farm work when 41 young men left to work in a large lime and stone quarry in Pennsylvania. The average farm wage does not appeal to the young men, and with work near the cities at $3 a day for eight hours' work, instead of the work from 4 in the morning until 8 at night on the farm, they are leaving as fast as possible.

The Louisiana state board of education has put its foot down on Mother Goose rhymes, throwing out a reader series because of these ditties in them. Ex-Governor Hall and other prominent members, who are plantation born and reared, thought they belittled the farmer. Superintendent of Education Harris and other members of the board fought valiantly for the rhymes, but were outvoted.

TOWN IN DARKNESS TO AVOID FLY PEST

Mayor Orders All Lights Turned Out In Advance of Annual Avalanche.

Fort Madison, Ia., July 22.—Warned of a planned air attack on the city, Mayor Brown ordered all electric lights turned off last night, and the city was in darkness save for the moonlight. The attackers thus forstalled were of the species empemera, colloqualized Mormon flies from the fact that they breed each year about the old Mormon city of Nauvoo, a short distance down the river.

Once each summer, following a long dry and warm spell, the flies visit the towns in the vicinity by the millions and the streets are uninhabitable at nights, swarms gathering at each lighted corner, depots and other unscreened places being favorable points of attack for the bugs. Two bonfires started on the lake front were extinguished by the mass of insects attracted into the flames. Railroads are especially troubled by them, the bugs clinging to the rails in such numbers that they act as oils on the iron and the wheels slip without advancing.

Two men were employed at the shops here today sweeping up the flies from along the tracks and burning them.

AX MYSTERY INVESTIGATION MAY BE CLOSED TODAY

Red Oak, Ia., July 22.—The special grand jury investigation of the Villisca Moore murders and the alleged connection of William Mansfield with the crime which was begun here last week is expected to close late today. More than 30 witnesses have been examined and County Attorney C. O. Gillett and Sheriff O. E. Jackson have begun a search for a mysterious individual injected into the case in a manner which has increased the mystery which has surrounded the crime from the moment the eight bodies of the ax-man's victims were found June 9, 1912. This mysterious individual Mansfield claims is his double.

A stranger giving the name of "Bill Mansfield" called upon W. R. Tilson, county treasurer, at Marysland, Mo., June 6, 1916, almost a month before the name of the present prisoner was first connected with the crime, and said he was expecting money from Villisca, but declined to say from whom. He is said to have given Tilson information about the ax murders not previously known to the authorities.

RUSSIA PLACES BIG STEEL RAIL ORDERS

Total Tonnage of 425,000 Is Bought In One Lot at Cost of $21,785,500.

New York, July 22.—Exact tonnage of rails ordered by Russian government from American mills within the past week is not definitely established, but steel trade experts say approximately 425,000 tons were purchased. This immense tonnage marks a new record for a single purchase of steel, the amount involved being in the neighborhood of $21,785,500. None of the mills which have shared in the business has announced contract price but it is admitted it was slightly under $52 a ton, delivered at New York.

As the rails are deliverable next year, they will not benefit from the low freight rates on export goods now in vogue.

For hauling this enormous tonnage the railroads will receive a total of $1,173,000 in freight rates, or $391,000 more than they would receive under the existing price.

Allowing a mill price of $48.50 per ton, the steel mills will receive a total of $20,612,500.

The order was divided approximately as follows: Cambria Steel 150,000 tons, Steel Corporation 150,000 tons, Lackawanna Steel 75,000 tons and Bethlehem Steel 50,000 tons.

POSTMASTERS CLOSE PRAISING PRESIDENT

Washington, July 21.—Resolutions commending the national administration for efficiency and economy in postal management, recommending specific reforms and praising President Wilson for maintaining the United States in peace, were presented to the National Association of Presidential Postmasters in the final session today.

One resolution suggested changes in the method of settling claims for damage or loss under the insurance feature of the parcel post system so that adjustment may be made for minor claims by the postmaster at the office concerned. Legislation providing for retirement of superannuated employes was favored.

SEEKING INFORMATION ABOUT NATIONAL GUARD

Washington, D. C., July 21.—Representative Madden, republican, introduced a resolution today calling on President Wilson to inform the House why the National Guard is being kept on the border, and if there is an emergency situation in Mexico.

It asks specifically whether the guardsmen under orders issued so far can be sent into Mexico, and for full information of their distribution and situation.

IOWANS RETURN FROM MEXICO, SEEKING AID FOR CONDEMNED MAN

Manager of Electric Plant Shuts Down on Villa's Threat of Blow Up.

Fort Madison, Ia., July 22.—Newspaper accounts do not exaggerate conditions in Mexico, state Mr and Mrs. Fred W. Smith, who are visiting here from Mexico City, having accompanied to this country Mrs F. R. Dunn, wife of Mr Smith's employer.

Mrs. Dunn is at New York and Washington to plead for this government's intercession for the release of her husband, who is in a Mexican prison under sentence of death.

Dunn managed the Mexican Light & Power company, which furnishes power to Mexico City and mining towns in the vicinity. While in charge of the plant, he was approached by a band of Villistas, who ordered him to shut off power under threat of blowing up the plant.

It being a matter of life and death, Dunn complied with the order. Shortly afterwards, just when preparing to leave the country, Dunn was arrested by Carranzistas for his act and imprisoned under death sentence.

A wave of starvation is over Mexico, states Mr Smith and the people are in dire want for the necessities of life, while contending factions devastate and dictate.

GRAND JURORS AT WORK ON AX MURDER CASE.

Red Oak, Ia., July 22.—Testimony given today before the special sitting of the Montgomery county grand jury investigating the Villisca ax murders took a wide range, judging from the character and location of the witnesses who were called. The grand jury, after a two-day recess, took up the work with vigor. As usual, County Attorney O. T. Gillette refused to comment upon the nature of the testimony given by the four witnesses who were called today. One was from Villisca, another from Shenandoah, one from Kansas City and one from Maryville, Mo. Attorney J. S. Detwilder, of Kansas City, counsel for William Mansfield, the suspect under investigation, was before the jury, and it is presumed that he exhibited the evidence which he claims proves an alibi for Mansfield. This evidence consists of photographs of the pay roll of an Illinois concern and of the alleged Mansfield pay check, and not the original pay roll and check as has been understood.

County Attorney O. T. Gillette said the state had about six more witnesses to call and stated that it might be found necessary for the jury to take another recess to await the arrival of an important witness.

FORT DODGE PREPARING FOR CHURCH CEREMONY

Fort Dodge, Ia., July 22.—Appropriate services will mark the laying of the corner stone of the new First Congregational church, Thursday evening, June 20. The edifice which will be built at a cost of $60,000 is a combination church and parsonage. It is the first of its kind in the city and is unusual for another reason as it is placed in a strictly residential section of the city. All the other churches are near the down town district. The congregation was founded 60 years ago.

Rev. R. A. Minty, present pastor of the church has prepared a fine program. Rev. Naboth Osbourne, of Burlington, will give the principal address. His subject will be "Our Pilgrim's Heritage." Ministers of the city and prominent laymen will take part in the services.

HELEN SNOUFFER PAROLED; MOTHER WILL WELCOME HER

Cedar Rapids, Ia., July 22.—Helen Snouffer, alias Helen Becker, daughter of J. J. Snouffer, of this city, who was arrested two weeks ago in Chicago charged with stealing valuables from the home of Mrs. Harry Meyerovitz, 19 Galt avenue, appeared in police court in Chicago yesterday in answer to a charge of petty larceny.

The sentence imposed was one year, but the girl was paroled, instead of being committed to a prison. Her parole officer will be Mrs. Gleason a Chicago probation official.

Miss Snouffer, in interviews with reporters representing Chicago newspapers, gave the impression that her family had cast her off and that she would of necessity be forced to seek employment in any place that she might find it.

Communication with the parents in this city failed to corroborate the story the daughter told. The mother, Mrs. Mary Snouffer, declared that she would stand by her girl to the last and that she would always have a home under her roof whenever she chose to come to it.

HEAVY RAIN, HIGH WIND HURT CROPS AND RAILROAD

IOWA CITY—Orville Brackett, a farmer, aged 23, is dead of injuries sustained on a farm near Nichols. He fell from a load of hay, striking the wagon tongue. ONLY SWIMMERS MAY ENTER AMES SCHOOL; CITY YOUTHS BEST

Are More Likely to Surpass Farmer Boys—Necessary to Graduate.

Ames, Ia., July 21.—"Every young man who expects to enter Iowa State college as a freshman next fall should know how to swim before he comes," is the warning sent out by the physical training department of the college at Ames.

"Every freshman must know how to swim or learn now. If he does not learn, he is failed in his course in gymnasium work for the first year and will continue to be failed until he can swim at least two lengths of the gymnasium pool. The gymnasium course is required to graduate, so no man can get a degree from Iowa State college who cannot swim," says G. E. Linden instructor in swimming.

That country boys who come to college are often the ones who cannot swim is the experience of the department. Last year 250 out of 1,200 freshmen could not swim at all. City boys with high school and Y. M. C. A. gymnasiums and public swimming pools are more likely to swim than boys from the country.

Keane, of Dubuque, who is to preach the sermon at the solemn pontifical mass with which the convention is to open August 1. Bishop Dowling, Des Moines, Bishop Tihen, Lincoln, Neb., Bishop Kelly, Detroit; Bishop O'Reilly, Fargo, N. GETS TARPON MEDAL.

Orange City, Ia., July 21.—W. W. Rieckhoff, of Orange City, Ia., holds one of the two "tarpon medals" that have been awarded during 1916 by the tarpon club of Fort Meyers, Fla. The club each year gives a gold and silver medal to every person who captures a tarpon weighing more than 100 pounds. While in Florida recently Mr. Rieckhoff succeeded in landing one of the fish weighing 127 pounds. The time required to bring the fish into the boat from the time he was hooked until captured was one hour and 45 minutes.

NEWHALL, AFTER BIG FIRE WILL REBUILD CAREFULLY

Newhall, Ia., July 21.—Difference of opinion as to the construction of the buildings which are to rehabilitate the fire razed business district of Newhall caused a division in the ranks of the town meeting held yesterday, and the session was adjourned without any definite action having been taken. Immediately after adjournment, the city council went into session under the advice of an attorney, and an effort will be made legally to whip into line those insurgents who desire to erect frame buildings on their old sites.

In accordance with his statements of Saturday Mayor B. L. Groff, supported by the members of the city council and many of the business men of the town, will make an effort to have plans for the new business blocks specify fireproof construction. In his stand the mayor is upheld by several victims of Saturday's $100,000 fire, who have taken a lesson from the Newhall Savings bank, and stand ready to begin the construction of fireproof blocks at once. But on the other hand, many merchants chafe at the thought of the delay which such construction would necessarily cause and desire to erect frame buildings as quickly as possible that they may recoup their losses in a short time. But it is probable that an ordinance establishing fire limits will be the result of today's council session, and it is not believed that many will demur to fireproof construction when the situation is seen in its true light.

ONAWA BALL PLAYERS FREED; SUNDAY CHARGE DROPPED

Onawa, Ia., July 21.—The members of the Onawa and Moorhead baseball teams, who were arrested Sunday for playing ball on Sunday, were released when they appeared for their hearing. Their attorneys demurred to the information, claiming that the playing of baseball on Sunday was not a crime against the laws of Iowa, and the justice before whom the hearing was held sustained the demurrer and dismissed the defendants.

The case aroused considerable interest in the city. It is claimed that the arrests were purely due to spite work.

Several members of the local team asserted that they will sue the informant, and the justice who signed the warrant, for malicious prosecution, but no suits have been filed.

ALTON'S CITY COUNCIL TO ARRANGE FOR SEWERS

Alton, Ia., July 21.—The Commercial club at its last regular meeting took up the matter of having a sewer system installed and with this end in view listened to an interesting talk on sewer possibilities here by Engineer Gaynor, of Sioux City. The matter was referred to the city council who have taken steps toward having sewer plats made and the outlook toward having the town equipped with a sewer system is exceedingly bright.

AUDUBON—While visiting at one of his neighbors, Michael Smith, a wealthy farmer east of Brayton, was stung by a honey bee and died within 30 minutes. HOPE TO HAVE ALIBI FOR AX-MAN SUSPECT; GRAND JURY AT WORK

Attorney For Mansfield Will Argue Client Was 400 Miles Away at Time.

Red Oak, Ia., July 20.—Attorney J. S. Detwiller, of Kansas City, counsel for William Mansfield, hopes to be permitted to go before the special session of the Montgomery county grand jury in session here investigating the Villisca, Ia., murders of July 9, 1912, tomorrow when that body reconvenes, with evidence that he says will free Mansfield.

This consists in part of the payroll of the company where Mansfield claims to have been working at the time of the murders, his pay check for the week and other evidence to show that Mansfield was at Montgomery, Ill., 400 miles from Villisca.

PARENTS LOSE TWO BABIES AND HOME IN BIG FIRE

Fort Dodge, Ia., July 20.—Their two baby boys burned to death, their home destroyed by fire, so that their only possessions are the clothes on their backs, are the results of a fire at the home of Mr and Mrs. Archie Scott northwest of Britt. Mrs. Scott is the daughter of J. J. Haviland, living north of Fort Dodge.

Explosion of a kerosene stove is supposed to be the cause of the fire.

The older of the two baby boys was 23 months old and the younger was past 8 months old.

FIRST HEAT VICTIM IS DEAD IN COUNCIL BLUFFS

Council Bluffs, Ia., July 20.—Henry H. Cottrell died at Mercy hospital here during the night, the first victim of heat prostration this summer. In the car were Mr and Mrs. Bronson, of Algona, and Mrs. Bronson's son-in-law and daughter, Mr and Mrs. Arnold Anderson, and two children, of Spencer. Mrs. Bronson was the most seriously injured, being pinned under the car. She suffered a fracture of the skull at the base of the brain, being unconscious for several hours. One ear was completely cut off. She bled profusely from ears, nose and mouth. Mr. Bronson suffered painful injuries of a minor nature. The Anderson family escaped unhurt.

He was crossing the river on horseback to get the cows. The horse returned to the house without the rider, and the neighbors were notified. It was 4 o'clock in the afternoon before the body was recovered.

ROCK RAPIDS—The city council has awarded the contract for a central station steam heating plant to the Lavelle & Hogan Co., of Sioux City, for the installation and J. E. G. Robb, of Minneapolis, for the piping. The plans and specifications call for approximately 3,000 of mains and laterals and will cost $27,484.

DUBUQUE—The body of Harry Werb, 13 years old, who was drowned in the Mississippi river Saturday afternoon, was recovered yesterday several miles below the scene of the drowning. The body of John Frantzen, 66, a farmer, missing since Friday, was found in a Mississippi river slough 10 miles south of Dubuque late Sunday night.

LANDLORD CAN'T EVICT FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 18.—Families of soldiers in service of this state or the federal government cannot be evicted by civil process for nonpayment of rent while the soldiers are in such service. Since the military units in Pittsburgh went to the front hundreds of families have been notified to pay their rent or move out.

Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong and City Solicitor Charles A. O'Brien will enforce the state law passed by the 1915 legislature providing against just such a contingency. Payments of rents cannot be forced until 30 days after the soldier has been mustered out of service. The law of April 9, 1915, is a barrier against landlord warrants.

RESUMPTION OF U-BOAT WARFARE MAY BE NEAR

Berlin, (via London), July 18.—The active campaign for resumption of submarine warfare in its previous form has assumed new importance from an article today by Eugene Zimmerman, general director of the Lokal Anzeiger, whose views as past events have shown, usually reflect the opinions held in government circles. Referring to the reasons which Great Britain gave for abandoning the declaration of London, Herr Zimmerman contemplated the possibility that Great Britain will compel smaller neutral states to adopt an unfriendly, perhaps a hostile, attitude towards the central powers, or even to close their frontiers completely against them. He then cites in heavy type his own comment on Germany's acceptance of the American demands in regard to submarine warfare, indicating that circumstances might arise later which would make it impossible to adhere to the restrictions on the activity of these craft.

WILL NOT CRITICIZE DRAFTING OF HUGHES

"Keep Supreme Court Out of Politics," Wilson Tells Campaign Workers.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—"Keep the supreme court out of politics." This is the substance of an order given by President Wilson with respect to the democratic campaign book. He has declined to allow an attack on Hughes in the campaign book for having been taken from the bench for nomination for president. Moreover, while there will be allusion to the appointment of Brandeis and Clark, it will not be in the way of openly seeking to make political capital of them. The president is said to take the position that, to attack Hughes on the ground named, would lay the democrats open to the charge of playing politics with the supreme court of the United States.

Russia is estimated to have more than 4,000,000 acres of land that would produce cotton if irrigated.

SEEK GOLD SHIPMENT FOR SUBMARINE BOAT

Negotiations Pending For Precious Metal to Send to Germany.

Baltimore, Md., July 22.—Negotiations now said to be pending between the Eastern Forwarding company and "one of the largest American banking institutions" for a big consignment of gold to be sent back to Germany on the submarine merchantman Deutschland were given as the cause of the delay in the undersea liner's departure from Baltimore, according to an official of the submarine's agents today.

Paul G. L. Helken, the junior member of the Eastern Forwarding company has been absent from his office here for more than 48 hours and it was said that he is representing his company in the negotiations for the gold. The amount could not be learned.

AMERICAN SCHOONER SEIZED BY GERMANS

London, July 21.—The American schooner Prince Valdemar has been captured by a German warship while on its way from Philadelphia to Sweden with a cargo of oil, according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company, quoting the Copenhagen Politiken. The schooner was taken into Swinemunde.

The only American schooner of this name which is listed here belongs to George W. McNear, of San Francisco. The McNear firm is one of those included in the recent British blacklist.

BURGLARS WORK HOURS; GET FIVE-CENT HAUL

Aberdeen, S. D., July 21.—Two burglars worked nearly all night gaining an entrance to the Alexander library here. When they broke open the money drawer their loot was 5 cents. Two houses were also robbed. Considerable jewelry was taken from the home of Mrs. Blanche Bussnell. It was circus night.

NAVY GUNS ARE HEARD

London, July 22.—Heavy cannonading has been heard off the west coast of Jutland and in the Baltic sea between Landhort and the Gottska sands by vesselmen arriving in Danish ports, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Copenhagen.

It is believed the German fleet had an engagement with the Russians.

GERMAN ITALIAN RELATIONS TENSE

Determination to Treat German Subjects as Alien Foes May Force Berlin's Hand.

Rome, (la Paris), July 22.—A ministerial decree was issued today placing the persons and property of Germans on the same footing of those of Austrians and Hungarians. The decree does not directly mention Germans, but states that allies of Austria are to be treated as enemies and their subjects and goods are liable to sequestration.

Prior to the war German property and interests in Italy were estimated to be worth $250,000,000. Their value now is placed at about $150,000,000. There are only a few German subjects in Italy now and these will be either placed in concentration camps, or sent across the Swiss border.

There has been a strong agitation in Italy for some time for the breaking off of all relations with Germany. The curious situation caused by Italy being at war with Austria, while nominally at peace with Germany, was emphasized by an agreement between Rome and Berlin, wherein all rights of the citizens of one country domiciled in the other were to be respected.

On July 6, this agreement was denounced on the ground that it was not being observed by Germany. At the great council of the entente powers held in Paris last February, the Italian representatives were pressed for an explanation as to why Italy had not declared war on Germany. On February 29, Italy requisitioned 34 German ships which were interned in Italian ports. As a similar action by Portugal had promptly called fourth an ultimatum from Berlin which was followed by a declaration of war, it was confidently expected that the same sequel would follow in regard to Italy.

As far as is known, however, Wilhelmstrasse did not even make a protest. If war is now declared Italian troops may be sent to the western front according to the expectations expressed in London and Paris.

CHOLERA SCOURGE RAVAGING TURKEY

Missionary, Through Bible References, Sends Story Past Censor—Famine Also Prevalent There.

New York, July 22.—A cryptic message by which an American missionary nurse in Turkey got information of famine and pestilence past the Turkish censor is described in a bulletin issued today by the American board of commissioners for foreign missions. The message written on the post card follows:

"We shall very soon have to test the first part of the 20th verse of the fifth chapter of Job and still sooner, even now, of the last of psalm 91:3. What a blessing to have a God who is true and able! Lots of love to you all. Dr. Hamlin's famous mixture in demand here."

The first part of the 20th verse of the fifth chapter of Job reads:

"In famine he shall redeem thee from death."

The last part of the third verse of the 91st psalm follows the expression: "For He shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler," and it is added, "and from the noisesome pestilence."

The mixture referred to is a medicine used in cholera cases. The board of commissioners interpret the reference to the mixture to mean that cholera is raging in that part of Turkey.

HANLY IS CHOSEN STANDARD BEARER ON FIRST BALLOT

Former Governor of Indiana Prohibitionist Candidate For President—Sulzer Gets 181 Votes.

PLATFORM IS SWEEPING

Measures Advocated Include Moderate Preparedness, Government Ownership and Equal Suffrage.

St. Paul, Minn., July 22.—J. Frank Hanley, former governor of Indiana, was nominated for president of the United States on the first ballot at the national prohibition convention here this afternoon.

Hanley received 440 votes against 181 for William Sulzer, former governor of New York, his nearest contender.

Finley C. Hendrickson, of Cumberland, Md., received 51 votes; James Gilbert Mason, New Jersey, 1; W. P. F. Ferguson, 4; Sumner W. Haynes, Indiana, 2; Henry Ford, 1.

A motion to make Mr. Hanly's nomination unanimous met with little opposition. A motion to adjourn was defeated and the roll call of states for nominating speeches for vice president proceeded.

St. Paul, Minn., July 22.—The national prohibition convention resumed its work shortly after 10 o'clock today and after a brief discussion adopted the platform without serious opposition. By a rising vote the convention included in the platform W. W. Chaffin's plank indorsing the initiative, referendum and recall.

Names of the new members of the national committee were presented and confirmed. Nomination of presidential and vice presidential candidates was the next business in order. Nominating speeches were limited to 10 minutes and second speeches to five minutes.

Alabama yielded to Indiana, and Sumner W. Hays began his speech nominating J. Frank Hanly, former governor of Indiana. At the conclusion of Haynes' speech there was a noisy demonstration. Delegates waved flags and banners and stood on their seats and shouted. The Indiana delegation marched through aisles and over the platform singing patriotic songs.

Cheers for Candidates.

After a 12-minute demonstration for Hanly, order was restored. Arizona was next called and Eugene W. Chafin placed in nomination William Sulzer, former governor of New York. His speech was punctuated with applause. He concluded with the declaration that "Sunday school politics have prevailed too long in the prohibition party and we now need a statesman as our leader." A demonstration was begun and lasted four minutes.

Dr. Grafton D. Day nominated Dr. James Gilbert Mason, of New Jersey. Daniel A. Poling, of Boston, seconded the nomination of Mr. Hanly.

John C. Coffin, of Florida, seconded the nomination of Mr. Sulzer.

Draft of Platform.

The platform of the national prohibition party, adopted at today's session of the party's convention, denounces the liquor traffic as a crime, declares for nation-wide prohibition and equal suffrage, and opposes the military programs of the republican and democratic parties, but favors "a constructive platform," which, summarized makes the following declarations:

Expresses opposition to the wasteful military programs of the democratic and republican parties.

Support would be given a compact among nations to dismantle navies and disband armies, but until such a compact is established maintenance of an effective army and navy and adequate coast defenses are recommended.

Favors reciprocal trade treaties to be negotiated with all nations and commissions appointed to gather facts.

Favors national legislation to encourage the establishment of an adequate fleet of American merchant ships.

Opposes war with Mexico, pledges aid to the protection of American lives and favors use of force when necessary.

Approves strict interpretation of the Monroe doctrine.

Opposes abandonment of the Philippine islands at this time but favors ultimate independence.

Favors nonpolitical promotions, to be governed by civil service regulations, applicable to all federal executive officials.

JURORS FAIL TO HOLD MAN

Red Oak, Ia., July 21.—The special grand jury called to investigate the alleged connection of William Mansfield with the Villisca ax murders, finished its work today and refused to indict Mansfield.

Mansfield was released immediately after the grand jury made its report.

The ax murders at Villisca in 1912 were horrible in detail. An entire family was wiped out without a trace being left as to the identity of the murderer.

Recently Mansfield was arrested in Missouri on the theory that he was in Villisca when the murders were committed. He was held pending investigation.

SEEKING INFORMATION ABOUT NATIONAL GUARD

Washington, D. C., July 21.—Representative Madden, republican, introduced a resolution today calling on President Wilson to inform the House why the National Guard is being kept on the border, and if there is an emergency situation in Mexico.

It asks specifically whether the guardsmen under orders issued so far can be sent into Mexico, and for full information of their distribution and situation.

FISH

The sea does not hold all the species of fish, nor is the remainder confined to fresh waters. There are phenomenal specimens everywhere on dry land. Some of these are not dependent on a dry environment, however. They are perhaps amphibious. But they are sure enough fish, whatever.

The chief end of fish is the hook. And in order to be caught, fish must take a fancy to the bait on the hook. This is easily arranged. Then the fishing's fine! So all wonder that it should be in the main diversion of the human family. Piscatorial art or artifice is a sport that is hardly likely ever to go out of fashion. Methods may change but the principle is fixed.

The major factor is the bait. Its selection is properly governed by the occasion, the surroundings, and the individual gills of the vertebrate. Consequently this group of considerations provides a stable subject of conversation if not of thought. Nobody calls bait "bait," of course. That would be awkward, unnecessary and ill-bred. It would eliminate the imagination, without which anything and everything on earth may drag into all sorts of drab dullness. Conversely, shades of rose color may conceal the subtlest bait that ever was, or that ever was [illegible] fish to be caught. [illegible] but is quite justified in calling it "sunrise," or "luck", or "velvet," or "double par"—in truth, anything but "bait."

And fish, as well as fishermen, are coy to meats lacking in imagination. Knowledge has not been popularized as to the brains or the celebration of the Teleostei or the Selachians, but, whatever may be said against higher anatomy and function, neither of these two fish families or others can be said to be without imagination. Were such calculations possible, much human as well as piscatorial enterprise would cease. Inequality would disappear, and we afflicted with the poise that the best philosophers of [illegible] cannot find.

BRAGG

The world does brag. It is entitled to extra horses, for it is a constructive thing. Brags. It makes two blades grow where but one grew before. It never subtracts. It always adds or multiplies or increases by arithmetical and geometrical progression.

So it is entirely clear that brag ranks high in many respects. It reminds us of thrift and efficiency and optimism and new thought and several [illegible] "it pays to advertise" and [illegible].

A virtue (if you will) like brag is all the more creditable because it has no visible means of support. It is a superstructure, so to speak, with nothing to support it like that unnecessary contrivance known in general as foundation. To this extent, therefore, brag is quite immaterial and ethereal. In his view it has a certain spiritual side. It persists by reason of that which is not tangible, like some other states of mind.

Brag is an asset of the majority. It is hardly ever cornered, though stores vary. Nowadays, when millions of dollars may be seen all about us, there is a refined form of brag that obtains. "I am very poor," when spoken with intelligence has a most refreshing sound, and it confers immediately real distinction on the one who assumes this form of polished egoism.

But there are other forms in equal favor according to racial, national, individual, or educational preference. Ambition, enterprise, born leadership "grit," "sand" "freshness," "nerve" courage and many other qualifications decide the particular brand. In any case it is a big field. Let everybody make a choice.—From Judge.

ABOUT THE STERNER SEX

The average man's notion of good music is the six o'clock whistle.

A town man figures his boys as a liability. A farmer figures his as an asset.

Some men are so afraid of hurting other people's feelings that they won't even grin when the weather man falls down on his prediction.

Sometimes it seems as if a man ran for office merely to find out from his enemies how utterly outrageous his past life has been.

A man may be said to be making progress as soon as he discovers that the soap box at the corner grocery is a mighty poor seat.

There are more ways of killing a man's love than by overfeeding it, but that is an easy and common way.

Men love to pretend they understand things they don't, and women love to pretend not to understand things they do.

Sometimes a goody good man gets on your nerves harder than one whose virtues can't be seen with a magnifying glass.

It's all right for a man to wake up in the morning fresh as a daisy, but it isn't right to let his freshness get too fresh.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

RAILROAD WAGES

Shall they be determined by Industrial Warfare or Federal Inquiry?

To the American Public:

Do you believe in arbitration or industrial warfare?

The train employes on all the railroads are voting whether they will give their leaders authority to tie up the commerce of the country to enforce their demands for a 100 million dollar wage increase.

The railroads are in the public service—your service. This army of employes is in the public service—your service.

You pay for rail transportation 3 billion dollars a year, and 44 cents out of every dollar from you goes to the employes.

On all the Western railroads in 1915, seventy-five per cent of the train employes earned these wages (lowest, highest and average of all) as shown by the pay rolls—

	Passenger		Freight		Yard
	Range	Average	Range	Average	Range	Average
Engineers	$1747 3094	$2195	$1537 3076	$2071	$1056 2445	$1378
Conductors	1543 2789	1878	1454 2933	1935	1151 2045	1355
Firemen	1053 2078	1317	751 2059	1181	418 1552	973
Brakemen	854 1719	967	874 1961	1135	862 1821	1107

The average yearly wage payments to all Western train employes (including those who worked only part of the year) as shown by the 1915 payrolls were—

	Passenger	Freight	Yard
Engineers	$2038	$1737	$1218
Conductors	1772	1624	1292
Firemen	1218	973	832
Brakemen	921	1000	1026

A 100 million dollar wage increase for men in freight and yard service (less than one-fifth of all employes) is equal to a 5 per cent advance in all freight rates.

The managers of the railroads, as trustees for the public, have no right to place this burden on the cost of transportation to you without a clear mandate from a public tribunal speaking for you.

The railroads have proposed the settlement of this controversy either under the existing national arbitration law, or by reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This offer has been refused by the employes' representatives.

Shall a nation-wide strike or an investigation under the Government determine this issue?

FARM & GARDEN

Successful Skunk Farms

Within the corporate limits of a small Ohio city are three skunk farms. On each farm are maintained an average of 80 skunks. The little patches of ground occupied by the skunks are called farms by courtesy, says E. P Snyder in Farm and Home, but none of them occupy more than a half acre.

The farms are surrounded by close woven galvanized wire fence set two feet in the ground to prevent the animals from burrowing out. On top of the fence is laid at right angles a strip of 18-inch chicken wire to keep them from climbing over.

These three farms are on side hills. Near the top of the hills are built diminutive little coops or houses for "dormitories." In these are boxes of clean straw or other nesting material, and here the animals live most of the time. These homes are reached thru six inch tile laid two feet underground and the whole plant is made to conform as nearly as possible to the conditions that surround the animals in their wild state.

Their feed consists mostly of meat scraps from the butcher shops, eggs that are candled out by shippers, sweet corn in season and table scraps. While they are carnivorous they relish some of the garden vegetables.

They hibernate a good part of the winter, not coming out of their dens during severe weather. In the wild state they burrow but little and at the approach of cold weather go into the dens of the marmots and appear to live with them peaceably. There seems to be a sort of affinity between the two animals.

These farms are stocked by catching wild skunks and putting them in the inclosure. It might be thought that they would be a little disagreeable to handle alive, but it has been found that if the tail can be kept in line with the spinal column they can't eject the fetid, acrid fluid, their most effective means of defense

One hunter who makes a specialty of capturing live skunks has a dog trained to bay them, that is, he circles around and around them at a respectful distance, keeping them from running away and all the time barking for help.

All the time the skunk has his "plume" high in the air ready to eject the offensive fluid if his enemy gets too close. The hunter watches for opportunity and when the skunk's attention is entirely occupied by the dog he slips up behind, grabs him by the tail and jerks him into the air With his feet off the ground and his tail in line with his spinal column he can't throw his odor It is then easy for the hunter to transfer him to the farm and introduce him to his comrade in captivity

After a few months of captivity they become quite as tame as domestic animals They are fed once a day and will come at the call or whistle of their master like a herd of little pigs, crowding into the basket of meat and fighting among themselves for the best scraps

The process of removing the scent pouch is a simple one and requires no more skill than the castration of a pig They recover readily from the operation and can thereafter be handled with perfect safety.

Skunks breed once a year The young are born in May, from five to eight in each litter. By the following December or January they have attained their growth. The fur is then prime and they are killed and the furs put on the market. When furs were high pelts brought $2.50 to $4.75 each Ladies' skunk fur capes sell as high as $65 In England the furs of skunk are called skunk, but in America milady calls it "Alaska sable"

Diversity of Farm Enterprises

In most cases where studies on the profits in farming have been made particularly in our oldest agricultural districts, such studies indicate that the most successful farms are those which have from two to four major sources of income; i. e., they have a well balanced and diversified business In certain instances it may pay better to have only one enterprise, but usually when one crop pays better than all others the production of it increases rapidly and soon the price falls to the point where other crops or products are equally as profitable. Diversified farming is often confused with farming where there is a little of everything and not much of anything. Either extreme lessens the chances of success. When the price of certain crops is very low then live stock usually becomes desirable. However, if the returns per animal are poor, cash crops even at a low price are essential. A well balanced business insures against losses and provides a much better utilization of the labor and equipment.

In localities where soy beans or cowpeas are grown extensively, experience has shown that the price of the seed on the home market holds up well so long as there is local demand enough to take all the seed grown, but falls to about $1 a bushel when it becomes necessary to ship to find a market.

The silo has become a great factor in dairy success.

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

BOY TOOK CHANCE OFFERED

Indiana Judge Had Faith in Human Nature, and It Was Not Misplaced on This Ocasion

A judge sitting in the juvenile court in an Indiana town was trying a boy on a charge of stealing stamps from his employer. The evidence was purely circumstantial. The boy had cleared his employer's desk and a short time later he tried to sell to another employee the same number of stamps that had been missed from the desk. The latter considered the evidence of the boy who worked at the desk sufficient and turned the lad in to the police.

"Now, son," said the court, "did either of these men give you the stamps?"

"No, your honor, but the boy has given full confession to us."

The court looked at the boy who replied slightly to this statement.

"Well," the court finally said, "that is all right, but for the sake of justice as well as mine only the boy who stole the stamps—the defendant is charged."

The next day the boy returned the stamps to his employer.—Indianapolis News.

CHAPTER XI (Continued).

"Maybe the captain wants to give me a fair chance to surrender without bloodshed," observed Duane. "Pretty decent of him, if he meant that."

"He invites you out to his camp after dark. Something strange about this, Duane. But MacNelly's a new man out here. He does some queer things. Perhaps he's getting a swelled head. Well, whatever his intentions, his presence around Mercer is enough for us. Duane, you hit the road and put some miles between you and the amiable captain before daylight. Tomorrow I'll go out there and ask him what in the devil he meant."

That messenger he sent—he was a ranger," said Duane.

"Sure he was, and a nervy one! It must have taken sand to come bracing you that way. Duane, the fellow didn't pack a gun. I'll swear to that. Pretty odd, this trick. But you can't trust it. Hit the road, Duane."

A little later a black horse, with muffled hoofs, bearing a tall, dark rider who peered keenly into every shadow, trotted down a pasture lane back of Jones' house, turned into the road, and then, breaking into swifter gait, rapidly left Mercer behind.

Fifteen or 20 miles out Duane drew rein in a forest of mesquite, dismounted, and searched about for a glade with a little grass. Here he staked his horse on a long lariat, and, using his saddle for a pillow, his saddle blanket for covering, he went to sleep.

Next morning he was off again, working south. During the next few days he paid brief visits to several villages that lay in his path. And in each, some one particular friend had a piece of news to impart that made Duane profoundly thoughtful. A ranger had made a quiet, unobtrusive call upon these friends and left this message: "Tell Buck Duane to ride into Captain MacNelly's camp some time after night."

Duane concluded, and his friends all agreed with him, that the new ranger's main purpose in the Nueces country was to capture or kill Buck Duane, and that this message was simply an original and striking ruse, the daring of which might appeal to certain outlaws.

But it did not appeal to Duane. His curiosity was aroused, it did not, however, tempt him to do any foolhardy act. He turned southwest and rode 100 miles until he again reached the sparsely settled country. Here he heard no more of rangers. It was a barren region he had never but once ridden through, and that ride had cost him dearly. He had been compelled to shoot his way out. Outlaws were not in accord with the few ranchers and their cowpunchers who ranged there. He learned that both outlaws and Mexican raiders had long been at bitter enmity with these ranchers. Being unfamiliar with roads and trails, Duane had pushed on into the heart of this district, when all the time he really believed he was traveling around it. A rifle shot from a ranch house, a deliberate attempt to kill him because he was an unknown rider in those parts, discovered to Duane his mistake, and a hard ride to get away persuaded him to return to his old methods of hiding by day and traveling by night.

He got into rough country, rode for three days without covering much ground, but believed he was getting on safer territory. Twice he came to a wide bottom land, green with willow and cottonwood and thick as chaparral, somewhere through the middle of which ran a river he decided must be the lower Nueces.

One evening, as he stole out from a covert where he had camped, he saw the lights of a village. He tried to pass it on the left, but was unable to because the brakes of this bottom land extended in almost to the outskirts of the village, and he had to retrace his steps and go round to the right. Wire fences and horses in pasture made this a task, so it was well after midnight before he accomplished it. He made 10 miles or more then by daylight, and after that proceeded cautiously along a road which appeared to be well worn from travel. He passed several thickets where he would have halted to hide during the day but for the fact that he had to find water.

He was a long while coming to it, and then there was no thicket or clump of mesquite near the water-hole that would afford him cover. So he kept on.

The country before him was ridgy and began to show cottonwoods here and there in the hollows and yucca and mesquite on the higher ground. As he mounted a ridge he noted that the road made a sharp turn, and he could not see what was beyond it. He slowed up and was making the turn, which was down hill between high banks of yellow clay, when his mettlesome horse heard something to frighten him or shied at something and bolted.

The few bounds before Duane's iron arm checked him were enough to reach the curve. One flashing glance showed Duane the open once more, a little valley below with a wide, shallow, rocky stream, a clump of cottonwoods beyond, a somber group of men facing him, and two dark, limp, strangely grotesque figures hanging from branches.

The sight was common enough in southwest Texas, but Duane had never before found himself so unpleasantly close.

A hoarse voice pealed out: "By hell! there's another one!"

"Stranger, ride down an' account for yourself!" yelled another.

"Hands up!"

"That's right, Jack; don't take no chances. Plug him!"

These remarks were so swiftly uttered as almost to be continuous. Duane was wheeling his horse when a rifle cracked. The bullet struck his left forearm and he thought broke it, for he dropped the rein. The frightened horse leaped. Another bullet whistled past Duane. Then the bend in the road saved him probably from certain death. Like the wind his sleet steed went down the long hill.

Duane was in no hurry to look back. He knew what to expect. His chief concern of the moment was for his injured arm. He found that the bones were still intact; but the wound, having been made by a soft bullet, was an exceedingly bad one. Blood poured from it. Giving the horse his head, Duane wound his scarf tightly round the holes, and with teeth and hand tied it tightly. That done, he looked back over his shoulder.

Riders were making the dust fly on the hillside road. There were more coming round the out where the road curved. The leader was perhaps a quarter of a mile back, and the others strung out behind him. Duane needed only one glance to tell him that they were fast and hard-riding cowboys in a land where all riders were good. They would not have owned any but strong, swift horses. Moreover, it was a district where ranchers had suffered beyond all endurance the greed and brutality of outlaws. Duane had simply been so unfortunate as to run right into a lynching party at a time of all times when any stranger would be in danger, and any outlaw put to his limit to escape with his life.

Duane did not look back again until he had crossed the ridgy piece of ground and had gotten to the level road. He had gained upon his pursuers. When he ascertained this he tried to save his horse, to check a little that killing gait. This horse was a magnificent animal, big, strong, fast, but his endurance had never been put to a gruelling test. And that worried Duane. His life had made is impossible to keep one horse very long at a time, and this one was an unknown quantity.

Duane had only one plan—the only plan possible in this case—and that was to make the river bottoms, where he might elude his pursuers in the willow brakes. Fifteen miles or so would bring him to the river, and this was not a hopeless distance for any good horse if not too closely pressed. Duane concluded presently that the cowboys behind were losing a little in chase because they were not extending their horses. It was decidedly unusual for such riders to save their mounts. Duane pondered over this, looking back several times to see if their horses were stretched out. They were not, and the fact was disturbing. Only one reason presented itself to Duane's conjecturing, and it was that with him headed straight on that road his pursuers were satisfied not to force the running. He began to hope to look for a trail or a road turning off to right or left. There was none. A rough, mesquite-dotted and yucca-spired country extended away on either side. Duane believed that he would be compelled to take to this hard going. One thing was certain—he had to go round the village. The river, however, was on the outskirts of the village, and once in the willows, he would be safe.

Dust-clouds far ahead caused his alarm to grow. He watched with his eyes strained; he hoped to see a wagon, a few stray cattle. Shots and yells behind him attested to the fact that his pursuers likewise had seen these newcomers on the scene. More than a mile separated these two parties, yet this distance did not keep them from soon understanding each other. Duane waited only to see this new factor show signs of sudden quick action, and then, with a muttered curse, he spurred his horse off the road into the brush.

He chose the right side, because the river lay nearest that way. There were patches of open sandy ground between clumps of cactus and mesquite, and he found that despite a zigzag course he made better time. It was impossible for him to locate his pursuers. They would come together, he decided, and take to his tracks.

What, then, was his surprise and dismay to run out of a thicket right into a low ridge or rough, broken rock impossible to get a horse over. He wheeled to the left along its base. The sandy ground gave place to a harder soil, where his horse did not labor so. Here the growths of mesquite and cactus became scanter, affording better travel but poor cover. He kept sharp eyes ahead, and, as he had expected, soon saw moving dust-clouds and the dark figures of horses. They were half a mile away, and swinging obliquely across the flat, which fact proved that they had entertained a fair idea of the country and the fugitive's difficulty.

Without an instant's hesitation Duane put his horse to his best efforts, straight ahead. He had to pass those men. When this was seemingly made impossible by a deep wash from which he had to turn, Duane began to feel cold and sick. Was this the end? Always there had to be an end to an outlaw's career. He wanted then to ride straight at these pursuers. But reason outweighed instinct. He was fleeing for his life; nevertheless, the strongest instinct at the time was his desire to fight.

He knew when these three horsemen saw him, and a moment afterward he lost sight of them as he got into the mesquite again. He meant now to try to reach the road, and pushed his mount severely, though still saving him for a final burst. Rocks, thickets, bunches of cactus, washes—all operated against his following a straight line. Almost he lost his bearings, and finally would have ridden toward his enemies had not good fortune favored him in the matter of an open burned-over stretch of ground.

Here he saw both groups of pursuers, one on each side and almost within gunshot. Their sharp yells, as much as his cruel spurs, drove his horse into that pace which now meant life or death for him. And never had Duane bestrode a gamer, swifter, stancher beast. He seemed about to accomplish the impossible. In the dragging sand he was far superior to any horse in pursuit, and on this sandy open stretch he gained enough to spare a little in the brush beyond. Heated now and thoroughly terrorized, he kept the pace through thickets that almost tore Duane from his saddle. Something weighty and grim eased off Duane. He was going to get out in front! The horse had speed, fire, stamina.

Duane dashed out into another open place dotted by few trees, and here, right in his path, within pistol range, stood horsemen waiting. They yelled, they spurred toward him, but did not fire at him. He turned his horse—faced to the right. Only one thing kept him from standing his ground to fight it out. He remembered those dangling limp figures hanging from the cottonwoods. These ranchers would rather hang an outlaw than do anything. They might draw all his fire and then capture him. His horror of hanging was so great as to be all out of proportion compared to his gun fighter's instinct of self preservation.

A race began then, a dusty, crashing drive through gray mesquite. Duane could scarcely see, he was so blinded by stinging branches across his eyes. The hollow wind roared in his ears. But they must have been close. Did they shoot at him? He imagined he heard shots. But that might have been the cracking of dead snags. His left arm hung limp, almost useless; he handled the rein with his right; and most of the time he hung low over the pommel. The gray walls flashing by him, the whip of twigs, the rush of wind, the heavy, rapid pound of hoofs, the violent motion of his horse—these vied in sensation with the smart of sweat in his eyes, the rack of his wound, the cold, sick cramp in his stomach. With these also was dull, raging fury. He had to run when he wanted to fight. It took all his mind to force back that bitter hate of himself, of his pursuers, of this race for his useless life.

Suddenly he burst out of a line of mesquite into the road. A long stretch of lonely road! How fiercely, with hot, strange joy, he wheeled his horse upon it! Then he was sweeping along, sure now that he was out in front. His horse still had strength and speed, but showed signs of breaking. Presently Duane looked back. Pursuers—he could not count how many—were loping along in his rear. He paid no more attention to them, and with teeth set he faced ahead, grimmer now in his determination to foil them.

He passed a few scattered ranch-houses where horses whistled from corrals, and men curiously watched him fly past. He saw one rancher running, and he felt intuitively that this fellow was going to join in the chase. Duane's steed pounded on, not noticeably slower, but with a lack of former smoothness, with a strained, convulsive, jerking stride which showed he was almost done.

Sight of the village ahead surprised Duane. He had reached it sooner than he expected. Then he made a discovery—he had entered the zone of wire fences. As he dared not turn back now, he kept on, intending to ride through the village. Looking backward he saw that his pursuers were half a mile distant, too far to alarm any villagers in time to intercept him in his flight. As he rode by the first houses his horse broke and began to labor. Duane did not believe he would last long enough to go through the village.

Saddled horses in front of a store gave Duane an idea, not by any means new, and one he had carried out successfully before. As he pulled in his heaving mount and leaped off, a couple of ranchers came out of the place, and one of them stepped to a clean limbed, fiery bay. He was about to get into his saddle when he saw Duane, and then halted, a foot in the stirrup.

Duane stored forward, grasped the bridle of this man's horse.

"Mine's done—but not killed," he panted. "Trade with me."

"Wal, stranger, I'm shore always ready to trade," drawled the man. "But ain't you a little swift?"

Duane glanced back up the road. His pursuers were entering the village.

"I'm Duane—Buck Duane," he cried, menacingly. "Will you trade? Hurry!"

The rancher, turning white, dropped his foot from the stirrup and fell back.

"I reckon I'll trade," he said.

Bounding up, Duane dug spurs into the bay's flanks. The horse snorted in fright, plunged into a run. He was fresh, swift, half wild. Duane flashed by the remaining houses on the street out into the open. But the road ended at the village or else led out from some other quarter, for he had ridden straight into the fields and from them into rough desert. When he reached the cover of mesquite once more he looked back to find six horsemen within rifle-shot of him, and more coming behind them.

His new horse had not had time to get warm before Duane reached a high sandy bluff below which lay the willow brakes. As far as he could see extended an immense flat strip of red tinged willow. How welcome it was to his eye! He felt like a hunted wolf that, weary and lame, had reached his role in the rocks. Zigzagging down the soft slope, he put the bay to the dense wall of leaf and branch. But the horse balked.

There was little time to lose. Dismounting, he dragged the stubborn beast into the thicket. This was harder and slower work than Duane cared to risk. If he had not been rushed he might have had better success. So he had to abandon the horse—a circumstance that only such sore straits could have driven him to. Then he went slipping swiftly through the narrow aisles.

He had not gotten under cover any too soon. For he heard his pursuers piling over the bluff, loud voiced, confident, brutal. They crashed into the willows.

"Hi, Sid! Heah's your hoss!" called one, evidently to the man Duane had forced into a trade.

"Say, if you looced gents 'll hold up a little I'll tell you somethin'," replied a voice from the bluff.

"Come on, Sid! We got him corralled," said the first speaker.

"Wal, mebee, an' if you hev it's liable to be damn hot. Thet feller was Buck Duane!"

Absolute silence followed that statement. Presently it was broken by a rattling of loose gravel and then low voices.

"He can't git acrost the river, I tell you," came to Duane's ears. "He's corralled in the brake. I know thet hole."

Then Duane, gliding silently and swiftly through the willows, heard no more from his pursuers. He headed straight for the river. Threading a passage through a willow brake was an old task for him. Many days and nights had gone to the acquiring of a skill that might have been envied by an Indian.

The Rio Grande and its tributaries for the most of their length in Texas ran between wide, low, flat lands covered by a dense growth of willow. Cottonwood, mesquite, prickly pear, and other growths mingled with the willow, and altogether they made a matted, tangled copse, a thicket that an inexperienced man would have considered impenetrable. From above, these wild brakes looked green and red; from the inside they were gray and yellow—a striped wall. Trails and glades were scarce. There were a few deer-runways and sometimes little paths made by peccaries—the jabali, or wold pigs, of Mexico. The ground was clay and unusually dry, sometimes baked so hard that it left no imprint of a track. Where a growth of cottonwood had held back the encroachment of the willows there usually was thick grass and underbrush. The willows were short, slender poles with stems so close together that they almost touched, and with the leafy foliage forming a thick covering.

The depths of this brake Duane had penetrated was a silent, dreamy, strange place. In the middle of the day the light was wierd and dim. When a breeze fluttered the foliage, then slender shafts and spears of sunshine pierced the green mantle and danced like gold on the ground.

Duane had always felt the strangeness of this kind of place, and likewise he had felt a protecting harboring something which always seemed to him to be the sympathy of the brake for a hunted creature. Any unwounded creature strong and resourceful, was safe when he had glided under the low, rustling green roof of this wild covert. It was not hard to conceal tracks; the springy soil gave forth no sound; and men could hunt each other for weeks, pass within a few yards of each other and never know it. The problem of sustaining life was difficult; but, then, hunted men and animals survived on very little.

Duane wanted to cross the river if that was possible, and, keeping in the brake, worked his way upstream till he had reached country more hospitable. Remembering what the man had said in regard to the river, Duane had his doubts about crossing. But he would take any chance to put the river between him and his hunters. He pushed on. His left arm had to be favored, as he could scarcely move it. Using his right to spread the willows, he slipped sideways between them and made fast time. There were narrow aisles and washes and holes low down and paths brushed by animals, all of which he took advantage of, running, walking, crawling, stooping any way to get along. To keep in a straight line was not easy—he did it by marking some bright sunlit stem or tree ahead, and when he reached it looked straight on to mark another. His progress necessarily grew slower, for as he advanced the brake became wilder, denser, darker. Mosquitoes began to whine about his head. He kept on without pause. Deeping shadows under the willows told him that the afternoon was far advanced. He began to fear he had wandered in a wrong direction. Finally a strip of light ahead relieved his anxiety, and after a tollsome penetration of still denser brush he broke through to the bank of the river.

He faced a wide, shallow, muddy stream with brakes on the opposite bank extending like a green and yellow wall. Duane perceived at a glance the futility of his trying to cross at this point. Everywhere the sluggish water laved quicksand bars. In fact, the bed of the river was all quicksand, and very likely there was not a foot of water anywhere. He could not swim; he could not crawl, he could not push a log across. Any solid thing touching that smooth yellow sand would be grasped and sucked down. To prove this he seized a long pole and, reaching down from the high bank, thrust it into the stream. Right there near shore there apparently was no bottom to the treacherous quicksand. He abandoned any hope of crossing the river. Probably for miles up and down it would be just the same as here. Before leaving the bank he tied his hat upon the pole and lifted enough water to quench his thirst. Then he worked his way back to where thinner growth made advancement easier, and kept on upstream till the shadows were so deep he could not see. Feeling around for a place big enough to stretch out on, he lay down. For the time being he was as safe there as he would have been beyond in the Rim Rock. He was tired, though not exhausted, and in spite of the throbbing pain in his arm he dropped at once into sleep.

CHAPTER XII.

Some time during the night Duane awoke. A stillness seemingly so thick and heavy as to have substance blanketed the black willow brake. He could not see a star or a branch or tree-trunk or even his hand before his eyes. He lay there waiting, listening, sure that he had been awakened by an unusual sound. Ordinary noises of the night in the wilderness never disturbed his rest. His faculties, like those of old fugitives and hunted creatures, had become trained to a marvelous keeness. A long low breath of slow wind moaned through the willows, passed away; some stealthy, soft-footed beast trotted by him in the darkness; there was a rustling among dry leaves; a fox barked lonesomely in the distance. But none of these sounds had broken his slumber.

Suddenly, piercing the stillness, came a bay of a bloodhound. Quickly Duane sat up, chilled to his marrow. The action made him aware of his crippled arm. Then came other bays, lower, more distant. Silence enfolded him again, all the more oppressive and menacing in his suspense. Bloodhounds had been put on his trail, and the leader was not far away. All his life Duane had been familiar with bloodhounds; and he knew that if the pack surrounded him in this impenetrable darkness he would be held at bay or dragged down as wolves dragged a stag. Rising to his feet, preparing to flee as best he could, he wainted to be sure in the direction he should take.

The leader of the hounds broke into cry again, a deep, full-toned, ringing bay, strange, ominous, terribly significant in its power. It caused a cold sweat to ooze out all over Duane's body. He turned from it, and with his uninjured arm outstretched to feel for the willows he groped his way along. As is was impossible to pick out the narrow passages, he had to slip and squeeze and plunge between the yielding stems. He made such a crashing that he no longer heard the baying of the hounds. He had no hope to elude them. He meant to climb the first bottonwood that he stumbled upon in his blind flight. But it appeared he never was going to be lucky enough to run against one. Often he fell, sometimes flat, at others upheld by the willows. What made the work so hard was the fact that he had only one arm to open a clump of close growing stems and his feet would catch or tangle in the narrow crotches, holding him fast. He had to struggle desperately. It was as if the willows were clutching hands, his enemies, fiendishly impeding his progress. He tore his clothes on sharp branches and his flesh suffered many a prick. But in a terrible earnestness he kept on until he brought up hard against a cottonwood tree.

There he leaned and rested. He found himself as nearly exhausted as he had ever been, wet with sweat, his hands torn and burning, his breast laboring, his legs stinging from innumerable bruises. While he leaned there to catch his breath he listened for the pursuing hounds. For a long time there was no sound from them. This, however, did not deceive him into any hopefulness. There were bloodhounds that bayed often on a trail, and others that ran mostly silent. The former were more valuable to their owner and the latter more dangerous to the fugitive. Presently Duane's ears were filled by a chorus of short ringing yelps. The pack had found where he had slept, and now the trail was hot. Satisfied that they would soon overtake him, Duane set about climbing the cottonwood, which in his condition was difficult of ascent.

It happened to be a fairly large tree with a fork about 15 feet up, and branches thereafter in succession. Duane climbed until he got about the enshrouding belt of blackness. A pale gray mist hung above the brake, and through it shone a line of dim lights. Duane decided these were bonfires made along the bluff to render his escape more difficult on that side. Away round in the direction he thought was north he imagined he saw more fires, but, as the mist was thick, he could not be sure. While he was there pondering the matter, listening for the hounds, the mist and the gloom on one side lightened; and this side he concluded was east and meant that dawn was near. Satisfying himself on this score, he descended to the first branch of the tree.

The number of suicides in the city of Paris has decreased from 15 or 20 a week in ordinary times to only about two a week since the war began. It has been suggested that this decrease is due to curiosity, every one being so anxious to see what the outcome of the war will be that they refrain from taking their own lives, hoping for a French victory.

AMERICAN OFFICERS ARE NEUTRAL SPIES

Ministers In Charge of Legations Work For Numerous Nations.

Stockholm, Sweden (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Neutrality in the Scandinavian countries is nowhere to be found in such exemplification as at the American legations in Stockholm, Copenhagen and Christiania. The latch string which dangles below the coat of arms of the United States is out alike to Russian, to German, to French, Englishman to all who come for aid or advice. It is as possible always to do just what is wanted, but each visitor is given a sympathetic hearing and if there is any way in which the good offices of the United States or its diplomatic representatives can be employed this help is cheerfully given.

The American legations are the common meeting ground of the ministers from the warring powers not necessarily at the same time but it is seldom a day passes that some communication has not been had with all of them. The work of the legations increases daily and problems that are strange to the ordinary channels of diplomacy are demanding consideration. Often the situation is somewhat delicate and the American ministers have had to move at times with all the weariness that diplomacy commands.

Many Duties.

Commercial questions which involve the relations sometimes of three or four nations have to be met, while at all times there is the duty of safeguarding as far as possible the trade of the United States. There are constant appeals to be made for the release of American merchandise or for the free for American goods to pass over and through territory where the products of other nations may be forbidden. Often the questions involved are difficult and vexatious, but so far as can be judged the American envoys have carried out their duties and instructions in such manner as to cause a minimum of friction.

Here in Stockholm the American minister, Ira Nelson Morris, has almost what might be termed personal charge of the enormous trade between the United States and Russia. This has to do with practically all commodities except munitions of war. Sweden is the winter highway to Russia. But England, which controls the sea, and Sweden, which controls the highway, are both on the best commercial terms, so nothing can pass through Sweden to Russia without the agreement of these two powers. Licenses must be obtained in every instance and these can only be had through the intercession of the American legation.

England, of course, has no desire to interfere with shipments from America to her Russian ally, but she demands the guarantee of the American minister that these goods shall reach Russia intact. Sweden, on the other hand, wants assurance that the goods are all from America and that England has no immediate interest in these imports of English goods into Sweden and shipments of English goods through Sweden to Russia are under strict control of the two governments and must exactly balance.

The American legation here also has to account strictly for all persons holding American passports good for Russia.

Just now Mr. Morris is endeavoring to obtain from Great Britain the release of some 600 American typewriters consigned to a Swedish firm, but held by the steamship lines at Copenhagen under orders from the British admiralty. England does not wish typewriters to get into Germany. The Swedish firm has given every assurance that the typewriters are for use in Sweden alone and they assert there is practically a typewriter famine in this country. The shipment is valued at something like $55,000.

At Copenhagen, the American minister to Denmark, Dr. Maurice Francis Egan, having enjoyed the distinction of serving under Presidents Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson, and thus been in close relation with the Danish government for a great many years, was in a particularly felicitous position to handle the affairs of war when trouble came. In addition to the ordinary details of diplomatic relations and the commercial problems constantly requiring attention, the legation at Copenhagen has been a point of communication between America and the central powers and the archives undoubtedly contain copies of messages relayed back and forth which will make interesting diplomatic history in the years to come.

At Christiania the American minister to Norway, Albert G. Schmedeman, of Wisconsin, has had problems akin to those in the larger capitals of Stockholm and Copenhagen. While his difficulties have been more or less local, the tremendous shipping done at Christiania, increased many fold since the war began, has made the legation a workshop by day and night.

Extended vacations, once a pleasant prerogative of American diplomats, have become a war luxury not to be enjoyed, whether the envoy be stationed at the capital of a belligerent or accredited to the government of a European neutral.

A Forbidding Example.

From the St. Paul Dispatch.

Hetty Green, with all her opportunities, scored one great achievement. That achievement was not the accumulation of the greatest fortune possessed by any woman. Her supreme achievement was in demonstrating to the world the absolute poverty of wealth without humanity.

When we come to estimate her life we find ourselves utterly deprived of those small points which we can so magnify as to obscure her blind, unconscious selfishness and turn her into a princess bountiful or a godmother of American enterprise.

Hetty Green's passion merely to possess wealth naturally took two forms. She lived, first, to get money, and second, not to spend it. Inheriting, as to tune the mere interest from which would have enabled her to live in royal splendor, raise a large family and give her children all a splendid start in life, with enough left over to make her name remembered for its benefactions, she immediately started grubbing for more, saving the nickels she would have spent in carfare had she not been penurious almost to the point of insanity.

But may Hetty Green's soul rest in peace. She sold her life on this earth for gold which she could not enjoy because of the misery which always attends grasping nature, and because she could not take it with her. She is the classic example of what a multimillionaire should not be. And fate has been unfair to the sex to choose from its few representatives of immense fortunes the most forbidding example of them all.

Subject to Service.

From the New York World.

Brooklyn progressives lack the true spirit of obedience. They are wanting in discipline. They even go so far as to expect to being delivered over the political bargain counter to the republican party. The Perkins-Roosevelt wing has neglected their education in not impressing upon them the principle that progressives are subject to universal conscription in any party selected for the support.

...'S GOT THE MONEY

Four Staples Alone the Farmers of Western Canada Produced 408 Million Dollars in 1915.

The Calgary (Alberta) printers have issued a booklet, called "The Magnet," in its columns a few weeks ago carried an article entitled "Who's Got the Money?" It was clever written, and for its length, the writer would have pleased to have copied the article in its entirety. The purpose for which this article is published, however, is that of letting the readers of the paper know of the great progress that is being made in agriculture in Western Canada, will be served by copying portion of the article. Many of the readers of this paper doubtless have family in one of the three provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, and they will be interested in feeling that their friends are enjoying a portion of the wealth that has come to Western Canada farmers as a result of careful tilling of a soil productive in everything that goes to make a good farm, cattle, horses, hogs and sheep.

Regarding the article:

The Government does not produce money. It can stamp "One Dollar" on a piece of white paper, and we accept it as a dollar's worth, but neither the paper nor the printing are worth a cent. What gives it value is the promise of the people of Canada which is behind the printed slip, and our faith in that promise.

Now do you know who's got the money?

Let us put it into figures. The farmers of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba last year raised 342,948,000 bushels of wheat. If we take for an average 65 cents a bushel in Manitoba, 60 cents in Saskatchewan and 79 cents in Alberta the season's wheat crop was worth $238,629,000. Add to this an oat crop of 334,840,000 bushels, worth $85,897,000; a barley crop of 35,... bushels, worth $15,871,000, and a flax crop of 10,559,000 bushels, worth $... and you find that on these four staples alone the farmers of Western Canada produced a wealth of $...

Please note that this wealth is in money. It is not in real estate at inflated values, industrial stocks that are worth a dollar and the rest air, fictitious securities or unsaleable merchandise that is in hard cash, or—which is better still—wheat.

These figures are only for the staple grain productions. They do not include the millions of dollars represented by the live stock and dairying industries, or the additional millions included in the root, fruit, and garden crops. The creameries of Saskatchewan, for instance, produced more buttermilk and ice cream last year than their total production amounted to six years ago. The milk, butter, and cheese production of Alberta for 1915 was valued at over eleven million dollars. The potato crop of the three provinces was worth five millions and a half. Corn and alfalfa—comparatively new crops, but with tremendous possibilities—amounted to over a round million. Then honey—you didn't know we raised honey (the bee kind) in this country, did you?—Manitoba produced ... pounds in 1915, and there isn't a bee in the province that doesn't work in a better honey-sorter than anything in California or Washington. That's where the money is; in the hands of our honest friend the farmer, who was too slow to get into the cities with the rest of us saw short-cuts to wealth, who hadn't imagination enough to think a man can make money without earning it, and who was too dull to know that hard work is foolish. He has the laugh now. Likewise the money.—Advertisement.

THE WORKBAG.

A simple center piece to use in the bungalow on the dining table between meals may be made of cretonne. The centerpiece is made of two circles of the same diameter cut from the cretonne. If the paper in the room is plain, a figured material repeating as its principal color the same as that on the walls will be in good taste. With a patterned paper a plain cretonne should be used. After the circles are cut, the edges are turned slightly in all around and the two circles are sewed together on the edges with invisible stiches. To finish off, stitch on a lace edge. Centerpieces can be made in this way to match any color scheme or to fit any table.

The doilies which are used on the summer porch as covers for the sandwiches, cake and pitcher of iced drinks can be most attractively weighted by beads so that they will not be carried away or misplaced by a breeze. If the doily is square, a cluster of porcelain beads fastened in each corner of the cover will be sufficient. If the doilies are embroidered colors matching the embroidery should be used. One orange and two blue beads on a blue and white doily would be most attractive. Some of the new doilies intended for this purpose have a simple crocheted edge, the beads being caught in the crocheting as the work proceeds.

Try making the new hairpin lace and using it in place of hemstitching. It is very easy to make and it lasts so much longer. Take a straight hairpin. Make a loop with thread or crochet cotton in middle of hairpin. Place crochet needle on under side of hairpin and turn hairpin. Catch thread with crochet hook and draw through loop. Then turn hairpin and place crochet needle in the loop. With crochet needle in the loop in the middle of hairpin catch loop around the hairpin. You will then have two loops of thread on crochet needle, then catch thread with the needle and pull it through the two. You will then have the one loop in middle of hairpin to start again.

If you wish to make a centerpiece mainly of leaves, try this stitch. First work an ordinary cat stitch from side to side, following the outline of the leaf. A cat stitch is a series of stitches taken from side to side between two lines. After the leaf is filled with cat stitches, take a new thread and starting up the top of the leaf, take two tight buttonhole stitches where the threads cross, then carry the thread across to the next crossed stitches on the opposite side and again take two buttonhole stitches. Work back and forth in this way until the left is filled. Cover the marked line of the leaf with Kensington outline and it is complete.

A pretty little shoulder wrap of new design will be just the thing for catch-up work this summer on the porch. The wrap is merely a knitted scarf, about 27 inches wide and long enough to stretch from wrist to wrist when the arms are extended out at the sides. When the long scarf has been completed in an ordinary loose knitting stitch, with zephyr worsted and a thread of silk to give it that brilliant effect which is so attractive in a worsted garment, the sides are attached to knitted cuffs, which are done in a ribbed stitch, so that while elastic they cling around the wrists rather closely. When the scarf is thrown around the shoulders the hands are thrust through the ribbed wristlets and one has a cozy wrap, very light, yet quite enough covering for summer evenings. These wraps are charming in pale pink, pale blue or lavender, and they are very easy to make.

With a punch make two holes in the center of the cover of your hat box so that they form a five-inch square. Then, starting on the under side of the cover, run a piece of string or ribbon through the upper left hand hole, let it enter the hole diagonally opposite; bring it through again at the upper right hand hole and across to the lower left hand hole. Tie the two ends in a knot on the wrong side and you will have a handle loose enough to slip your hand into conveniently, with the other hand free to extricate the hat from its wrappings.

Public Ownership Public Houses.

From the London Spectator

The government has decided to purchase, through the board of control, the whole of the breweries and public houses—the latter some 300 in number—in the city of Carlisle and its immediate neighborhood. It was the intention of the board to close immediately 100 redundant houses, to build as soon as possible two or three model refreshment houses, and to adapt others not now equipped for the sale of food and nonintoxicants. The purchase money is to be in cash or exchequer bonds. This experiment in state ownership will be watched with the greatest interest. We sincerely hope that in the public houses taken over the policy of disinterested management so successfully carried out by the People's Refreshment House association will be given a fair trial. That principle has been condemned on quite insufficient grounds by a combination of the trade and the temperance extremists, but in spite of that we believe it to be full of promise. If there is, as there should be, profit sharing with the salesmen in everything but intoxicants, the nonintoxicants will soon hold the front of the stage.

How To Make Mushroom Catsup.

"Mushroom catsup may be made after the following recipe," says a writer in Farm and Fireside.

"One peck mushrooms, carefully picked over, one pint vinegar, two tablespoonfuls salt, one-half teaspoonful cayenne, two tablespoonfuls mustard, one tablespoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful mace, one-half teaspoonful cloves.

"Cook the mushrooms with one cupful of water until quite tender, and rub them through a colander. Add to this pulp the vinegar and spices, and cook about half an hour longer. Bottle and seal.

"This sance is delicious with fish, steak, and cold meat."

The Two Mysteries.

We know not what it is, dear, this sleep so deep and still;
The folded hands, the awful calm, the cheek so pale and chill.
The lids that will not lift again, though we may call and call;
The strange, white solitude of peace that settles over all.

We know not what it means, dear, this desolate heart pain;
This dread to take our daily way, and walk in it again;
We know not to what other sphere the loved who leave us go,
Nor why we're left to wonder still, nor why we do not know.

But this we know: our loved and dead, if they should come this day—
Should come and ask us "What is life?" not one of us could say.
Life is a mystery as deep as ever death can be;
Yet, oh, how dear it is to us, this life we live and see.

Then might they say—these vanished ones—and blessed is the thought:
"So death is sweet to us, beloved," though we may show you naught;
We may not to the quick reveal the mystery of death.
Ye can not tell us, if ye would, the mystery of breath."

The child who enters life comes not with knowledge or intent,
So all who enter death must go as little children sent.
Nothing is known. But nearing God, what has the soul to dread?
And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

KITCHENER PATHETIC IN HIS BACHELORHOOD

London, perhaps none outside his immediate family was more grief-stricken at the news of Lord Kitchener's tragic death than Queen Alexandra. The attentiveness of the soldier to the queen-mother had long been notable, and there was a very strong bond of sympathy between these two, undoubtedly two of the loneliest figures prominent in contemporary London.

Indeed there was something pathetic in the lonely bachelorhood of the war secretary, who occasionally to his intimates dropped remarks bearing on his lack of home and near relatives. Not a week passed during the war in which he had not paid a visit to Marlborough house, where he would remain for long visits with Queen Alexandra, and come away with a long list of those compatriots of whom her friends had made special inquiries. However pressing the demands of the campaigns on the various fronts, he would always return within a few days with the desired information.

Lord Kitchener had promised to be the queen-mother's guest during the coming summer at Sandringham. He constantly had ladies to lunch at his seat in Kent, Broome Hall, near Canterbury, on Sundays, and would show them how he was developing his gardens and dilate to them on the beauties of his china. Younger women were conspicuous by their absence at these times, the guests being chiefly peeresses and experts on gardening as well as the wives of men who had served under him in various campaigns.

At York House, St. James Palace, he gave a number of dinner parties to men only, the military element being not always conspicuous at these. He liked doctors, though cared nothing for actors or musicians. Several of the higher clergy in London enjoyed his friendship and hospitality.

Lord Kitchener was personally well known to the owners of many of the more expensive curiosity shops in London. He would bargain over purchases, but did not possess the commercial sense, and in the end would always pay a good price, usually on his own initiative. The dealer generally received a check the day after delivery, the check being quite often post-dated a month or two.

TO BUILD MUSEUM OF AMERICAN INDIAN

From the New York Times.

Ground will be broken soon for the building of the Museum of the American Indian, an institution to be devoted to the solving of the great mystery of the origin of the prehistoric races of the western hemisphere.

Archer M. Huntington has given to the institution a site with a frontage of 65 feet on Broadway, just south of One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street and adjacent to the group of buildings of which the Hispanic museum is the center. The plans for the proposed museum provide for a structure with a basement and four stories, which will be in the same style as that of the building of the American Geographical society.

Friends of George G. Heye, who has gathered the notable collection which is to be placed in the structure, have subscribed $250,000 for the building, and arrangements are now being made to raise the additional $100,000 for the equipment. The collection itself, which includes 400,000 specimens, and is valued at $500,000, is to be turned over in a few days to a board of trustees, who are also to take title to the real estate. This marks the passing from private hands of one of the largest collections ever gathered by one man.

Mr. Heye has been from boyhood interested in the history of the American Indians. His decision to found a museum dedicated to the red men was formed 25 years ago when, as a college student, he spent a vacation in Arizona. There he saw many of the remains left by ancient peoples. A man of wealth, he has since that time sent out 30 expeditions to all parts of North and South America. The results of some of these expeditions proved to be of unusual scientific importance. The museum will include the best collections of Ecuadorean and West Indian ethnological and archaeological specimens in the world. Four expeditions are now in South American countries in the interest of the institution.

The arrangements for showing the collections will be on original lines now being planned. One of the most important features of the museum will be the relics from the isles of the Caribbean sea, which illuminate the history of the tribes which existed there at the time of Columbus. There are several paddles of a pattern which were pictured in works published in the days of the discoverer, but had not been seen for centuries. Several years ago two of the type were found by one of the Heye expeditions.

The collections include rare and beautiful objects in gold and marble which have never been seen by any one except a small group of scientists and friends of the founder. Many of these are of the highest artistic quality and reveal skill and civilization which cast a new light on the history of the aborigines. Among them is a sculptured bowl of white marble which connoisseurs say rivals in beauty the finest works of European or Asiatic art. Another example is a portion of a vase bearing figures in relief which suggest the work of classic antiquity. The collections include wood carvings of exceptionally artistic design.

The museum is strong in material bearing on the life stories of the Indians who had lived in the eastern part of the United States, and the collections of basketry, of head and feather and quill work are especially valuable.

STAYS HOME; MAKES FORTUNE IN COWS

In the American Magazine is the interesting story of Frank M. Jones, of Onelda county, N. Y., a farmer boy, who has become very wealthy through developing his hobby that fancy stock pays better than ordinary cattle. His father was a farmer of the old school who thought that cows were cows, and only after a bitter struggle was persuaded to sell his herd. For the price of 30 cows young Jones purchased two young heifers of excellent lineage and fed and groomed them with his own hands until they reached maturity. One of the two had a calf that was christened Pontiac Lass. When Pontiac Lass first began to yield milk it was plain that she was an extraordinary animal. Finally he asked a group of dairy experts to look her over. The result was three world's records for milk and butter. Frank Jones now has 140 animals valued at considerably more than $250,000, but Pontiac Lass still holds the championship. His cows are bovine aristocrats. Their lives are heavily insured and at the first sign of illness a veterinarian hastens to attend them. His experience is a practical demonstration of the most up-to-date dairying methods and the profits to be won from fancy stock raising. It is particularly striking when we remember that the total initial capital for the venture was not more than $1,400.

Good Reason.

During the lesson one afternoon a violent thunderstorm arose, and, to ... the fright of the children the teacher began telling of the wonders of the elements.

"And now, Jimmy," she asked, "Why is it that lightning never strikes twice in the same place?"

"Because," said Jimmy confidentially, "after it hits once the same place ain't there any more."

The annual product of the American chicken yard is estimated at $509,000,000.

Willing Worker.

An amusing incident is told which took place in one of the occupied districts of Belgium where the German occupier doles out potatoes to such of the starving people as agree to work for him. One recipient presented himself before the German authorities and declared himself quite ready in return for a supply of potatoes to work for the Germans and only for them. He seemed quite decided and genuine in his offer of work.

"Then you are quite willing to sign the declaration?" asked the German officer.

"Yes, quite willing."

"And what is your trade?"

"I am a grave digger," replied the Belgian stolidly.—London Everyman.

Tempting Fate.

It was behind the scenes of a barnstorming theatrical company.

"Macbeth Partlow is timid about appearing tonight," said one of the troupe.

"How foolish," replied another. "He shouldn't have stage fright. Why, he's been on the boards for years."

"True," replied the first speaker, "but this is the first time he was ever billed for two nights in one town."

Affected His Speech.

"My father wants a bottle of reddick," said Fanny.

"Reddick," said the drug store man, "what is that?"

"It is something you write red with."

"Then I guess you mean red ink,"

"My father said reddick, but he didn't get much sleep last night and talks kind of thick this morning, and that may be the reason."

What He Found.

"What struck you most on your visit to the prison?"

"The number of innocent men that juries have convicted."

Went With the Load.

An Irishman, having arrived in New York a few days ago, got employment with a lumber merchant. Later he was ordered to take a load of lumber some distance away. Having gone half his journey, he came to a steep hill, and while the horses were struggling to get to the top his boss happened to meet him, and seeing the horses in such a difficulty, and Pat standing on top of the load, he stopped him and exclaimed:

"Do you think the horses haven't got enough to do without hauling you up this hill?"

Pat, fixing himself more comfortably on top of the load, said:

"Is that what you stopped me for?"

Then, with a crack of his whip, Pat concluded:

"Gee up, it's a poor ship that can't carry the captain."

Making Quick Time.

Small Nellie had been to an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" matinee. After the show was over she said: "Mamma, does little Eva play again tonight?"

"Yes, dear, I suppose so," replied the mother.

"Well," continued Nellie, after a moment's thought, "I don't see how she can die and go to heaven at four o'clock and get back in time to die again at eight."

Be good to everybody and everybody will try to make a doormat of you.

Husband's Protest.

With a view to advertising his business, a certain dentist announced that he would supply artificial teeth to the first twelve aged ladies in poor circumstances who applied for them.

The earliest application on the appointed day was an elderly woman in shabby but respectable clothes, who was politely ushered into the waiting room.

Scarcely was she seated when a red-faced old man came to the place and announced that he had come about them teeth."

"You are making a mistake," the dentist replied. "I only made my offer to ladies. In fact, there's only a lady waiting now."

"Ay, an' it's about 'er I've come," retorted the old man, gruffly. "Well, 'er 'er 'usband's waitin' for 'er, and if she don't 'op out quick, there'll be trouble. She's got a happetite like a 'orse already, and if you set 'er up with a lot of teeth, she'll eat both me an' 'er into the work'us in a week. Send 'er out at once!"—London Tit-Bits.

An Old Trick.

"Shakespeare says that the fault is not in our stars if we are underlings."

"You bet it is. Who ever heard of a star's giving anybody else a chance at the spotlight?"

For a man to make a woman happy during courtship is much easier than it is for him to make good after marriage.

For Ten—

A package of New Post Toasties provides servings for ten people—a delicious breakfast dish—corn flakes with new form and new flavour.

New Post Toasties are known by tiny bubbles raised on each flake by the quick, intense heat of the new process of manufacture.

They bear the full, true flavour of prime, white Indian corn, not found in corn flakes of the past; and they are not "chaffy" in the package; and they don't mush down when milk or cream is added, like ordinary corn flakes.

Try some dry—a good way to test the flavour, but they are usually served with rich milk or cream—

THE KING'S GREAT RECORD

What is the life of a King? Since the registered stock seven passenger eight cylinder King made its recent record breaking Car Owners Service Test on the Sheepshead Bay Motor Speedway and the highways of Long Island there has been speculation as to just what the maximum durability of a King may be. Without a motor stop for 10,850 miles and no adjustment or replacement of any kind, any answer to this question must be purely acedemic.

When the engine of the King eight, which made the remarkable record, was taken down, at the conclusion of the trial, no appreciable wear could be located anywhere. The cylinders showed no perceptible wear, the bearings were perfectly tight, the rear axle unit was just as good as when it left the shop.

No one would of dreamed, it is said, that the mechanism had just travelled almost 11,000 miles with the engine turning up 1,356 r. p. m. The crankshaft had make 27,344,713 revolutions and the wheels had gone around just 6,434,050 times. The total piston travelled amounted to 182,046,400 feet, while the ignition system had supplied 10[illegible],378,852 sparks, or 5,424 sparks each minute of the run The total amount of air consumed by the engine on the long grind was 2,705,622,529 cubic inches, which is enough to give every man, woman and child in the United States several deep lungsfull of ozone. While all this was happening in the mechanism proper, the diaphragm of the Carter fuel feed tank made 27,344 713 impulses.

A piece of mechanism that can give such astonishing service totals as [illegible] very trying conditions it is [illegible] might very well go on indefinitely Not one of the parts showed wear This should be extremely satisfactory to the manufacturers of the vehicle, for it is a mechanical axiom that a perfect piece of machinery would fail in all its parts at once, like the one horse chaise On its showing in the fourteen day trial and its form after that [illegible] was finished, the makers of this remarkable car have every right to claim that six or eight years of running would be almost inevitable for the King eight. Sold by Henry Lau & Son, the King and Oakland dealers.

REV. WASSER BREAKS OUT AGAIN

Rev. Wasser is heard from down in Nebraska. He writes a letter to the Register and Leader, scoring candidate Harding, saying that he had been at one time pastor of the Morningside M. E. church and Mr. Harding was one of his flock, and urges the good people of Iowa not to vote for Mr. Harding. If the letter doesn't have any more weight and influence in other localities in the state than it will have in Clear Lake, a former charge of the reverend gentleman, his words and advice fall with a dull thud.

A few years ago Rev. Wasser was pastor of the M. E. Church in Clear Lake. He didn't last long. He had scarcely got acquainted before he began to "tune up." He started in to have the affairs of the town run according to his ideas and plan promulgated There was a good sized row stirred up and things boiled for a little time and the reverend gentleman was not wanted long in Clear Lake. He went to Estherville, lasting a year there He'll keep going.—Clear Lake Mirror.

PAYS TO LIME ALFALFA

When the alfalfa was harvested recently on the six experiment plots in Hardin county, the two that had been treated with lime and inoculated cut 945 pounds, while two untreated plots treated with inoculation alone, according to a report from County Agent Ben H. TIRE TROUBLES COSTLY

Study of Instruction Book Will Aid in Avoiding The

Tires cost the auto owner money for a mile of driving gasoline at the present high says the engineering extension mobile expert at Iowa State Because of this, a car owner should know enough about the way it should be repaired so that he can it himself in case of emergency know whether the repairs he or somene else to do are made as they should be.

If a puncture has been found by means of putting the tire in water, the tire should be thoroly dry before it is inserted in the casing. The rubber must be thoroly cleaned and puncture before a patch is applied The foreign material which coats inner tube may be rubbed off with piece of waste or a cloth dampened with gasoline, Cementless or self sticking patches are easy to apply Much trouble with the work of keeping the inner tubes in good working order could be ovoided by reading instruction book carefully

Woman to Drive Auto Racer at State Fair

WHILE the privilege of the ballot is as yet denied women by a narrow margin, the right to do anything and everything else is graciously accorded them. The great world of business welcomed them long ago. They are an important factor in sports of all kinds from tiddleywinks to baseball. One of the most enterprising and successful trainers of race horses at the Iowa State Fair track this summer is a woman. She not only fits them for the contests, but actually drives them in all their races. Miss Ruth Law will demonstrate the ability of the "weaker sex" in the perilous pastime of aviation at the coming state fair, and Miss Elfreida Mais will take part in the auto races, which will occupy two days of the speed program.

Miss Mais has won numerous racing events, racing both men and members of her own sex. She comes to Iowa with a well earned reputation for courage and skill as a race driver that will make the mere men drivers very respectful of her as a competitor. In her race at Des Moines she will drive a Mais Special, which was built by Miss Mais and her brother for the Indianapolis Speedway races in 1915. The lady drove this car a mile over the dirt track at Springfield in 59 seconds, phenomenal time for an ordinary mile oval. On a regular auto speedway she has driven at the rate of 100 miles an hour. Miss Mais is an enthusiast in the sport of auto racing and has a wagon load of cups and trophies won as proof of her ability as a driver. It is said the lady detests housework—there are others—but is always ready to don her big work apron and tinker with a car and does practically all her own repair work.

DRAWING THE LONG BOW

Parents of young men who are serving in the National Guard regiments on the border are much concerned over some lurid tales of supposed hardships which have been told and written by certain sensational newspaper correspondents and disgruntled soldiers.

That the relatives and friends of those at the front should be guilty of sending out such ridiculous reports to worry and alarm the people "back home" is inconceivable. Yet it is a fact.

One story that is being spread is to the effect that the men are half starved. Let us dissect this story.

The government issues a stated amount of rations to each man each day. Here is one day's allowance per man:

1¼ pounds of fresh meat.
1 pound and 2 ounces of fresh bread, or its equivalent in flour. One-eight of an ounce of baking powder.
Two and four tenths ounces of navy beans, or rice or hominy.
1¼ pounds of potatoes; or part potatoes, part onions, part tomatoes, or other fresh vegetables,
One and twenty-eight hundreths ounces of prunes, or dried apples, or peaches, or jam.
One and twelve-hundreths ounces of coffee, or tea.
Three and one-tenths ounces of sugar.
One-half ounce of evapoated milk.
Sixteen-hundreths of a gill of vinegar, or pickles. Sixty-four hundreths of an ounce of salt.
Four-hundreths of an ounce of pepper.
Sixty-four hundreths of an ounce of lard.
Five-tenths of an ounce of butter.
In addition they get syrup, flavoring extracts and spices, ice for preserving persishable goods, coal and wood for cooking purposes.

A splendid field range is furnished each company for cooking, and every facility is provided for their needs and welfare.

The soldiers of the regular army are recieving exactly the same allowance as the soldiers of the National Guard, yet never a murmur is heard from the regulars.

It is but just, however, to the great mass of National Guard troops to state that the kicking generally comes from a class of men who are never satisfied, no matter how much they recieve.

If there are any parents and friends of soldiers in this vicinity they should not be alarmed. The government supplies all the men require in food, the surgeons are doing their utmost in sanitary measures, and the authorities are straining every nerve to preserve the health and morals of the troops.

Sensational newspaper reports and letters coming in from the border should be read with unlimited reserve, and salt should be sprinkled upon every line.

Writing in the Rock Island Employers' Magazine recently, D. B. Sebastian discloses a number of interesting facts regarding the huge coal consumption of this representative American railroad, as well as the vast opportunities for economy and and careful methods of handling in this branch of railroading. He says that the Rock Island railroad annually requires approximately 100,000 cars of coal to operate its trains. The fuel bill for the year 1915 was $6,531,592. One shovelful of coal saved out of each 10 shovelfuls, which is not a difficult or impossible achievement in view of the existing wasteful methods of firing locomotives, would effect an annual saving of $653,159.20 without impairing in any way the efficiency of the railroad.

There exists a dry cleaning establishment in Cincinnati, Ohio, that gives its employes music at frequent intervals, with the object of speeding up the workers. There are some 300 workers in the plant, and the firm has bought a sufficient number of phonographs to provide music for them all. It is reported that in the pressing room the girls swing their irons over the work to the tune of popular marches and songs, and that much of the monotony of the work is eliminated by the music. The manager of the plant says his novel idea in industrial efficiency originated in South America.

In India the coolies are recruited by licensed agents throughout Bengal, the united provinces, the central provinces, the southern Punjab and Ajimir. The supply varies greatly, depending in large degree on agricultural conditions in India, but it is estimated that 10,000 a year is an average figure. Of these, only about 6,000 return to India at the end of the contract period, the rest settling in the countries to which they are sent. Thus there were in Natal in 1910 more than 60,000 "free" Indians, while in Mauritius 70 per cent of the total population is Indian born or of Indian descent.

A remarkable collection of old pianos, European and American, including a number of examples dating from the latter part of the Eighteenth century, has been presented to the United States National museum by Hugo Worch, of Washington, D. C. Seventy instruments have been thus far turned over to the museum, and to this collection will be added several hundred photographs, showing every phase of the pianoforte industry prior to 1850, making a unique assemblage of material on this subject.

It is stated that four new Canadian cables have recently been laid in Passamaquoddy bay and the Bay of Fundy. These cables start from Eastport, Me., and connect with Deer Island, Grand Manan and Campobello, all belonging to Canada. Some points on these islands have telephonic connection with Eastport and thence to points in Canada and the United States, and one of the new cables is for the telephone service.

IOWA MEN ARRESTED FOR CAMP BEGGING; COMPLAIN OF FOOD

Oskaloosa Men Will Be Court Martialed—Others Say Food Is First Class.

Brownsville, Tex., July 29.—Men from the Third Iowa went about the streets of Brownsville last night saying they had been without food for five days and begging money with which to buy some.

Two members of Company H, of Oskaloosa, accused of begging, are to be court martialed. They are Dell Eastman and F. Townsend, both of Oskaloosa.

A trooper of the Illinois cavalry arrested the men after they had obtained some money from a group of citizens and gone into a saloon, the trooper said.

The prisoners were locked up in the guard house at Fort Brown and were delivered under guard to Colonel Bennett.

A summary court is to be called to consider the case. Lieutenant Colonel Tinley will preside. The men are in the Third's guard house.

Other members of Company H say the food is good and plenty. Here is today's menu:

Dinner—Steak and brown gravy, mashed potatoes, iced tea and bread.

Supper — Corned beef hash, stewed prunes, beans, coffee, bread and butter.

Breakfast—Fried bacon and potatoes, syrup, bread, butter and coffee.

The extreme penalty for begging is three months.

Seven reports of soldiers begging were about the streets. It is believed this is due to the fact they have not had a payday.

By requiring Company A, of Winterset, to work in addition to guard duty, the Third regiment camp was cleaned up.

A stiff drilling program starts tomorrow. The men on guard duty are sentries for two hours then get four hours rest. During "rest" period the men used axes and picks.

The Second Iowa is in camp after a hard day. The Second and Third battalions reached camp at 2 p. m.

The Iowa engineers and Battery A of the artillery arrived this afternoon. The other batteries are expected during the night.

MURDERED HIS MOTHER.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., July 29—Following a fire Thursday which destroyed the farm home of William Glime, near Shellsburg, the bodies of Mrs. Glime, and Clark Grime, her 22-year-old son, were found among the ruins. It is believed the woman was murdered. An investigation is in progress.

Further search in the ruins disclosed that a shotgun and a rifle both had been discharged. Examination of the badly charred remains indicated death was caused by gunshot wounds. The young man at one time was an inmate of a hospital for the insane at Independence. Surviving members of the family agree with officials that he killed his mother, set fire to the house and shot himself.

JURY HOLDS TWO.

Oskaloosa, Ia., July 29.—The coroner's jury impaneled to investigate the death by drowning in Skunk river of Frank C Lewis last Monday, created a sensation here this evening by recommending that Charles Olson and Charley Berkley, who were companions of Lewis at the time of the accident, be held to the grand jury.

In the opinion of the coroner's jury, Lewis came to his end feloniously. The jury says that the deceased was either pushed or thrown into the river.

The coroner's investigation occupied the greater part of the day. Evidence was offered to show that members of the party had been drinking. Olson and Berkley have been under arrest since Wednesday morning.

Council Bluffs, Ia., July 29.—An action was begun in federal court here yesterday by United States District Attorney Claude R. Porter against the Rock Island railroad and Jacob M. The specific instance charged in this action occurred, the petition states, on April 1 and 2, 1916, when the company worked Conductor E. E. Black and Trainmen J. A. Steber and Robert Redrick in excess of the 16 hours permitted by the statute.

GINNELL IS ON TRIAL FOR INCITING IRISH

London, July 28.—Speeches which he had made to prisoners, describing them as martyrs, and demonstrations held by the prisoners when he visited them, were given as the reasons by the crown attorney why Laurence Ginnell, Irish nationalist member of parliament for northwest Meath, had been refused permission to visit Irish prisoners in England, when hearing of the charge against him of attempting to gain admission into the Knutsford barracks was resumed in the Bow street police court today.

The crown attorney said that when Ginnell visited the Irish prisoners at Stafford, he told them they had done more for the Irish cause than anybody else and that they were looked upon as martyrs. On a similar visit to the prisoners at Wandsworth there was a disturbance among the prisoners, who carried Ginnell around on their shoulders. He was arrested July 15.

Mr. Ginnell yesterday caused a short suspension of the sitting in the house of commons when he refused to withdraw when ordered to do so by the speaker.

IOWA BOYS GUESTS OF ST. LOUIS FOLK; LUNCH AT STATION

Von Hoffman and Others Hand Out 1,000 Lunches and Soft Drinks.

St. Louis, Mo., July 29.—In a half hour after he had been informed that two battalions of the First regiment infantry of the Iowa national guard were to pass through St. Louis, Albert von Hoffman, manager of the National Telephone Directory company, had more than 1,000 box lunches and 40 cases of soft drinks on ice waiting for the troops when they arrived in two trains. Society women assisted.

Von Hoffman said he would pay for the box lunches, which cost 25 cents apiece.

They Were Hungry, Too.

The boys gave many cheers for Von Hoffman in their appreciation of the "treat" which was the first the Iowa militiamen had been given since they left Camp Dodge, near Des Moines, Ia. The Iowa troops are bound for Brownsville, Tex.

In the First regiment there are 1372 men. Von Hoffman said he would have fed all of them but the First battalion of nearly 400 men went through St. Louis early yesterday morning before he had been informed of their arrival.

Von Hoffman had trouble in getting the trainmen to wait until he had finished feeding the soldiers. The train conductor said he had orders to wait but 20 minutes. Von Hoffman got in touch with higher officials with the aid of Major Utley and the troop trains waited an hour and a half, the men lining up along their coaches until they were fed.

PLAGUE SPREADS.

Des Moines, Ia., July 29.—State officials yesterday received a report that there are five cases of infantile paralysis in Mason City. This brings the total number of cases of this disease in Iowa to 19.

Previous to yesterday the state board of health had received no reports from Mason City. There were rumors that the disease had gained a foothold in that city, but nothing definite was known. It is said that no deaths have resulted so far.

Mason City was hit hardest in 1910 by the epidemic of infantile paralysis. At that time Cerro Gordo county had 76 cases, of which 60 were in Mason City. There were a number of deaths.

The officials do not explain why the new appearance of this disease was not promptly reported to the state. It is believed that the cases have been handled in a way to prevent an epidemic from developing at Mason City.

The state officials are watching 12 other points in the state where there are cases of this disease. At Ames, where two cases developed Monday, it is believed that the disease has been checked and that there wil be no new cases. At Ottumwa, where two cases were reported, there has been no spread of the disease.

NEBRASKA NEEDS RAIN.

Lincoln, Neb., July 29.—Unless rain falls in Nebraska this week the corn crop will have suffered millions of dollars of damage, according to W. R. Mellor, secretary of the state board of agriculture, who is making a survey of the situation. With the temperatures between 90 and 95 throughout the state today and a wind, hot in some sections, blowing from the southwest, the situation is anything but promising, according to the secretary. On the other hand, rain this week, or early next week, with cooler weather, would mean millions of dollars added to the corn crop, he said. The government weather bureau directors see little hope of rain in the next few days. For several days there has not been a cloud in the sky over a large part of the state.

Fort Dodge, July 29.—"It is time to pass the apples again," said Rev. W. H. Spence in a strong denunciation of the lack of modesty in women's dress. Rev. He said after Eve had eaten of the apples, she felt the need of clothes and he thinks there should be another eating of apples to recall the modern Eve to a sense of decency.

BOY BECOMES HERO, RESCUES COMPANION FROM WATERY GRAVE

Wesley Glasgow, Aged 11, Succeeds Where Man Fails—Victim Revives.

Shenandoah, Ia., July 28.—Wesley Glasgow, 11 years old, put his ability and strength to use last night when he dived to the bottom of the water and brought up Ralph Maranville, 16 years old, who had gone down for the third time. A physician revivew him when he was taken from the water.

Gene Bradley, a traveling salesman for a live stock powder company, jumped into the water with clothes on, in an effort to save the struggling youth. He was pulled under the water in the struggle and forced to turn loose.

The young boy, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Maranville, was warned by M. E. Beach, proprietor, not to go beyond the ropes if he could not swim. While playing with a barrel, the boy was carried past the rope and when he found that he was in deep water became frightened and turned loose.

Mason City, Ia., July 28.—The $40,000 sewage disposal plant east of the city will soon be completed and will give to Mason City one of the most efficient means of disposing of refuse in this part of the country. The sewage is brought to the plant through the sewer mains where it is placed in one of the filter beds. The solids dry out and the liquids seep through and run into the septic tank where it is consumed and rendered odorless.

The incinerator plant erected for the consuming of dry garbage was constructed at a cost of $8,000, and it is practically completed. The garbage is carried into the building on lateral elevators and emptied into the furnace. As yet no method of collecting garbage has been selected by city officials, but this will be arranged later.

MISSOURI LASSIES GIVE "PLEASE WRITE" NOTES TO SOLDIERS

Iowa Boys Obey Instructions —Militiamen Find Entertainment En Route.

Headquarters Train, Third Iowa Infantry, July 27.—At the union station in St. Joseph, a pretty and romantic maiden floated by the train. Quite frequently she tossed a slip of paper into an open window. It was seized by a waiting youth in khaki. The maiden hurried on, a bit abashed and flustered.

Each slip carried the name and address of a St. Joseph girl and an invitation to the Iowa boys to "please write."

The invitations were accepted. The boys immediately mobilized paper and pen, and who knows what the outcome will be?

There were people at every station to wave greeting to the troops. Delegations appeared at the depots with flags at stations where the train did not stop and waved "Hello" and "Goodbye."

The boys played cards. They sang favorite parodies on popular songs. They wrote home to mother, wife and sweetheart. There were a score of letters at each station to be mailed. Some of the troopers slipped musical instruments on the train. These hummed and twanged now and then. Veterans of the Spanish war swapped yarns of the Philippines. Prospective veterans of the Mexican campaign gathered around to listen. And some of the stories were quite original.

The soldiers are traveling on tourist sleepers. Three men occupy a section, two having the lower berth and one the upper. Every company has its own kitchen car. The camp stoves are set up on a carpet of cinders and the stove pipes run out through the open doors. Meals are brought to the soldiers in their seats. They are given two heavy and one light meal each day.

AUTO IN FREAK ACT.

Fort Dodge, Ia., July 27.—One of the strangest of the many accidents that marred Sunday, July 23, happened when the big car driven by George Wright, of Eagle Grove, ran backwards into the Thompson clothing store. A big plate glass window was smashed and the car not only made the small jump from the paving to the sidewalk, but, with eight passengers, leaped from the sidewalk to the floor of the show window, a distance of about 12 inches. It came with such force that cases backed against the window in the store were pushed into the middle of the room. The falling glass ripped the cover of the auto, but not one of the passengers was even slightly injured.

The contract has already been let for about 30 miles, which is to be completed this year. Prof T. R. Agg, road expert of Iowa State college and F. R. White, road engineer of the state highway commission, were in the county recently and made an examination of 19 pits within the county, from which the gravel is to be taken.

DICKENS—Dr. French, wife and baby and another Mrs. French were injured when an auto in which they were riding went into a ditch last night two and one-half miles west of Dickens on the Spencer road. The baby died in a short time. The doctor's wife is quite low, and the other Mrs. French is badly injured. Dr. French escaped with a severe shake up.

DUBUQUE—A large hay and horse barn on the farm of the Trappist monks near their monastery, 12 miles southwest of Dubuque, was destroyed by fire caused by lightning last night. A valuable stallion, some machinery and 150 tons of hay recently harvested were destroyed. The total loss is about $30,000, partially covered by insurance.

WAR ISSUE LOOMS BIG IN GREEK ELECTIONS

Athens, Monday, July 24, (via London, July 25).—For the purpose of counteracting the widespread effect of the formation of anti-Venizelos leagues among the demobilized Greek reservists, adherents of former Premier Venizelos this morning launched a similar nationwide opposition league of which the former war minister Panytos P. Danglis, chief of staff during the first Balkan war, was elected president.

There is undisguised uneasiness in entente circles as to the possible consequences of employing the army for political purposes by both sides in the approaching electoral campaign.

CUMMINS TO ATTEND.

Washington, D. C., July 25.—Senator and Mrs. Cummins will go to New York the end of this week and will attend the Hughes notification Monday. Senator Kenyon expects to attend. A number of the republicans of the Iowa delegation in the House and a large share of republicans in congress will go.

LOCKJAW, RESULT OF BLOW, PROVES FATAL

Chicago, July 25.—William A. Ulrey, aged 15, is dead at his home here today as the result of lockjaw from wounds said to have been incurred when he was struck down with a pair of heavy grass shears at the Saddle and Cycle club, about a week ago. Nicholas Moga, a gardener, has been ordered held to the grand jury on charges of manslaughter. Ulrey died yesterday.

40 DEATHS; MANY ARE STRICKEN BY GREAT HEAT WAVE

Crops Endangered By Terrific Temperature—Whole Country Sweltering—Suffering Is Intense.

HUMIDITY VERY MARKED

"Bermuda High" Blamed For Atmospheric Conditions—No Relief Is In Sight, the Weather Bureau Says.

Washington, July 28—With 40 known dead and scores of prostrations, crops valued at millions of dollars endangered and intense suffering reported throughout the country, today gives promise of breaking the heat record for the summer. There is no relief in sight according to the weather bureau, and inestimable loss of life and great damage to growing crops are feared.

Total heat casualties for yesterday compiled today follow:

Chicago	...
St. Louis	...
Minneapolis	...
Columbus	...

Blame "Bermuda High."

Washington weather bureau experts attribute the present heat wave to the influence of what is termed a "Bermuda High," meaning that a great area of high pressure air has gathered over the Atlantic off Bermuda and has come let go with its full power, sweeping the United States from the seaboard to the Rockies.

For weeks it has stood like a solid wall against heated currents, trying vainly to move out from the interior over the ocean, and now, as it swings rapidly along, it is gathering heat and moisture from the tropics and sweeping them northward over the continent in the vacuum of so called "low pressure areas," although its greatest intensity has not yet struck the Pacific coast, it is expected to do so within the next few days.

No relief is promised from the phenomena which in the east has caused sweltering city dwellers to light out in their homes to dry out the humidity or which, in the Mississippi valley, is threatening to destroy millions of dollars worth of food crops. Chief Forecaster Frankenfield said that the heat wave only had begun. It is certain to continue through the week and probably longer.

No Relief in Sight.

None of the conditions essential to a breakup are yet evident. The relief which often comes from the northwest is nowhere in sight. During all the month Forecaster Frankenfield said the huge body of high pressure atmosphere has been gathering over the western Atlantic from Bermuda to Newfoundland and east to the Azores. It is very heavy in weight and tremendous in dimensions. Heavy air always flows to a place occupied by light air, but unfortunately there is at present an era of light air in the tropics. When the heavy air arrives there it finds there is still lighter air over the continent. So it moves north in an enormous sweep, burning hot from the tropics and heavily laden with moisture borne humidity.

The air in the middle west is becoming much heavier and it may form a local center where the air currents will clash in a series of thunderstorms affording speedy relief through a readjustment of the areas of high pressure.

LIGHT FIRES TO DRY HOMES.

New York, July 28.—A combination of heat and excessive humility today enveloped New York in the atmosphere of a Turkish bath. Only once, in July 1896, has the humidity been higher than the record reached yesterday. The air, even when the sun was shining fiercely, seemed fairly to ooze moisture. It took the starch out of linen, the shape out of straw hats and the energy out of everybody.

The thermometer and hydrometer moved upward together, the former registering 85. The humidity was the culmination of a fortnight of similar weather that has caused New Yorkers more than the usual discomfort that accompanies July heat.

Householders complain of mildew and many have built the furnace fires to dry their homes. Merchants and manufacturers dealing in commodities affected by dampness, report damage to their goods.

WOODEN SHOES SOON FOR AMERICA, CLAIM

Dealers Say Leather Famine In United States Is Threatening Supply.

Chicago, July 29.—"This country in the throes of a leather famine. Unless the world develops a substitute for leather within two years America will be the next 'wooden shoe' nation. Shoes will cost $10 a pair high legged boots will be a luxury beyond the reach of all save millionaires, and the people will wear wooden shoes, sandals or go barefooted."

These were declarations made by delegates to the Illinois Shoe Retailers association at Hotel La Salle. It was the first annual session and grew out of the necessity of organizing shoe dealers to meet unprecedented conditions of famine and arrested supplies both now and in the future.

Lincoln, Neb., July 28.—Candidates for political offices nominated at the primary election, who are members of the national guard on the border, will in no way jeopardized their legal status by going to the border as guardsmen, according to a ruling by Attorney General Reed, of Nebraska, today. The names will remain on the ballot and they will be voted for in a regular way at the election.

AGED WOMAN KILLED.

Geneva, Ill., July 28.—Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Simms, an elderly couple of Pocatello, Ida., were struck by a train on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad last night. Mrs. Simms was killed. Her husband sustained bruises.

RITISH CAPTURE DELVILLE FOREST IN GREAT BATTLE

mous Brandenburger Troops Routed From Wood In a Struggle Described as Veritable Hell.

RTILLERY FIRE INTENSE

ntested Sector of Ground Finally Occupied—Gun Play Exceeds All Previous Bombardments.

London, July 29.—British troops have ptured Delville wood in its entirety, e British official statement announced this afternoon. The German sition in the Somme region had been fended by the Brandenburg regiment, which was driven out.

The British statement says:

"After severe fighting we have iven the enemy from the Delville ood, capturing three officers and 158 en.

"The whole wood now is in our hands d two German counter attacks have en beaten off with heavy losses to e enemy. We made further progress Longueval village and near Pozieres, d in the latter area was captured wounded Germans.

"Last night the enemy's guns were tive against our new positions and ere were heavy artillery duels in vaous sectors of the battle area.

"Near Nueva Chapelle small parties Germans succeeded in entering our ont trenches at two points, but imediately were driven out by a counter attack, leaving a few wounded in ur hands.

"Northeast of Souchez and at several other points our artillery shelled he enemy's front line and communication trenches."

With the British Army in the Field, uly 23.—(via London.)—The British ent after Delville wood again today nd took it.

The Germans had been quiet because the British made no infantry attack but all the while the machine guns ad been rattling and the artillery had ept up a thunderous drumbeat in what efore this offensive would have been eferred to as a violent artillery duel o commonplace has the continual ombardment become that one officer hose post of duty is with the transort just out of the range of the shells, omplains, that he is awakened when ere is a lull at night.

This morning the British put on Delille wood the heaviest concentration of hell fire in a given area ever directed gainst a field fortification. Even the unners were amazed when they comuted its volume per minute in preparng the way for the infantry. Counting he front a good 1,000 yards there must ave been three shells per minute, falling on every yard.

The purpose was to leave nothing tanding—nothing living. Not a single erman sniper in a tree, not a single erman machine gun but was to be put ut of order by a tornado of lasts. Delville wood has left Trones wood with lame reputation. The infantry of both ides there have no dugouts their only rotection is shallow trenches such as re dug in open field operations. A shell hich tears a hole among the roots of tree killing a man makes some protection for his neighbor who survives the ecent.

Fight Hand to Hand.

Snipers and machine guns watch for any head that shows itself. Patrols which go out in the night engage in hand to hand encounters. The flash of a bursting shell may reveal one patrol to another and give it the advantage.

The British had nearly all of the Delville wood after the advance of July 14, but the Germans got an enfilade machine gun and shell fire on them and took possession of the middle of the wood. But the British kept the southern end of the wood and the adjoining village of Longueval against repeated attacks, raking the Germans with machine gun and shell fire.

When the infantry advanced this morning they did not expect to recover all the wood, but before the charge had finished, they had taken all except about an acre of the northern end.

The troops engaged around Longueval and Delville wood, where the fighting exceeds in ferocity anything yet seen in the offensive, have been both hardened regiments and new army battalions. The new army men, fresh from the English drill grounds, when put into this "hell's crucible" have shown the same racial stubbornness as the regulars.

NEW PRESIDENT OF CHINA IS POPULAR

Li Yuan-Hung Goes About Unattended—Military Spirit Is Lacking.

Peking, July 28.—Li Yuan-Hung's accession to the presidency has worked a wonderful change in China. The whole spirit of public life in Peking has been altered. Democracy seems to have come into its own again. The new president lives informally at his palace outside the Forbidden city and drives about Peking in an automobile with only two soldiers to guard him.

Chinese of all factions have a high personal regard for Li Yuan-Hung, and his life seems to be in no danger. He moves about at will, and conducts himself in a manner which would have been wholly impossible for Yuan Shi-Kai. The lamented president seldom left the palace and was believed to be in danger even within its protecting walls. He was a man of iron, and had ruled by military power and by that alone. Consequently he had many bitter enemies and few warm personal friends. Even his closest advisers admired him more for his power than for any personal charm.

PLAN NOTIFICATION.

Chicago, July 28.—Plans for the notification ceremonies on August 8, which J. Frank Hanly and Dr. Ira C. Landrith are to be made aware that they were nominated for president and vice president respectively by the prohibition party, were completed today and announced by the party's national committee.

Muscovites Again Break Through Teutonic Lines

Terrific Fighting Reported In Southern Volhynia and at Baranovichi, In the Pinsk Region—Russian Initiative Gains Armies Some Successes.

Berlin, July 29, (wireless to Sayville) Attacks by two Russian corps on German positions, east of Gorodische in the Baranovichi region, were delivered yesterday, but failed to gain ground, the war office announced today. The battle is still in progress.

The Russians have resumed their attack southeast of Vladimir Volynski in southern Volhynia and succeeded in penetrating General Von Linsingen's lines northeast of Svinuchy, but are being vigorously counter attacked by the Germans.

Petrograd (via London) July 29.—Russian troops continue to advance successfully against the Teutons in the region of the river Stonevaka and the river Boldarovka in southern Volhynia, the Russian official statement announces today.

The Russian statement says:

Western front. In the district of Krevo an enemy aeroplane, hit by enemy fire, fell in the enemy lines. Northeast and southeast of Baranovichi there are artillery duels and engagements between advance guards. We made small advances at some points. In the region of the river Stonevka and the river Boldurvka our advance continues successfully.

SENDS RADIO REPORT FROM AN AEROPLANE

Messages Are Sent 230 Miles And Heard Clearly By Receivers.

San Diego, Cal., July 29.—American military aviators expressed gratification today over the achievement of Capt. Clarence Culver of the signal corps aviation school here, in sending a radio message from an aeroplane at 10-minute intervals during a flight yesterday to Santa Monica and return. The distance covered was about 230 miles.

Lieut. W. A. Robertson, who handled the receiving instruments here, said that every message from Captain Culver was recorded in the telephone receiver with amazing clearness.

Accompanying Captain Culver's machine were four military aeroplanes, piloted by students of the military training school, the flight being a part of the tests the students are undergoing to obtain the rank of junior military aviator.

SHOT FOR TRYING TO SINK PLUNGER

Captain of British Merchant Ship Who Tried to Ram Submarine Captured By Germans and Executed.

Berlin, July 29 (by wireless to Sayville).—Capt. Charles Fryatt, of the Great Eastern railway steamship Brussels, which vessel was captured by German destroyers last month and taken into Zeebrugge, has been executed by shooting after trial before a German courtmartial. The death sentence was passed upon Captain Fryatt because of his alleged action in attempting previously to ram a German submarine.

Testimony was adduced at the courtmartial to show that when Captain Fryatt did not belong to the armed forces, he had attempted on March 28, 1915, while near the Maas lightship to ram the German submarine U-33. Captain Fryatt and the first officer and the first engineer of the Brussels received from the British admiralty good watches for "brave conduct and were mentioned in the house of commons.

The submarine U-33, according to the official account of the trial, had signalled to the British steamer to show her flag and to stop, but Captain Fryatt did not heed and, it is alleged, turned at high speed toward the submarine which escaped only by diving several yards below the surface.

Captain Fryatt the official statement says, admitted that he had followed the instructions of the British admiralty. Sentence was confirmed and the captain was executed and shot for a "fractireur crime against armed German sea forces.

The trial was held at Bruges, Belgium, yesterday.

When captured by German torpedo boats, June 24, Captain Fryatt was piloting the steamship Brussels from Rotterdam to Tilbury.

Several German warships dashed out of the naval base at Zeebrugge and escorted the Brussels back to the Belgian harbor.

The ship carried an all British crew of 44 men.

Dutch newspapers said it was generally believed the capture of the Brussels was brought about by a passenger who said he was an American, but who was believed to be a German. This man was said to have made signals to the German warships.

VIOLATED LAW, CHARGE.

Washington, July 28.—Germany's execution of Captain Charles Fryatt, master of the British steamship Brussels for an alleged attempt to ram a submarine is viewed in allied quarters here as a brutal violation of international law likely to result in prompt retaliatory measures by Great Britain. They contend that if a hostile submarine approached the Brussels it was in effect an attack and Captain Fryatt in making a counter attack by attempting to ram subjected himself only to treatment as a prisoner of war in event of capture.

Reprisals by the allies, it is feared, might be followed by a change in the German submarine policy, which has been satisfactory to the United States since the last assurances that merchant ships would not be attacked without warning or without provision for safety of passengers and crews.

ED WALSH SAVES TWO GIRLS FROM DROWNING

Chicago, July 28.—Ed Walsh, of the Chicago White Sox, last night turned life saver and rescued two drowning girls from the lake. Afterward he declined to talk about his act, and said he did not even know the names of the girls. The rescue took place at a hotel beach, where Walsh had just dived from a raft, which some one a moment later overturned, throwing its occupants into the water. Walsh heard the appeals for help from the girls and brought them safely to shore.

AUSTRIA WILLING TO ASSIST POLES

Consents to Let American Relief Supplies Enter the Territory Occupied By Her Armies.

Washington, D. C., July 28.—Informal assurances that Austria-Hungary is disposed to respond favorably to President Wilson's personal appeal for permission of American relief supplies to points in territory held by Austrian forces have been given personally by Foreign Minister Burian to Ambassador Penfield.

The state department also received today from Ambassador Page the British foreign office statement of Great Britain's willingness to permit importations of food stuffs into Poland to be administered by a commission appointed by President Wilson, provided the German and Austrian occupying armies would not seize or remove products of the occupied territory. The condition, it is feared may block the negotiations.

Mr. Penfield reported today that he delivered personally to Count von Burian, on July 26, President Wilson's plea in behalf of famine stricken Poles and that the foreign minister promised to deliver the president's plea immediately to Emperor Francis Joseph. The minister's unofficial opinion was that the request of the president would be met by Austria and Germany. Ambassador Penfield was told by the foreign minister that Austria was addressing authorities in one third of Russian Poland and that famine conditions there have been greatly ameliorated in recent months by good crops and management.

The British communication previously published in part concludes with the statement that if the proposal is to be put in operation successfully no time must be lost as the new harvest is coming on and must be placed in neutral control.

ALLEGED LEADERS OF PLOT SEIZED

San Francisco Police Claim T. J. Mooney Is Head of Gang Which Blew Preparedness Parade.

San Francisco, Cal., July 29.—Thomas J. Mooney, a labor agitator sought by police in connection with the preparedness parade bomb explosion, was in custody today, as was also his wife. The police assert that they have evidence to establish Mooney as the leader of a gang responsible for the explosion. They are proceeding on the theory that the bomb was intended primarily for a body of United Car Men that marched in the parade. Recently Mooney made an unsuccessful effort to incite the carmen to strike.

Efforts were continued today by the police to fasten the crime of placing and exploding the bomb on Warren K. Billings, an ex-convict who has been identified by a girl as a man she saw on a roof near the scene of the tragedy shortly before the explosion, and who carried a suitcase similar to the one in which the bomb is believed to have been concealed.

An infernal machine found recently by United Railroads detectives investigating the dynamiting of the company's power lines is believed by the police to be a product of the same school that fashioned the bomb which exploded last Saturday. It too was concealed in a suitcase.

CASEMENT ABANDONS BATTLE FOR APPEAL

Appellate Court Told Case Will Not Be Taken to House of Lords.

London, July 29.—When the court of criminal appeals met today to hear "a possible application" in behalf of Roger Casement, who was sentenced to death for treason in connection with the recent Dublin uprising, it was found that the defense had abandoned any contemplated action.

NEBRASKA CLOUDBURST.

Lincoln, Neb., July 28.—A cloudburst near the Nebraska-Wyoming line has at least temporarily relieved irrigationists and water power patrons along the Platte river. The cloudburst damaged a government canal, which crossed into Nebraska from Wyoming, in such a way as to allow 1,500 cubic feet of water per second to flow from the canal into the North Platte river. The supply is enough for all irrigationists, it is said, and also the Kearney water power company, which had complained of shortage.

Serbians Attacking Bulgars In New Battle in Macedonia

Paris, July 28.—Serbian forces have begun an offensive against the Bulgarians in Macedonia, according to a Havas dispatch received here today from Saloniki. The Serbians have occupied the series of heights and are maintaining their position despite the artillery fire and counter attacks of Bulgarians.

For the last three days, the dispatch adds, the Serbians had been making methodical preparations for the purpose of driving the Bulgarians from the positions which they had occupied six or seven miles south of the Greek frontier.

The Serbian army, numbering 130,000 seasoned veterans, has recuperated and been rearmed and reprovisioned by the allies. They recently, at their own request, were placed in the front trenches in Macedonia. They asked to lead the drive to recover their conquered land. There are said to be 450,000 British and French troops in the Saloniki district behind the Serbians.

HEROINE HONORED BY TWO COUNTRIES

Emilienne Moreau, 18-Year-Old Girl, Decorated For Bravery By France and Great Britain.

Paris, July 29.—At a special ceremony in the British embassy here today Emilienne Moreau, "the heroine of Loos," aged 18, was presented by Ambassador Bertie with the British medal for bravery on the field of battle and at the personal request of Gen. Sir Douglas Haig, commanderinchief of the British forces in France, with the order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Miss Moreau already has the French war cross.

The decorations are in recognition of the girl's conduct during the fighting at Loos, when she refused shelter in a cave and for 24 hours tended the wounded under fire.

CORN NEEDS RAIN WITHIN ONE WEEK

Reliable Reports From Dakota Indicate Ability to Withstand Heat—Black Rust Damages Some.

South Dakota corn fields, considered as a whole, are able to endure another week of hot weather. By the expiration of that time they must have rain or the crop will fall far short of expectations.

This is the statement received by The Tribune from various parts of South Dakota. Believing that the fate of the corn crop is the most important piece of news in this community, The Tribune wired its correspondents in various sections. Their replies are given below.

Corn in the vicinity of Mitchell seems to be greatly in need of rain. There is danger of withered tassels unless rain is received at an early date.

Winter wheat, in most communities, has been cut. It succeeded in avoiding the rust and the drought. Indications are that spring wheat will be short.

AT HURON.

Huron, S. D., July 28.—Winter rye, threshed in this county, went 20 bushels to the acre, and barley and oats are also proving a good crop. Late wheat is badly damaged, however, not so much from recent hot weather as by rust and will not average over eight bushels in this county. Winter wheat and very early spring wheat are better and macaroni wheat is standing up well. Corn is an excellent crop this year and has not been injured yet by intense heat, but if the heat continues many more days it seems certain it will be.

AT DALLAS.

Dallas, S. D., July 28.—Crops in the vicinity of Dallas and the Rosebud are excellent, and farmers are now harvesting the greatest small grain crop ever seen here, all in fine shape except the spring wheat, which is seriously damaged by rust. There is no damage to corn by the hot streak, but it will need rain in a few days.

AT MITCHELL.

Mitchell, S. D., July 28.—Black rust has damaged the wheat severely, 10 to 50 per cent; oats and barley, good; winter wheat, fair. In this vicinity and southeast, corn is needing immediate relief from hot, dry winds, more so than in other parts. The growth is good. There is danger of withered tassels.

AT SIOUX FALLS.

Sioux Falls, S. D., July 28.—Reliable men who have just returned from the farming territory in this vicinity report the barley crop has been greatly reduced by hot weather, causing shriveling of kernels. Early oats is a good crop. Late oats show effects of hot weather and will give a reduced yield. Spring wheat is damaged to a considerable extent. Corn, which is the chief crop in this territory, is standing up well and can stand another week without rain without suffering serious injury.

AT ABERDEEN.

Aberdeen, S. D., July 28.—Hot weather is doing more damage than rust; rust has done all it can do. The small grain crop is made and will yield probably 50 per cent. The corn is excellent and promises a 100 per cent crop.

BULL MOOSER TO LAND ON NEW TARIFF BOARD

Washington, July 28.—Senators Kern and Pomerene had a conference with the president today, as to which they were secretive but which is understood to involve legislative and political matters. One of the questions said to have been taken up was the makeup of the proposed tariff commission. It is the purpose of the administration to make this up so as to give the progressives some recognition and thus appeal to the bull moose vote. At least one highly prominent former bull moose has been considered.

GERMAN EXCHANGE LOW.

New York, July 28.—Another break in German exchange occurred yesterday, with marks at 71½ cents, the lowest for several months.

DISCREPANCIES IN GREAT ARMY BILL

Senate and House Conferees Will Tackle the Problem of Composing Differences at Once.

Washington, D. C., July, 29.—Conferees of the House and Senate are expected at once to tackle the problem of composing the differences between the two bodies on the great army bill which passed the Senate late yesterday. The bill, as passed by the Senate, carries about $314,000,000, an increase of $130,000,000 over the House bill. President Wilson is known to favor the Senate bill, and the House is expected to yield in some measure, though some items probably will be cut.

Total Appropriation.

The appropriations for preparedness as they now stand are as follows:

Army, $313,970,447.10.
Navy, $315,826,843.55.

Military academy, $2,238,328.57.
Army and deficiency, $27,559,348.05.
Total, $685,343,017.27.

As it passed the Senate the army bill exceeded the appropriations made by the House by more than $131,000,000. In the final hours of debate on the measure the Senate agreed to an appropriation of $2,000,000 for relief of dependant families of national guardsmen and regular army soldiers in service in the Mexican emergency. Distribution of the fund is left to the discretion of the secretary of war, but in no case shall any dependent family receive more than $50 a month.

An amendment agreed to yesterday, giving soldiers on the border the right to vote in the field at the November election was eliminated from the bill on a point of order just before passage. As soon as the army bill was out of the way the Senate took up the passage, after brief debate, the military academy appropriation bill carrying $2,238,328.57, an increase of $1,019,524 over the House authorization. In the main the Senate approved the military committee's increase in appropriations over the House in the army bill, although there were a few reductions in the committe recommenadtions due to improvement in the Mexican situation.

RUMORED CAPTURE OF U-BOAT LINER PROMPTLY DENIED

Canadian Authorities Deny That Bremen Has Been Seized or Towed Into Port at Halifax.

REPORT IS WIDESPREAD

Announced Deutschland Will Not Sail Until Word Is Received From Overdue Sister Ship.

Halifax, N. S., July 29.—Nothing is known here of the Bremen story from New York, that the Bremen had been captured and brought into Halifax harbor.

St. John, N. B., July 29.—J. D. Hazen, minister of marine and fisheries, today denied reports that the German undersea liner Bremen had been captured and taken into Halifax. Halifax reports received also declared the Bremen was not there.

Ottawa, July 29.—The naval department denied today that there is any foundation for the story published in New York that the German super submarine Bremen had been captured and taken into Halifax.

Portland, Me., July 29.—A telegram saying the German underwater merchantman Breman had been captured and was being towed into Halifax was received in this city today from a Canadian source which was believed to be reliable.

New York, July 29.—Another circumstantial report regarding the whereabouts of the German submarine Bremen long expected at some American port is that the ship has been captured by British patrolling squadrons and is today tied up in the harbor of Halifax, N. S.

The report as published here today is given in a letter said to have been written by the secretary of a high Canadian official to a business man of this city. The letter is declared to have been mailed from Buffalo, N. Y., two days ago.

WAIT FOR THE BREMEN.

Baltimore, Md., July 29.—The German merchant submarine Deutschland will not sail for home until official information has been received from her sister ship, the Bremen, by her agents here, according to a report received today from a source considered reliable.

It was also said on good authority tha the Deutschland would make no secret attempt at a getaway, but that is was probable she would leave her pier during the day, in order to arrive at the capes under cover of darkness.

TURKEY DONE FOR RUSSIA BELIEVES

Defeat In Armenia Virtually Eliminates Moslem Nation From World Struggle, Is Claim.

Petrograd, July 29.—With her ammunition supply virtually exhausted and her armies in Armenia in flight, and the most acute economic distress prevailing, Turkey, it is believed, virtually is eliminated as a factor in the world war. What the effect of the Russian victory at Erzingan will be in Constantinople is awaited with keen interest.

Russian troops covered 100 miles in their advance on Erzingan within a week. The capture of that city means the virtual completion of the Russian occupation of Turkish Armenia and gives Russia the benefit of the extremely fertile valley and as an easy means of communicati through Trebizond to the western ar southern Caucasian armies.

350,000 Men Beaten.

It is estimated that the Turks had between 20 and 25 divisions between the Black sea and Mush—approximately 350,000 men. Three months ago, the Turks undertook a comprehensive campaign intended to recapture Erzerum, and incidentally to draw troops from the Russian European theater. General Eudenich, the Rusian commander in the Caucasus, succeeded, however, in holding the Turks in the Erzerum district while delivering an effective blow to them in the Mush district. In order to counter this flanking from the south and a similar effort from the north, the Russians were obliged temporarily to abandon Mamakhatum, 50 miles west of Erzerum. The Russians now have captured Trebizond, Balburt and Gumish Kkaneh and reoccupied Mamakhatum.

Had Weakened Lines.

The Galician advance of the Russians has caused the Germans to withdraw troops from the Balkans, and Turks were sent there to replace them. The Russians, quick to see the advantage this afforded, started a vigorous offensive toward Erzingan. Only a rear guard battle preceded the capture of the town, the Turks' main forces having been beaten and forced to retreat toward Sivas.

Colonel Shumsky, military critic of the Bourse Gazette, in an article on the victory of the Russians at Erzingan says:

"This defeat of the best troops of the Ottoman empire has quite broken the Turkish defense. No further serious offensive can be expected, since only parts of divisions from Constantinople, Thracean and Egyptian armies can be spared to patch up these broken units."

CORNER IS LONG DISPUTED

Battle Over Tract Waged Before Rebellion and For Years Afterward.

In the early colonial days, when the Puritan commonwealth of Massachusetts claimed "everything from Cape Cod westward to the western ocean," there was a little tract known as Boston Corner, over which a question of jurisdiction was waged by New York. Ten years before the revolutionary war the two colonies appointed commissioners to fix upon a mutually acecptable boundary line, but after long negotiation, while they came near enough to agree upon a starting line, they could not decide whether or not it should parallel the Hudson river, and finally gave it up. After the war the controversy was renewed and was referred to Congress, and this time a boundary was definitely fixed, beginning at a point on the Massachusetts-Connecticut line, twenty miles from the Hudson, and extending northwestward in a straight line parallel with the general trend of the river. This line followed closely the western slope of the Taconic mountains, leaving the valley lands in New York state. At the southwest angle, however, the mountains receded and left about 300 acres of bottom land in Massachusetts This section was inaccessible from the eastern side of the mountains, and in time its people bore an unenviable reputation for lawlessness, and Boston Corner, as it was known, became the resort of all manner of lawbreakers. Its inhabitants did not vote, and the tax collector left them severely alone. Matters grew worse till 1853, when John Morirssey, the famous pubilist, afterward serving in congress, fought weight championship of the world. There was a general melee over the result of this fight. Puritan Massachusetts rose in indignation The state assembly had been considering the organization of a special police for Boston Corner, but in 1854 the knot was cut by the legislature ceding some 3,000 acres of lang, which included Boston Corner, to the state of New York. And New York accepted the gift Boston Corner is now peaceful and law abiding, a different class of people having replaced those of the '50s, and the only evidence remaining may be seen by noticing the map of Massachusetts which shows the southwest corner chopped off at an angle.

Minding One's Own Business

If there is one thing more than another that a great many persons seem really to enjoy, says the Ledger, it is minding other people's business and attempting to manage their affairs for them, and take it all in all, there is no occupation that can be followed that pays less interest on the investment Nobody ever yet got rich minding other people's business, but a great many have attained wealth and honors by looking out for their own to the neglect of all other occupations This tendency to look after other people is born largely of conceit, and inordinate opinion of one's own ability, and is more highly developed in people who are notoriously weak in judgment than in any other class of individuals. The really wise, clear-headed, far-seeing friend usually has quite enough personal matters to see to without desiring to monopolize the cares and burdens of others.

It is a curious fact that the very people of whom we would gladly ask advice are very chary of giving it, while those whose counsel is not worth a rap thrust their opinion and assistance upon us from all quarters.

As a comprehensive proposition, it may be said that those who have themselves made a success in any line are safe advisers, but these people rarely meddle, and still more rarely are they willing to assume charge of any affairs that they can avoid. But these interested persons, these people who attach themselves to others and cling like barnacles, who have never accomplished anything themselves, and never will while time lasts, these are they who are never satisfied with the way we have managed our concerns. But they are ever ready with hand and tongue to help us out with their usually worthless advice.

One of the wisest men of the generation past brought his children up with the thoroughly ingrained idea that nothing was so valuable to the individual as the habit of minding one's own business. So deeply fixed was this part of their instruction that more than once when some trifling disturbance occurred on the street or in the neighborhood, these people put themselves as far as possible out of reach of it with all convenient dispatch. This man's theory was that if one stayed around where there was trouble it was impossible to avoid getting into it, and that the safest and best way to do was to get as far away as one could. It is needless to say that, acting upon such a principle, the family was comfortable, prosperous, thoroughly respected and rarely got into difficulties of any sort. He taught the family that of all paying occupations the most profitable was studiously and industriously to mind one's own business and let that of other people entirely alone.

The use of the mosquito is to show us that troubles are not always in proportion to their size

For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

WHAT EDITORS SAY OF RAILWAY ISSUE

Demand Peaceful Settlement of Wage Controversy.

STRIKE MUST BE AVERTED.

Almost Unanimously Newspapers Indorse Proposals of Railway Managers That Wage Question Be Settled by Interstate Commerce Commission or by Arbitration Under the Newlands Law.

Chicago.—The proposed strike by all railway train service employees, in order to secure a wage increase of $100,000,000 a year is condemned by newspaper editors throughout the country.

They declare such a strike would be a public calamity and that it must be averted.

Almost unanimously the editors indorse the proposals made by the committee of railway managers to the leaders of the brotherhoods—that the wage question be settled by the interstate commerce commission or by arbitration under the Newlands law.

The following extracts from newspaper editorials fairly reflect public sentiment on this most important issue:

The interstate commerce commission should be empowered to prevent this threatened railroad strike. Write to your congressman about it.—Chicago Tribune.

The great public has more at stake than either the railway stockholders or the railway employees.—Davenport (Ia.) Times.

The interstate commerce commission represents the great public. It was created for the purpose of holding even the scales.—Rocky Mountain News, Denver.

The trainmen should take prudent thought. Arbitration is their wise policy.—Detroit Free Press.

The public will support any finding the interstate commerce commission may make.—Dallas (Tex.) News.

Public opinion ought to have re-enforced the position of the railroads long before now.—Galveston News.

The regulation of wages presents no more difficulties than the regulation of rates.—Holyoke (Mass.) Transcript.

The interstate commerce commission would certainly be responsible if it permitted a strike to come.—Minneapolis Journal.

The train crew unions have no case which they are willing to try in a court of arbitration or in the great court of public opinion.—New York Commercial.

The controversy is not between the railways and their employees, but between the public and the railway employees.—New York Globe.

The men now seem to show rather a consciousness of the weakness of their position than reliance upon its merits.—New York Times.

The interstate commerce commission cannot avoid regulating wages so long as it regulates rates.—New York Tribune.

The railroad brotherhoods are mistaken. There IS something to arbitrate.—New York World.

The railway employees are plainly in the wrong and should sense their mistake before they make a worse blunder.—Oshkosh (Wis.) Northwestern.

Neither side could afford to take the position of demanding more than the interstate commerce commission would approve.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The railroad employees are not suffering such intolerable wrongs that they cannot await the result of arbitration.—Portland Oregonian.

The greatness of the power for which the labor leaders are seeking is the very strongest argument why they should not have it.—Railway Age Gazette.

The public is as vitally interested in the situation as the railways or the employees.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Either the railroads are wrong or their employees are. Any just cause will stand investigation.—Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger.

This is the time when every American who loves his country should set aside his own schemes of aggrandizement.—Kansas City Journal.

The United States government cannot permit any strike that would tie up all the railroads of the country.—Leslie's Weekly.

It is just as true that organized labor may oppress the public intolerably as that organized capital may do it.—Lowell (Mass.) Citizen.

Those who would suffer most from a tying up of the nation's traffic would get no vote on the question of a strike.—Lincoln (Neb.) Star.

One thing is certain, the railroads, the railroad employees and the American people cannot afford such a strike.—Memphis Appeal.

We think the brotherhoods are making a mistake in refusing arbitration. Capital must get its living wage as well as labor.—Milwaukee Free Press.

Business can hobble along under high freight rates. Death would follow a general railroad strike.—Baton Rouge (La.) Times.

The American people do not believe there is any difference between the roads and the employees that cannot be adjusted peaceably.—Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph.

The railroads have accepted the perfectly reasonable and natural suggestion that the wage question be settled by arbitration.—Boston Journal.

Why should a vote be taken on a strike which the public will never tolerate?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

DENVER BUSINESS MEN APREAL TO CONGRESS.

They Want Interstate Commerce Commission to Stop Railroad Strike.

Denver.—Alarmed by the prospective strike of railway train employees to secure higher wages, the members of the Denver Clearing House association unanimously passed the following resolution:

Whereas, At a recent meeting in New York between managers of the railroads and executives of the trainmen's brotherhoods, called for the discussion of wage schedules, at which conference interested parties were unable to agree, and

Whereas, Subsequently the brotherhood representatives refused to consider arbitration and are now taking a strike vote, which may end in a general strike, such as would paralyze the industry of the country.

Therefore, be it resolved, That by this resolution the Denver Clearing House association, regardless of the merits of the controversy as between the railroads and their employees, does hereby express its disapproval of a strike as a medium of adjustment, and we hereby call on our senators and congressmen to interest themselves in the passing by congress of such a measure as will have the effect of instructing and empowering the interstate commerce commission to take cognizance of these conditions and effect a fair and equitable adjustment as between the railroads and their employees, thereby preventing a nation wide railroad strike.

R. R. STRIKE VOTE IS TO BE ENDED AUG. 5

Men Required to Vote—Ballot Ignores Arbitration—Gives Leaders Full Authority.

The results of the strike vote being taken by the railroad engineers, firemen, conductors and brakemen to enforce their demands for a $100,000,000 increase in wages will be determined early in August according to a circular of instructions issued by the executive officers of the "big four" brotherhoods of train employes. The local chairmen of the organizations are to take the votes of the employees in their districts and forward them to the general chairman on each road not later than July 26. The general chairmen for the eastern and southeastern roads are to report at headquarters in New York not later than Aug. 1 and those for the western roads not later than Aug. 5. The ballots will then be counted and another meeting will be held with the national conference committee of the railways.

The strike ballots are attached to a brief statement of the conference between the brotherhood committee and the committee representing the railways which was held in New York in June at which the railways proposed either arbitration or reference of the entire wage controversy to the interstate commerce commission for settlement. Both proposals were rejected by the brotherhood leaders, and the wording of the strike ballot gives the employees no opportunity to vote on the question of arbitration. The form of the ballot is as follows:

I have personally read the foregoing statement and believe the request for an eight hour basic day with time and one-half for all overtime worked in all except passenger service is just and reasonable and hereby authorize the chief executives and general chairmen of the B. L. E., B. of F. and E., O. R. C. and B. R. T. to act as my agents or attorneys in dealing for a settlement of these questions, and if the said chief executives and general chairmen are unable to otherwise effect a settlement satisfactory to them I hereby cast my vote . . . . a STRIKE.

(for or against)

According to the circular of instructions, "all members holding seniority rights or actually employed in the service affected by this movement will be required to vote." The man voting is to sign the ballot and hand it to the person authorized to take the vote, in a sealed envelope with his name written on the outside, "but under no circumstances will he be permitted to take it away with him," and "all members are cautioned against giving out information or discussing the questions involved."

Says Brotherhoods Err.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Free Press says editorially:

We think the brotherhoods are making a mistake in refusing arbitration.

If they are fairly entitled to what they ask for, impartial arbitrators will award it to them, and the public, which finally foots all transportation bills, will draw its belt a bit tighter, pay the price either in higher rates or diminished service, or both, and there will be no interruption of the country's commerce.

But if American business shall be thrown out of gear by a general stoppage of railroad service because the brotherhoods have refused to arbitrate, public sympathy will undoubtedly be with the railroad owners and managers. And without the support of public opinion the brotherhoods could not win a strike. * * *

Capital must get its living wage as well as labor.

A general strike would effect every individual in the country. It must not occur.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A strike such as is threatened would be a calamity to all the people of the United States.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Galley o' Fun!

ANTIQUITY.

A chair encumbers our dim hall.
Moth-eaten is its faded seat;
Its legs are short, its back is taH;
'T is but a trap for passing feet.
You cannot sit upon the Chair,
Its framework is so very weak;
But Wife insists its place is there
Because it's real antique.

A Table came from our home town.
'T was shaky, scratched, and full of nicks,
One leaf folds up and one folds down,
It holds a brace of candlesticks.
It wobbles if you go too near,
The knobs are chipped, the drawers all leak,
Yet it has come to stay, I fear,
Because it's real antique.

A Bed has shown up to replace
The staunch couch where I sought repose;
Cold Cupids stare me in the face;
The hanging draperies brush my nose
And each one of the post quartette
Has a distinctly different squeak;
Yet Wife is singing paeans yet,
Because it's real antique.

All through our house it's just the same.
I'll grin and bear it, I suppose.
Perhaps, when I get worn and lame,
And dull and careless of my clothes
Perhaps, I say, they'll prize me then,
And in endearing terms they'll speak,
And praise me to my fellow men,
Because I'm real antique.

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who ar accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

RANCHING

Cattle and Horse Ranching in Western Canada — Steers Brought 10 Cents a Pound on the Seattle Market.

That big money is made by the large cattle rancher in Western Canada, and also by the small farmer as well is shown by the undisputable facts presented from time to time. A rancher, near Gleichen, Alberta, who commenced in a small way nine years ago recently disposed of 1,200 cattle at a total of $101,700.50, and this was only his surplus stock for the present season.

A Lethbridge shipment of 217 head of ranch steers brought the owner an average of $85 per head. They were taken off the range without any extra feeding and were in excellent condition to be sold for the Christmas trade. Allowing a shrinkage of 100 head, the 850 each was made up of $70 per head paid on the Seattle market, and an Alberta steer which weighed 1,700 lbs. and brought the top price of 10c per lb., or $170.

Six carloads of live stock from Pincher Creek, Alta., left Pincher Alberta, shipped to Spokane, excited keen competition there on account of their exceptional quality. The price realized was 10.02. American dealers say they must look to Canada for beef supplies.

A live stock firm, which has shipped over 2,000 head of beef cattle to the American farmer since the middle of November, reports a splendid reception of Alberta stock in the United States.

A carload of choice Alberta steers were sold early in January for shipment to the British Columbia coast at $8.70 per 100 lbs. and, later on, a lot from Carstairs brought $6.90, the highest price paid since the spring of 1917. Shipments from Calgary livestock yards during 1915 were: Horses, 8,675; cattle, 30,577; hogs, 141,515; sheep 12,410. A course in agriculture and livestock demonstration which has been conducted by the Provincial Dept. of Agriculture here was well attended showing the interest taken by city residents in agricultural progress.

John Young of Sidney Man. gives his experiences in sheep raising as follows, as quoted in a local paper:

"I bought a bunch of fifty ewes, which cost me $262.50. With this little flock I demonstrated just what can be done in the sheep business. This fall I sold fifty fat lambs at $6.50 per head, $325, and 18 of the best ewe lambs, which I kept I value at $8.00 per head, $144. The wool sold at an average of $2.07 per head, $103.50. This makes the very nice total of $572.50."

"They run out nearly every day all winter. The value of hay and oats was small, and one can make them very comfortable through the winter with very little expense. For shelter I have a shed about 125 feet long and 14 feet wide, which I cover with straw. This gives them protection from the cold winds, yet it is always cool enough to be healthy.

"I could go on for more for sheep than I do, as I believe them to be the most profitable stock on the farm."

Desire of farmers and ranchers to increase their sheep holdings is indicated by the sale of 2,500 head recently at $9.00 each. High wool prices and profitable demand for mutton are the reason given for such a figure.

Manitoba sheep breeders arranged last year for the Provincial Department of Agriculture to handle their wool output on a co-operative basis and obtained most satisfactory results. About 75,000 lbs. of wool were handled, netting the shippers over 25c per lb. Advertisement.

"Heard about Dee son getting shot?" he gasped to his astonished audience.

The cow punchers gathered round eager to hear the news.

"No," they cried. "When?"

"Bout half an hour ago," came the reply. "I was there and saw it all."

"Where did he get shot?" was the next question flung at him while hands reached ominously on revolver butts.

Down at the store chuckled the storekeeper calmly. "He bought a couple of pounds of it."

CHAPTER XII (Continued)

His situation now, though still critical, did not appear to be so hopeless as it had been. The hounds would soon close in on him, and he would kill them or drive them away. It was beyond the bounds of possibility that any men could have followed running hounds through that brake in the night. The thing that worried Duane was the fact of the bonfires. He had gathered from two words of one of his pursuers that the brake was a kind of trap, and he began to believe there was only one way out of it and that was along the bank where he had entered, and where obviously all night long his pursuers had kept fires burning. Further concern on this point, however, was interrupted by a crashing in the willows and the rapid patter of feet.

Underneath Duane lay a gray, foggy obscurity. He could not see the ground, nor at any object but the black trunk of the tree. Sight would not be needed to tell him when the pack arrived. With a pattering rush through the willows the hounds reached the tree, and then high above crash of brush and thud of heavy paws rose a hideous clamor. Duane's pursuers far off to the south would hear that and know what it meant. And at daybreak, perhaps before, they would take a short cut across the brake, guided by the baying of hounds that had treed their quarry.

It wanted only a few moments, however, till Duane could distinguish the vague forms of the hounds in the gray shadow below. Still he waited. He had no shots to spare. And he knew how to treat bloodhounds. Gradually the obscurity lightened, and at length Duane had good enough sight of the hounds for his purpose. His first shot killed the huge brute leader of the pack. Then, with unerring shots, he crippled several others. That stopped the baying. Piercing howls arose. The pack took fright and fled, its course easily marked by the howls of the crippled members. Duane reloaded his gun, and, making certain all the hounds had gone, he descended to the ground and set off at a rapid pace to the northward.

The mist had dissolved under a rising sun when Duane made his first halt some miles north of the scene where he had waited for the hounds. A barrier to further progress in shape of a precipitous rocky bluff, rose sheer from the willow brake. He skirted the base of the cliff, where walking was comparatively easy, around in the direction of the river. He reached the end finally to see there was absolutely no chance to escape from the brake at that corner. It took extreme labor, attended by some hazard and considerable pain to his arm, to get down where he could fill his sombrero with water. After quenching his thirst he had a look at his wound. It was caked over with blood and dirt. When washed off the arm was seen to be inflamed and swollen around the bullet hole. He bandaged it, experiencing a soothing relief in the cool water. Then he bandaged his face as well as he could and arranged a sling for his left arm. This alleviated the pain of the injured member somewhat, and he found a comfortable and restful position where it had a chance to begin mending.

As Duane turned away from the river he felt refreshed. His great strength and endurance had always made fatigue something almost unknown to him. However, tramping on one day and night was as unusual to him as to any other riders of the southwest, and it had begun to tell on him. Retracing his steps he reached the point where he had abruptly come on the bluff, and here he determined to follow along its base in the other direction until he found a way out or discovered the futility of such effort.

Duane covered ground rapidly. From time to time he paused to listen. But he was always listening and his eyes were ever roving. This alertness had become second nature with him, so that except in extreme cases of caution he performed it while he pondered his gloomy and fateful situation. Such habit of alertness and thought made time fly swiftly.

By noon he had rounded the wide curve of the brake and was facing south. The bluff had petered out from a high, mountainous wall to a low abutment of rock, but it still held to its steep, rough nature and afforded no crack or slope where quick ascent could have been possible. He pushed on, growing weaker as he approached the danger zone. During that as he neared the river on this side it was imperative to go deeper into the willows. In the afternoon he reached a point where he could see men pacing to and fro on the bluff. This assured him that whatever place was guarded was one by which he might escape. He headed toward these men and approached to within 100 paces of the bluff where they were. There were several men and several boys, all armed, and, after the manner of Texans taking their ease, leisurely. Farther down Duane made out black dots on the horizon of the bluff line, and these he concluded were guards stationed at another outlet. Probably all the available men in the district were on duty. Texans took a grim pleasure in such work. Duane remembered that upon several occasions he had served such duty himself.

Duane peered through the branches and studied the lay of the land. For several hundred yards the bluff could be climbed. He took stock of those careless guards. They had rifles, and that made vain any attempt to pass them in daylight. He believed an attempt by night might be successful; and he was swiftly coming to a determination to hide there till dark and then try it, when the sudden yelping of a dog betrayed him to the guards on the bluff.

The dog had likely been placed there to give an alarm, and he was lustily true to his trust. Duane saw the men run together and begin to talk excitedly and peer into the brake, which was a signal for him to slip away under the willows. He made no noise, and he assured himself he must be invisible. Nevertheless, he heard shouts, then the cracking of rifles, and bullets began to zip and swish through the leafy covert. The day was hot and windless, and Duane concluded that whenever he touched a willow stem, even ever so slightly, it vibrated to the top and sent a quiver among the leaves. Through this the guards had located his position. Once a bullet hissed by him, another thudded into the ground before him. This shooting loosed a rage in Duane. He had to fly from these men, and he hated them and himself because of it. Always in the fury of such moments he wanted to give back shot for shot. But he slipped on through the willows and at length the rifles ceased to crack.

He sheered to the left again, in line with the rocky barrier, and kept on, wondering what the next mile would bring. It brought worse, for he was seen by sharp eyed scouts, and a hot fusillade drove him to run for his life, luckily to escape with no more than a bullet creased shoulder.

Later that day, still undaunted, he sheered again toward the trap wall, and found that the nearer he approached to the place where he had come down into the brake the greater his danger. To attempt to run the blockade of that train by day would be fatal. He waited for night, and after the brightness of the fires had some what lessened he essayed to creep out of the brake. He succeeded in reaching the foot of the bluff, here only a bank, and had begun to crawl stealthily up under cover of a shadow when a hound again betrayed his position. Retreating to the willows was as perilous a task as had ever confronted Duane, and when he had accomplished it, right under what seemed 100 blazing rifles, he felt that he had indeed been favored by providence. This time men followed him a goodly ways into the brake, and the ripping of lead through the willows sounded on all sides of him.

When the noise of pursuit ceased Duane sat down in the darkness, his mind clamped between two things—whether to try again to escape or wait for possible opportunity. He seemed incapable of decision. His intelligence told him that every hour lessened his chances for escape. He had little enough chance in any case, and that was what made another attempt so desperately hard. Still it was not love of life that bound him. There would come an hour, sooner or later, when he would wrench decision out of this chaos of emotion and thought. But that time was not yet.

When he had remained quiet long enough to cool off and recover from his run he found that he was tired. He stretched out to rest. But the swarms of vicious mosquitoes prevented sleep. This corner of the brake was low and near the river, a breeding ground for the blood-suckers. They sang and hummed and whined around him in an ever increasing horde. He covered his head and hands with his coat and lay there patiently. That was a long and wretched night. Morning found him still strong physically, but in a dreadful state of mind.

First he hurried for the river. He could withstand the pangs of hunger, but it was imperative to quench thirst. His wound made him feverish, and therefore more than usually hot and thirsty. Again he was refreshed. That morning he was hard put to it to hold himself back from attempting to cross the river. If he could find a light log it was within the bounds of possibility that he might ford the shallow water and bars of quicksand. But not yet! Wearily doggedly he faced about toward the bluff.

All that day and all that night, all the next day and all the next night he stole like a hunted savage from river to bluff, and every hour forced on him the bitter certainty that he was trapped.

Duane lost track of days, of events. He had come to an evil pass. Then arrived an hour when, closely pressed by pursuers at the extreme southern corner of the brake, he took to a dense thicket of willows, driven to what he believed was his last stand.

If only these human bloodhounds would swiftly close in on him! Let him fight to the last bitter gasp and have it over! But these hunters, eager as they were to get him, had care of their own skins. They took few risks. They had him cornered.

It was the middle of the day, hot, dusty, oppressive, threatening storm. Like a snake Duane crawled into a little space in the darkest part of the thicket and lay still. Men had cut him off from the bluff, from the river, seemingly from all sides. But he heard voices only from in front and toward his left. Even if his passage to the river had not been blocked, it might just as well have been.

"Come on, fellers—down hyar," called one man from the bluff.

"Got him corralled at last," shouted another.

"Reckon ye needn't be too shore. We thought thet more'n one," taunted another.

"I seen him, I tell you."

"Aw, thet was a deer."

"But Bill found fresh tracks an' blood on the willows."

"If he's winged we needn't hurry."

"Hold on thar, you boys," came a shout in authoritative tones from farther up the bluff. "Go slow. You all air gittin' foolish at the end of a long chase."

"Thet's right, colonel. Hold 'em back. There's nothin' shorer than somebody'll be stoppin' lead pretty quick. He'll be huntin' us soon!"

"Let's surround this corner an' starve him out."

"Fire the brake."

How clearly all this talk pierced Duane's ears! In it he seemed to hear his doom. This, then was the end he had always expected, which had been close to him before, yet never like now.

"By God!" whispered Duane, "the thing for me to do now—is go out—meet them!"

That was prompted by the fighting, the killing instinct in him. In that moment it had almost superhuman power. If he must die, that was the way for him to die. What else could be expected of Buck Duane? He got to his knees and drew his gun. With his swollen and almost useless hand he held what spare ammunition he had left. He ought to creep out noiselessly to the edge of the willows, suddenly face his pursuers, then, while there was a beat left in his heart, kill, kill, kill. These men all had rifles. The fight would be short. But the marksmen did not live on earth who could make such a fight go wholly against him. Confronting them suddenly he could kill a man for every shot in his gun.

Thus Duane reasoned. So he hoped to accept his fate—to meet this end. But when he tried to step forward something checked him. He forced himself, yet he could not go. The obstruction that opposed his will was as insurmountable as it had been physically impossible for him to climb the bluff.

Slowly, he fell back, crouched low, and then lay flat. The grim and ghastly dignity that had been his a moment before fell away from him. He lay there stripped to his last shred of self-respect. He wondered was he afraid; had he, the last of the Duanes—had he come to feel fear? No! Never in all his wild life had he so longed to go out and meet men face to face. It was not fear that held him back. He hated this hiding, this eternal vigilance, this hopeless life. The damnable paradox of the situation was that if he went out to meet these men there was absolutely no doubt of his doom. If he clung to his covert there was a chance, a merest chance, for his life. These pursuers, dogged and unflagging as they had been, were mortally afraid of him. It was his fame that made them cowards. Duane's keenness told him that at the very darkest and most perilous moment there was still a chance for him. And the blood in him, the temper of his father, the years of his outlawry, the pride of his unsought and hated career, the nameless, inexplicable something in him made him accept that slim chance.

Waiting then became a physical and mental agony. He lay under the burning sun, parched by thirst, laboring to breathe, sweating and bleeding. His uncared for wound was like a red hot prong in his flesh. Blotched and swollen from the never ending attack of flies and mosquitoes his face seemed twice its natural size, and it ached and stung.

One one side, then, was this physical torture, on the other the old hell, terribly augmented at this crisis, in his mind. It seemed that thought and imagination had never been so swift. If death found him presently, how would it come? Would he get decent burial or be left for the peccaries and the coyotes? Would his people ever know where he had fallen? How wretched, how miserable his state! It was cowardly, it was monstrous for him to cling longer to this doomed life. Then the hate in his heart, the hellish hate of these men on his trail—that was like a scourge. He felt no longer human. He had degenerated into an animal that could think. His heart pounded, his pulse beat, his breast heaved, and this internal strife seemed to thunder into his ears. He was now enacting the tragedy of all crippled, starved, hunted wolves at bay in their dens. Only his tragedy was infinitely more terrible because he had mind enough to see his plight, his resemblance to a lonely wolf, bloody-fanged, dripping, snarling, fire eyed in a last instinctive defiance.

Mounted upon the horror of Duane's thought was a watching, listening intensity so supreme that it registered impressions which were creations of his imagination. He heard stealthy steps that were not there; he saw shadowy moving figures that were only leaves. A hundred times when he was about to pull trigger he discovered his error. Yet voices came from a distance, and steps and crackings in the willows, and other sounds real enough. But Duane could not distinguish the real from the false. There were times when the wind which had arisen sent a hot, pattering breath down the willow aisles, and Duane heard it as an approaching army.

This straining of Duane's faculties brought on a reaction which in itself was a respite. He saw the sun darkened by thick slow spreading clouds. A storm appeared to be coming. How slowly it moved! The air was like steam. If there broke one of those dark, violent storms common through rare to the country, Duane believed he might slip away in the fury of wind and rain. Hope, that seemed unquenchable in him, resurged again. He hailed it with a bitterness that was sickening.

Then at a rustling step he froze into the old strained attention. He heard a slow patter of soft feet. A tawny shape crossed a little opening in the thicket. It was that of a dog. The moment while that beast came into full view was an age. The dog was not a bloodhound, and if he had a trail on a scent he seemed to be at fault on it. Duane waited for the inevitable discovery. Any kind of a hunting dog could have found him in that thicket. Voices from outside could be heard urging on the dog. Rover they called him. Duane sat up at the moment the dog entered the little shaded covert. Duane expected yelping, a baying or at least a bark that would tell of his hiding place. A strange relief swiftly swayed over Duane. The end was near now. He had no further choice. Let them come—a quick fierce exchange of shots—and then his torture past! He waited for the dog to give the alarm.

But the dog looked at him and trotted by into the thicket without a yelp. Duane could not believe the evidence of his senses. He thought he had suddenly gone deaf. He saw the dog disappear, heard him running to and fro among the willows, getting farther and farther away, till all sound from him ceased.

"Thar's Rover," called a voice from the bluffside. "He's been through thet black patch."

"Nary a rabbit in there," replied another.

"Bah! Thet pup's no good," scornfully growled another man. "Put a hound at thet clump of willows."

"Fire's the game. Burn the brake before the rain comes."

The voices droned off as their owners evidently walked up the ridge.

Then upon Duane fell the crushing burden of the old waiting, watching, listening spell. After all, it was not to end just now. His chance still persisted—looked a little brighter—led him on, perhaps, to forlorn hope.

All at once twilight settled quickly down upon the willow brake, or else Duane noted it suddenly. He imagined it to be caused by the approaching storm. But there was little movement of air or cloud and thunder still muttered and rumbled at a distance. The fact was the sun had set, and at this time of overcast sky night was at hand.

Duane realized it with the awakening of all his old force. He would yet elude his pursuers. That was the moment when he seized the significance of all these fortunate circumstances which had aided him. Without haste and without sound he began to crawl in the direction of the river. It was not far, and he reached the bank before darkness set in. There were men up on the bluff carrying wood to build a bonfire. For a moment he half yielded to a temptation to try to slip along the river shore, close in under the willows. But when he raised himself to peer out he saw that an attempt of this kind would be liable to failure. At the same moment he saw a rough hewn plank lying beneath him, lodged against some willows. The end of the plank extended in almost to a point beneath him. Quick as a flash he saw where a desperate chance invited him. Then he tied his gun in an oilskin bag and put it in his pocket.

The bank was steep and crumbly. He must not break off any earth to splash into the water. There was a willow growing back some few feet from the edge of the bank. Cautiously he pulled it down, bent it over the water so that when he released it there would be no spring back. Then he trusted his weight to it, with his feet sliding carefully down the bank. He went into the water almost up to his knees, felt the quicksand grip his feet; then, leaning forward till he reached the plank, he pulled it toward him and lay upon it.

Without a sound one end went slowly under water and the farther end appeared lightly braced against the overhanging willows. Very carefully then Duane began to extricate his right foot from the sucking sand. It seemed as if his foot was incased in solid rock. But there was a movement upward, and he pulled with all the power he dared use. It came slowly and at length was free. The left one he released with less difficulty. The next few moments he put all his attention on the plank to ascertain if his weight would sink it into the sand. The far end slipped off the willow with a little splash and gradually settled to rest upon the bottom. But it sank no further. However, as it was manifestly impossible for him to keep his head up for long he carefully crawled out upon the plank until he could rest an arm and shoulder upon the willows.

When he looked up it was to find the night strangely luminous with fires. There was a bonfire on the extreme end of the bluff, another a hundred paces beyond. A great flare extended over the brake in that direction. Duane heard a roaring on the wind, and he knew his pursuers had fired the willows. He did not believe that would help them much. The brake was dry enough, but too green to burn readily. And as for the bonfires, he discovered that the men, probably having run out of wood, were keeping up the light with oil and stuff from the village. A dozen men kept watch on the bluff scarcely 50 paces from where Duane lay concealed by the willows. They talked, cracked jokes, sang songs, and manifestly considered this outlaw hunting a great lark. As long as the bright light lasted Duane dared not move. He had the patience and the endurance to wait for the breaking of the storm, and if that did not come, then the early hour before dawn when the gray fog and gloom were over the river.

Escape was now in his grasp. He felt it. And with that in his mind he waited, strong as steel in his conviction, capable of withstanding any strain endurable by the human frame.

The wind blew in puffs, grew wilder, and roared through the willows, carrying bright sparks upward. Thunder rolled down over the river and lightning began to flash. Then the rain fell in heavy sheets, but not steadily. The flashes of lightning and the broad flares played so incessantly that Duane could not trust himself out on the open river. Certainly the storm rather increased the watchfulness of the men on the bluff. He knew how to wait, and he waited, grimly standing pain and cramp and chill. The storm wore away as desultorily as it had come, and the long night set in. There were times when Duane thought he was paralyzed, others when he grew sick, giddy, weak from the strained posture. The first paling of the stars quickened him with a kind of wild joy. He watched them grow paler, dimmer, disappear one by one. A shadow hovered down, rested upon the river, and gradually thickened. The bonfire on the bluff showed as through a foggy veil. The watchers were mere groping dark figures.

Duane, aware of how cramped he had become from long inaction, began to move his legs and uninjured arm and body, and at length overcame a paralyzing stiffness. Then, digging his hand in the sand and holding the plank with his knees, he edged it out into the river. Inch by inch he advanced until clear of the willows. Looking upward, he saw the shadowy figures of the men on the bluff. He realized they ought to see him, feared that they would. But he kept on, cautiously, noiselessly, with a heart numbing slowness. From time to time his elbow made a little gurgle and splash in the water. Try as he might he could not prevent this. It got to be like the hollow roar of a rapid filling his ears with mocking sound. There was a perceptible current out in the river and it hindered straight advancement. Inch by inch he crept on, expecting to hear the bang of rifles, the spattering of bullets. He tried not to look backward, but failed. The fire appeared a little dimmer, the moving shadows a little darker.

Once the plank struck in the sand and he felt as if it were settling. Bringing feet to aid his hand, he shoved it over the treacherous place. This way he made faster progress. The obscurity of the river seemed to be enveloping him. When he looked back again the figures of the men were coalescing with the surrounding gloom, the fires were streaky, blurred patches of light. But the sky above was brighter. Dawn was not far off.

To the west all was dark. With infinite care and implacable spirit and waning strength Duane shoved the plank along, and when at last he discerned the black border of bank it came in time, he thought to save him. He crawled out, rested till the gray dawn broke, and then headed north through the willows.

CHAPTER XIII.

How long Duane was traveling out of that region he never knew. But he reached familiar country and found a rancher who had before befriended him. Here his arm was attended to; he had food and sleep, and in a couple of weeks he was himself again.

When the time came for Duane to ride away on his endless trail, his friend reluctantly imparted the information that some 30 miles south, near the village of Shirley, there was posted at a certain cross road a reward for Buck Duane, dead or alive. Duane had heard of such notices, but he had never seen one. His friend's reluctance and refusal to state for what particular deed this reward was offered roused Duane's curiosity. He had never been any closer to Shirley than this rancher's home. Doubtless some postoffice burglary, some gun shooting scrape had been attributed to him. And he had been accused of worse deeds. Abruptly Duane decided to ride over there and find out who wanted him, dear or alive, and why.

As he started south on the road he reflected that this was the first time he had ever deliberately hunted trouble. Introspection awarded him this knowledge, during that last terrible flight on the lower Nueces and while he lay abed recuperating he had changed. A fixed, immutable, hopeless bitterness abided with him. He had reached the end of his rope. All the power of his mind and soul were unavailable to turn him back from his fate. That fate was to become an outlaw in every sense of the term, to be what he was credited with being—that is to say, to embrace evil. He had never committed a crime. He wondered now was crime close to him? He reasoned finally that the desperation of crime had been forced upon him, if not its motive; and that if driven, there was no limit to his possibilities. He understood now many of the hitherto inexplicable actions of certain noted outlaws—why they had returned to the scene of the crime that had outlawed them; why they took such strangely fatal chances; why life was no more to them than a breath of wind; why they rode straight into the jaws of death to confront wronged men or hunting rangers, viligantes, to laugh in their very faces. It was such bitterness as his that drove these men.

AIR POCKETS.

From the Indianapolis News.

In the early days of aviation, aviators took sudden falls for which could not account, they explained they had encountered an air pocket. the Smithsonian institution has in gated the peculiarities of the air found that there is no such thing air pocket as meant by aviators. pockets were thought to be either tial vacuums made by some peculiar the currents or accumulations of different from air that when the aero entered it could not accommodate to the new conditions quickly enough began to fall. It is not uncommon an aeroplane apparently to lose its on the air and suddenly fall 100 leaving the aviator as helpless as driver of a skidding automobile. modern methods of controlling the of aeroplanes were devised there many falls from this cause.

The Smithsonian Institution ments discarded the vacuum theory impossible for the simple reason under all conditions air in the same retains the same density. And it shown that a gas pocket could not because it would tend to mix with air. The impression that there holes in the air seems to have orig because of a sudden encounter with cataract which bore the machine ward. There are currents in the caused by the wind and different temperature, and some of these cur flow upward and downward, like tains or cataracts. In summer a wind which encounters a spot of earth which is warmer than the surr ing country—as, for instance, a d turns upward. An aviator may fly such a fountain, fly for some distan it, and then come to the edge. His chine immediately begins to drop if he gains control in time to save self he tells, when he reaches the that he ran into an air pocket. The of these fountains are sometimes s defined, so that an aviator may fly wing of his machine perilously tipp then believes that the downward has encountered a vacuum pocket. cataracts come from the currents follow the contour of the land.

A Universal Thought.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

The country, regardless of p creed, was united by a single thou cently when the news was flashed that Colonel Roosevelt had been suddenly ill. Until it became know there was nothing seriously the with him, thousands of people strange tugging in the same area region as that in which the colon fered. It necessary to attempt to formulate words the thought that was upper the public mind. It was not exp and will not be expressed, but it less real on that account. It has be that thoughts are things. This is ed when they are expressed. Here big, spontaneous thought that has quence of its own that springs fr fact that it was not expressed. friends of Colonel Roosevelt are h know that his slight indisposition even impaired his robust humor.

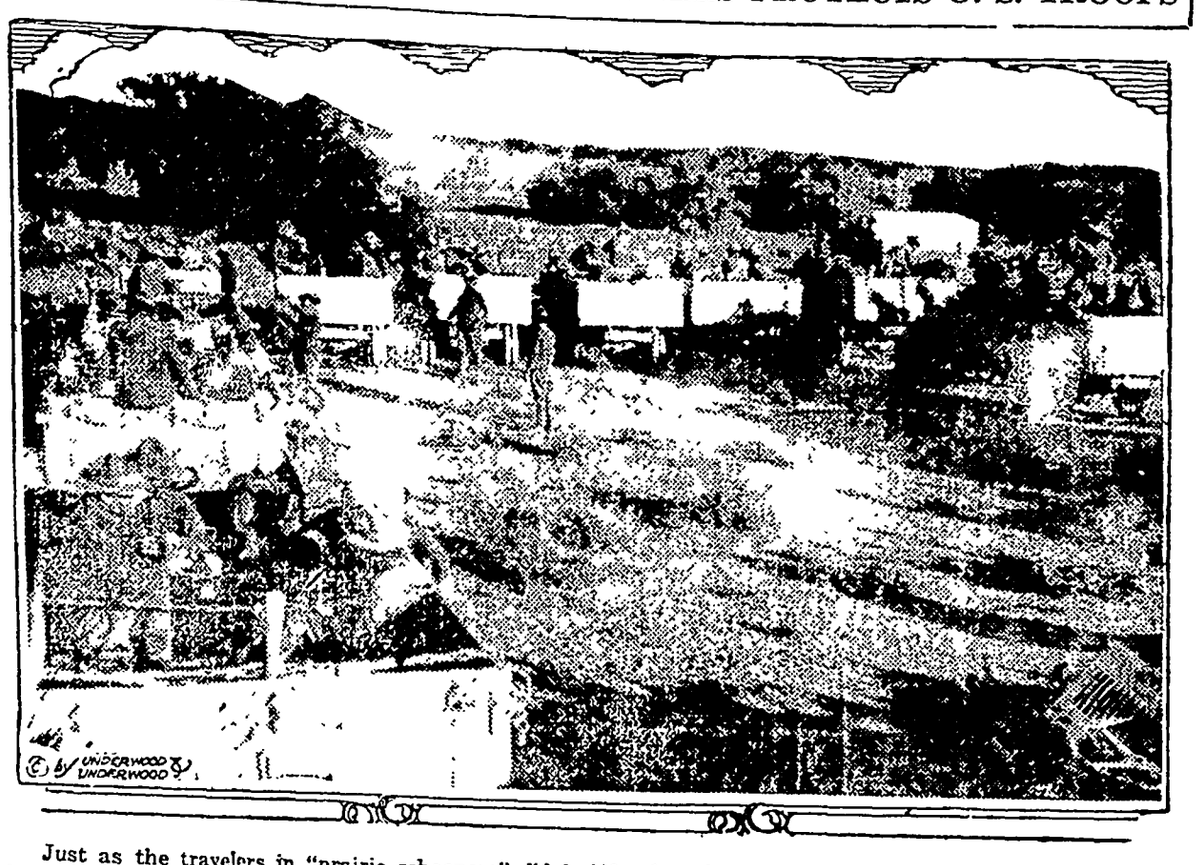
HOLLOW SQUARE OF PRAIRIE SCHOONERS PROTECTS U. S. TROOPS



Just as the travelers in "prairie schooners" did in '49, when the western frontier was anything but a safe place for a white man, the soldiers of Uncle Sam in Mexico take no chances on a surprise attack that might mean their death and the destruction of the supplies they are taking from the border to General Pershing's base in the interior. The photo shows the automobile trucks that traverse the desert from Columbus, N. M., to Pershing's camp, after having been arranged in hollow square formation, so that in the event of an attack the soldiers have a substantial protection from which to meet the enemy.
